The Year in Review

Sewers, Schools, Weather and the Village Lead the News in 1996

As Cohasset says goodbye to 1996, it's a good time to reflect on the past 12 months. It was a year of controversy over a new school, sewers, and where to put the Greenbush train station.

The weather wreaked havoc on Cohasset from record snowfall last winter to record rainfall in the fall.

Voters went to the polls for presidential primaries, town and state elections and for special override elections for a new school and shared-funding plan for north Cohasset sewers.

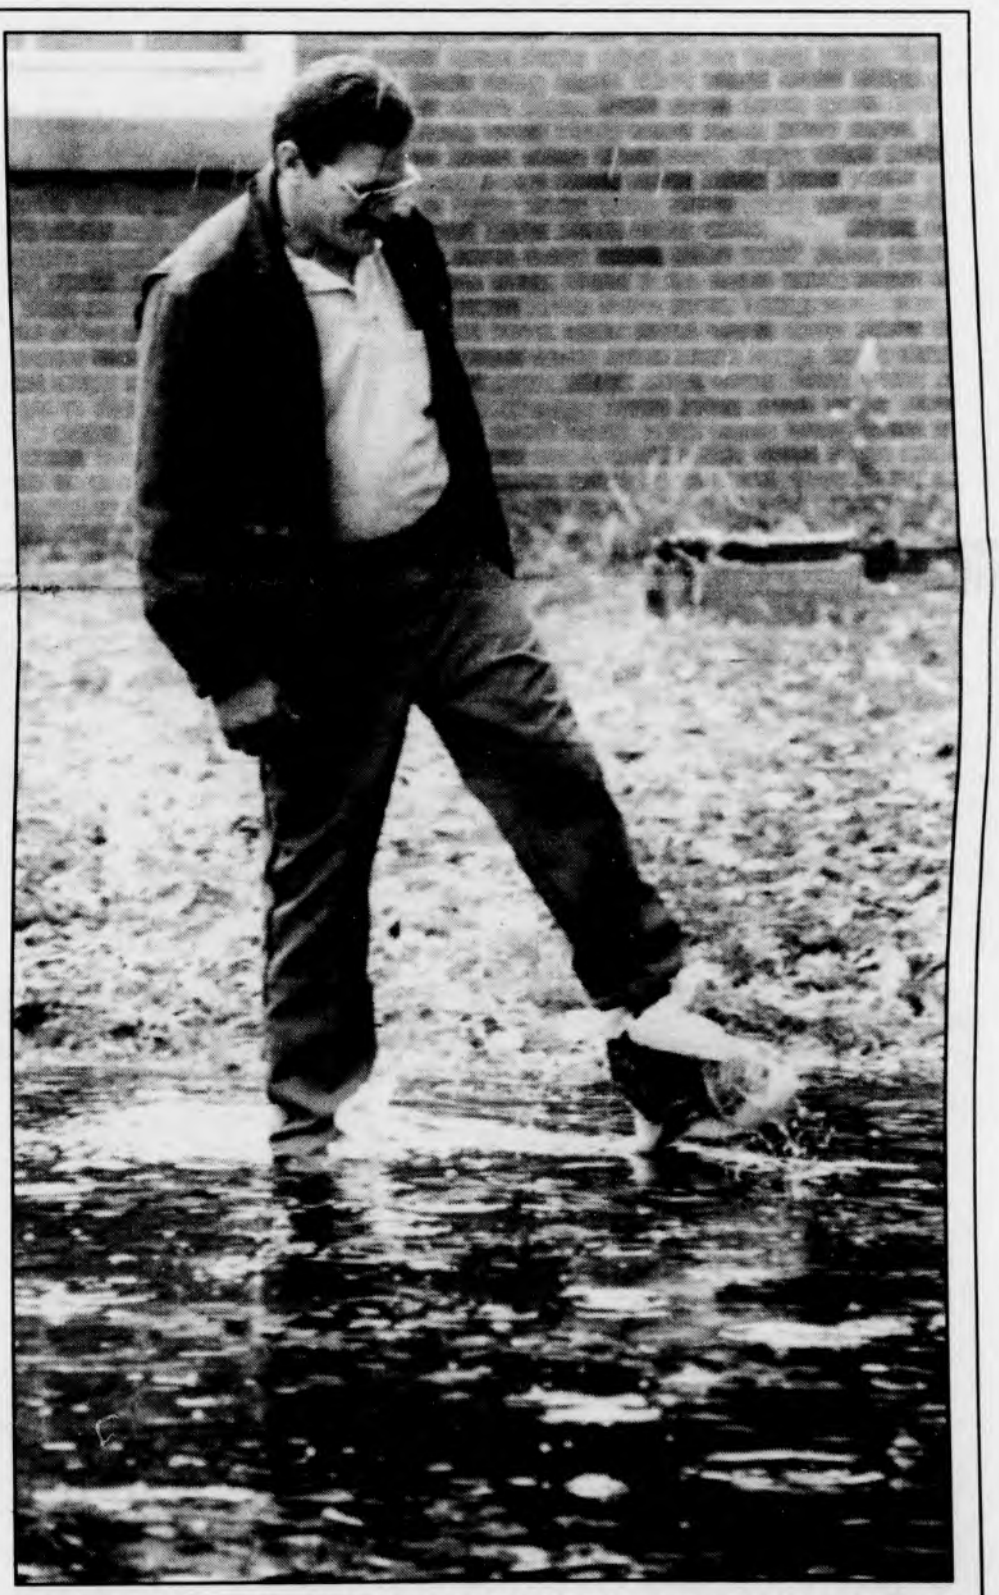
We gained two new selectmen, a new town counsel, and learned we'll lose our town administrator after eight years on the job.

So here's a look back with text, quotes and photos from stories that appeared in the Cohasset Mariner in 1996. But hold on to your hats and stay strapped in because we're sure that 1997 holds a lot for Cohasset. And here at the Cohasset Mariner, we promise to be there covering the news and bringing you the features and photos that you've come to expect.

JANUARY

A fire guts the Highland Avenue home of Peter and Maryanne Clougherty. The Cloughertys and upstairs tenant, Rick Curtis, escape unharmed from the burning house, but four Cohasset firefighters are injured, none seriously.

As the air fills with the first flakes of season's second snow storm, Cohasset has already exhausted the $45,000 set aside for its snow removal budget. The next week, the town is blanketed with 18 inches of snow.



Although it is cold outside, the election season heats up, as conservation commission chairman Roseanne McMorris and former advisory committee chairman Nan Roth say they will run for selectman. Selectman Jane Goedecke says she will not seek a third term.

Selectmen and the advisory committee hear plans for a new elementary school. The state will reimburse the town for 60 percent of the proposed $14 million school construction, an architect retained by the school committee tells officials.

'We need a new school now. Everyone should look into his head and his heart and do what is right for the children.'

— Dr. Robert Sceery, speaking at the special town meeting.

Later this month, the school building program is overwhelmingly approved at town meeting. Using paper ballots an overflow crowd votes 427 to 105 to support the project. Voters must approve a Prop. 2-1/2 debt exclusion override at the polls on Feb. 10 for the plans to go ahead.

Postal worker Richard Leach uses plastic bags as galoshes following the torrential rainfall last October than caused flooding in Cohasset village.

Home prices continue to climb in town. Fewer houses in Cohasset changed owners in 1995, but the average sale price has increased by more than $120,000 over the last four years. The average sale price in 1995 was $383,877, according to the Plymouth County Board of Realtors.

The Trustees of Reservations are negotiating the purchase of 55 acres of land at the top of Turkey Hill, that will link Whitney Woods and Wompatuck State Park and provide a spectacular view of Boston Harbor. Cohasset will be asked to appropriate funds to help purchase the property which lies between Hingham and Cohasset.

Selectmen meet in executive session to consider hiring a special counsel to represent the town in the upcoming site assignment hearings on the proposed expansion of Cohasset Heights Landfill. Two weeks later, the board of health convenes its first public hearing on the proposed 27.5 acre expansion. The hearings will be held every Tuesday and Thursday and are expected to last six weeks.

The Red Lion Inn, a Cohasset Village landmark, is sold to Carl Ackerblom of Ft. Lauderdale, Florida, for $300,000 at auction.

FEBRUARY

Although it won't make the snow go away any faster, state officials say Cohasset will receive assistance with its snow plowing expense. State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray says Cohasset will receive $12,805 from a supplemental budget approved to help towns that have exhausted their snow removal budgets.

Independent auditors, Tucci & Roselli, report that Cohasset is efficiently managed. Tony Roselli, a principal of the Lexington firm, tells selectmen he is pleased to see that officials have corrected various problems that he cited in past reports.

'I meet the minimum entry level criteria and should have been interviewed. I feel very strongly that the elected moderator should have been extended that courtesy. My application was trivialized.'

— George Marlette on not being interviewed for town counsel.

The Cohasset High gymnastics team wins the South Shore League title.

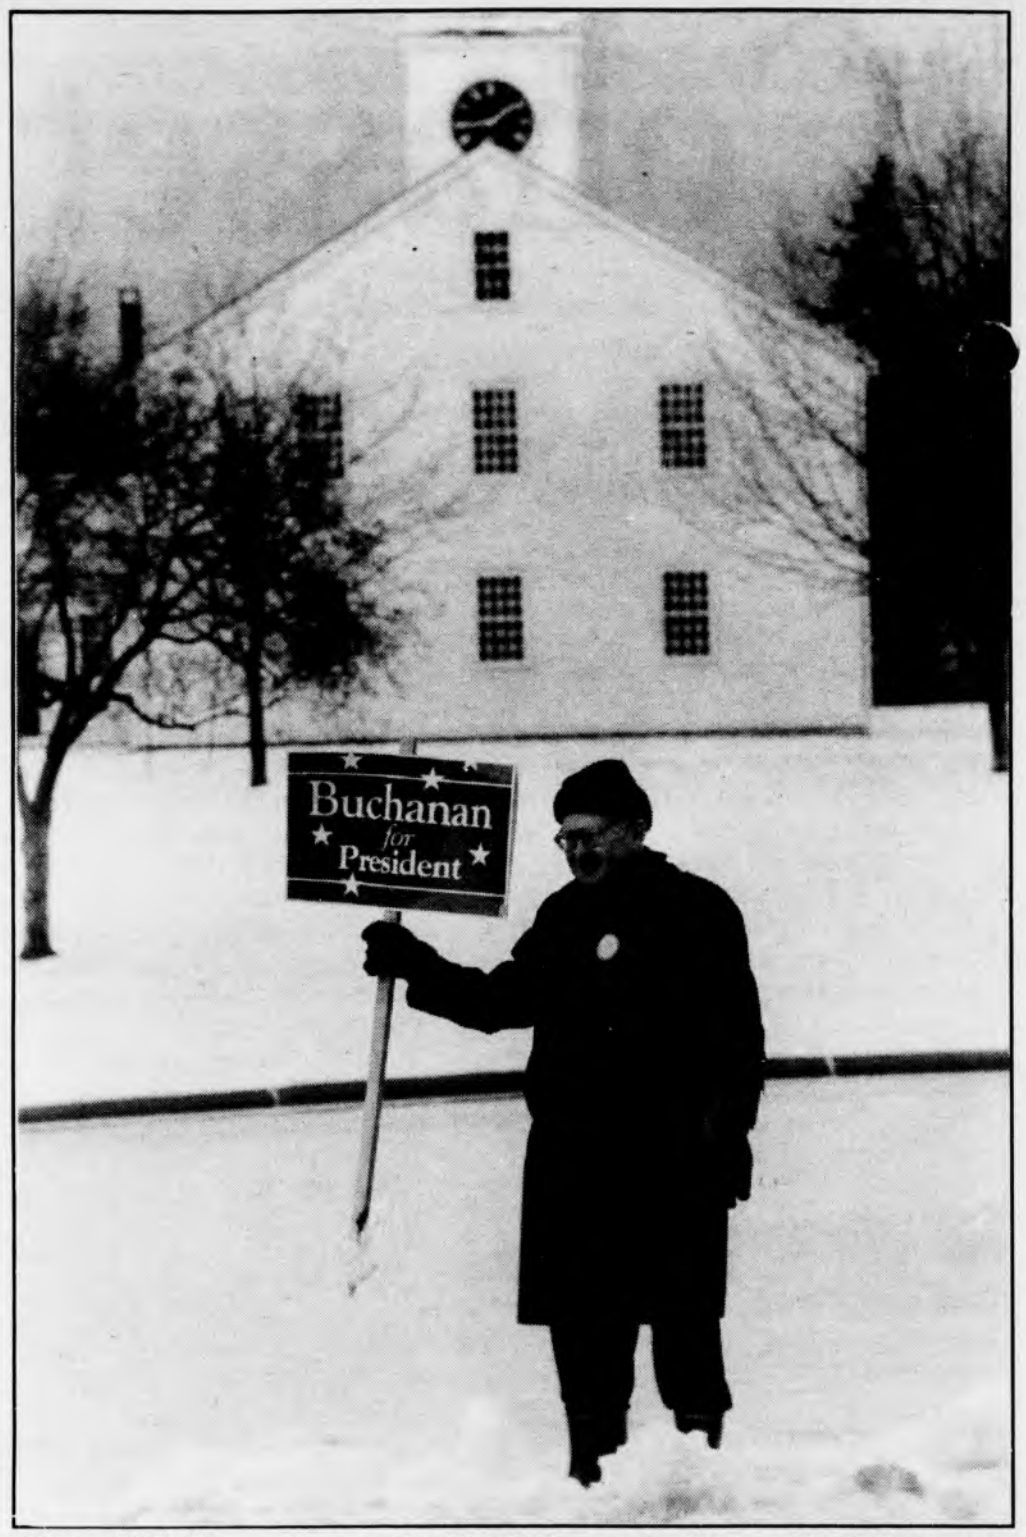
Various Cushing Plaza tenants get ready to relocate temporarily in preparation for the new Shaw's Supermarket that is planned for the property.

The school committee announces schools will go back to two vacation weeks next year. For educational reasons, the school committee unanimously voted in November (1994) to combine the February and April vacations into a single week in March, but lack of support in virtually very quarter convinced the board to switch back to the two-vacation model.

The photo finish in the Feb. 10 override doesn't make defeat any easier for the handful of school officials and citizens who stay until the final tallies are read. But the electorate had spoken and the $13 million new school project appears dead, at least for the time being. The vote is 1162 to 1134.

Concerned residents on Hingham water in north Cohasset launch a letter-writing campaign to local legislators and to the state Department of Public Utilities protesting the 164 percent water rate increase that Mass.-American Water Company wants to recoup the costs of constructing a $39.5 million water treatment plant in Hingham.

The state-appointed Citizens Advisory Committee, whose charge is to comment on the Greenbush environmental feasibility study, are warned to stay on task. Assistant Secretary Jan H. Reitsma of the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs tells the committee not to get sidetracked or disrupt committee meetings by looking into train alternatives.



Cohasset's political pot is reaching the boiling point as candidates rush to return nomination papers for the April 6 election. The biggest surprise is Robert V. Davenport's decision for file for selectman. He also took out and returned papers for reelection to the board of health on which he now serves. The state ethics commission has been asked whether he can run for both offices. If he cannot, or does not wish to run for both, he has until March 4 to decide.

Selectmen vote to sell the Victorian house on the Hagerty property if it will fetch at least $200,000. The matter now goes to town meeting, where voters will be asked to allow the selectmen to sell the former Cohasset Colonials furniture store.

Selectmen deny charges from town moderator George Marlette that he was purposefully excluded from consideration for the town counsel position.

Fourteen months after a winter storm plunged Cohasset into a dark Christmas, Eastern Edison reports that it has taken steps to prevent a repeat occurrence. Eastern Edison vice president Barbara Hassan outlines the steps the utility has taken since it was criticized by Cohasset residents and town officials following a storm that knocked out power for up to 48 hours on Christmas Eve, 1994.

Selectmen charge that environmental affairs secretary Trudy Coxe could have saved taxpayers a small fortune if she had ruled against the landfill expansion request last fall, instead of directing the board of health to hold expensive hearings on the issue. Staggered by the cost of fighting the expansion, angry selectmen say they'll send the bill to Gov. William Weld and other state officials.

MARCH

North Cohasset residents learn they may not be represented at the March 14 hearing on Massachusetts-American Company's proposed 164 percent rate hike before the state Dept. of Public Utilities. Selectmen do not file a petition to testify at the hearing in time.

Robert V. Davenport of Sohier Street decides to throw his hat into the ring for the selectman's race. The sitting board of health member will not seek re-election to that board because issues surrounding a possible conflict of interest regarding Cohasset Heights Landfill are not completely resolved. Four are running for two seats on the board of selectmen: Davenport, incumbent Martha Gjesteby, Nan Roth and Ronnie McMorris.

Selectmen unanimously pick the Boston law firm of Deutsch Williams Brooks DeRensis Holland & Drachman to serve as town counsel. Paul DeRensis, a partner in the firm, will handle the bulk of the legal business, while the other 40 attorneys at Deutsch Williams will help with various matters.

As predicted Bob Dole wins big with Republican voters in Cohasset in the March 5 primary. With 423 votes, Dole handily defeats Patrick J. Buchanan, who finished second with 101 votes and Steve Forbes, who was a close third with 96.

President Bill Clinton receives 168 votes, with challenger Lyndon H. LaRouche, Jr., getting nine.

For the second time in three months, voters will have the chance to consider a proposal for a new elementary school, as selectmen place the question on the March 30 town meeting warrant and on the April 6 election ballot. Selectmen stress the proposal is different from the earlier $13.9 million plan which sailed through town meeting, but was defeated by 28 votes at the polls. Voters will face a request for nearly $9.9 million for an elementary school to be located behind the Deer Hill School and a request for $180,000 for engineering money.

'We just never got into the groove.'

— Coach Ron Ford on the basketball team's defeat at the Fleet Center.

Winchester High is able to throw the Cohasset High boys basketball team off its game with a score of 68-51 at the Fleet Center ending the Div. 3 South Sectional champs' quest for the state title.

Sporting yellow "No Train" stickers, members of the anti-rail Coastal Coalition pack a selectmen's meeting which included a discussion with MBTA officials on ways to reduce the train's impact on Cohasset.

As landfill hearings enter their eighth week, health board members hear a geologist lecture on how bedrock fractures relate to ground water flow and hazards caused by contaminants. The remarks are challenged by the lawyer representing Cohasset Heights.

It's official, another record is broken this month when yet another snowstorm pushes the winter's total accumulation above the 100-inch mark. Mariner weather observer Bob Skilling puts the official snow accumulation at 105.8 inches, easily surpassing the 95.1 inches that set a record only two winters ago.

Although the contract won't expire until 1999, negotiations for cable TV service in town will begin soon, officials say.

Bulldozers will be a familiar sight at Cushing Plaza for the rest of the year as Shaw's Supermarkets breaks ground setting the stage for reconstruction of the Route 3A shopping center.

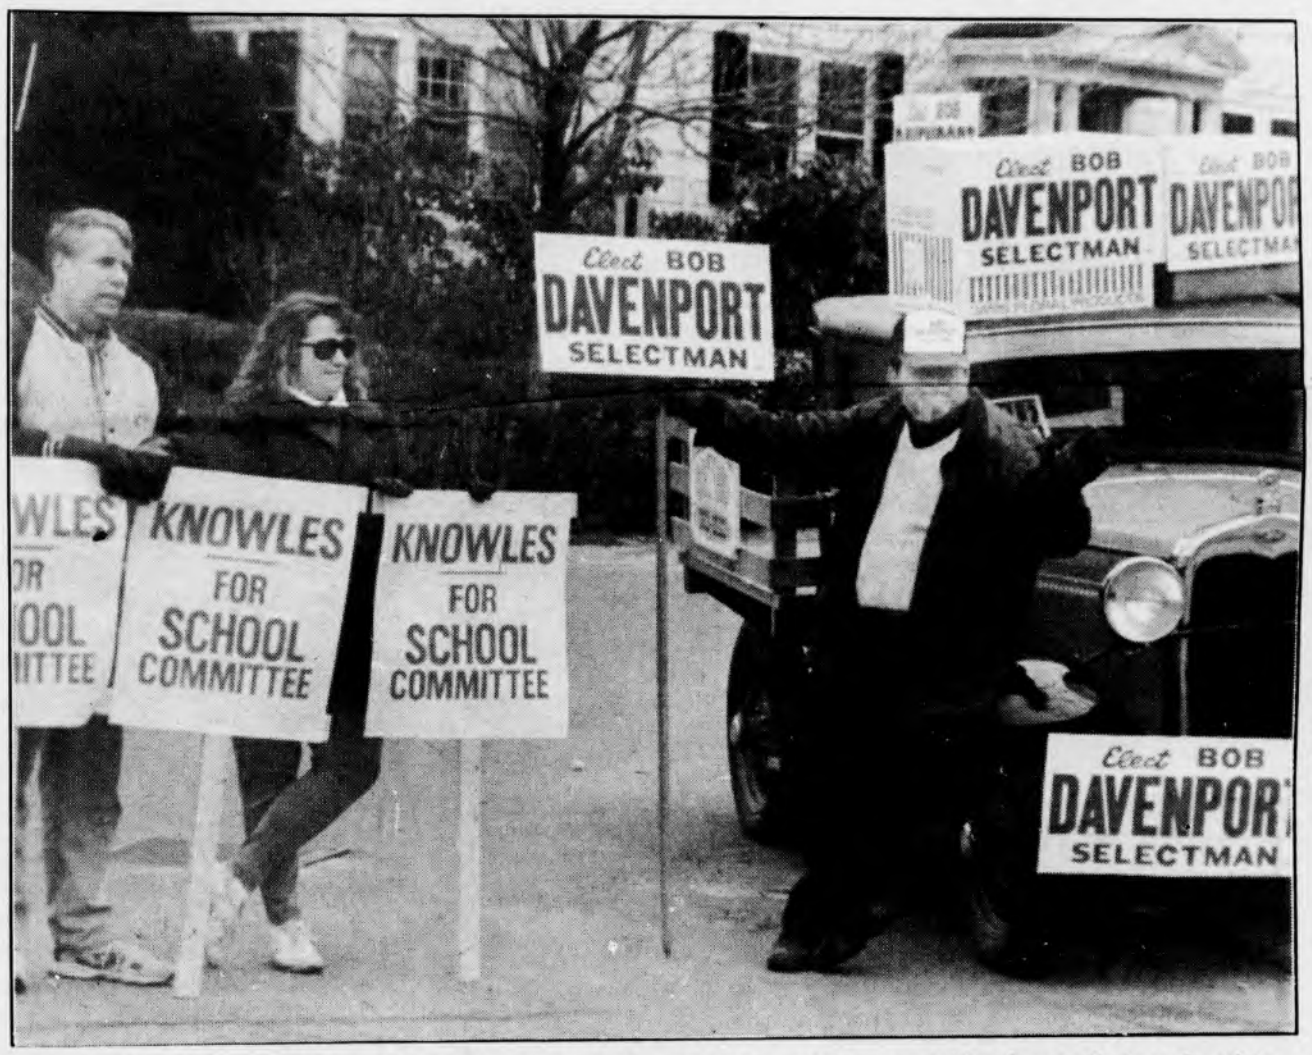
The police union charges selectmen with discrimination when they ask for an all-female civil service list and a strongly worked letter from the VFW suggests the town may be sued if what it calls "anti-veteran discrimination" persists.

A compromise in which the town will pick up half the betterment costs of installing sewers in the Straits Pond area — contingent on a successful Prop. 2-1/2 override — passes town meeting.

Town meeting authorizes spending $12,000 for obtaining professional services to assist in the preparation of an open space and recreational plan for the town. Town meeting also nixes selling the Hagerty house.

APRIL

A record-breaking town election unseats a long-time selectman and passes a Prop. 2-1/2 override for a new $9.9 million elementary school. Upwards of 62 percent of the town's registered voters participate in the election which featured six contested races for elected positions and a school ballot question.



Dr. Robert T. Sceery and his wife, Phoebe, are the guests of honor at the Cohasset Mariner Citizen of the Year reception at Kimball's by the Sea. Sceery, a pediatrician who has practiced in Cohasset for more than 40 years, was selected for the annual award in January.

We'll never compete with 3A. But we can create something down here that has energy, something that feels good.'

Cohasset Chamber of Commerce sponsors the meeting to address issues of concern including infrastructure, store vacancies, marketing the village as a place to shop and visit, and the impact of the train.

Local developer Wayne Sawchuk would like to build a senior citizen housing complex on seven acres in the so-called "Wolf Pit" area off the end of Beechwood Street near the town reservoir. Sawchuk meets with members of the Cohasset Housing Partnership to discuss the 28-unit condominium style housing proposal, 25 percent of which would be dedicated as affordable housing or elderly/handicapped.

The planning board does not support preliminary plans by Jerusalem Road Limited Partnership for the construction of a housing subdivision on a 45-acre tract of land off Jerusalem Rd.

The source of a whopping water main leak is discovered and plugged. The leak off Beach Street accounted for the loss of about 270 gallons per minute or 16,560 gallons per hour into the marsh.

The Hagerty Committee backs moving or razing the Victorian house on the property after the annual town meeting voted against selling the house and an 8,000-foot lot around it. Later this month, selectmen authorize the demolition or removal of the house, which once housed the showroom and offices of Cohasset Colonials, a furniture kit company. The town will solicit bids for the razing or removal of the house and ask for separate bids for the removal of the cutting room, a metal building which is the last of the factory structures at the site.

Close to 100 students, or 20 percent, participate in volunteer programs at the high school.

In the fall, Cohasset voters may be asked to consider giving the town's senior citizens a $5 credit toward their real estate taxes in exchange for each hour of work performed. After getting feedback from the Cohasset Elder Affairs board, selectmen may consider an article for special town meeting to set up the program.

A group of 30 local residents organize into a taxpayers group. Cohasset ConcernedTaxpayers made its official debut when it formed a ballot committee to formally protest the April 6 override for the $9.9 million elementary school.

MAY

The Little League season kicks off as the newly refurbished Barnes Field is unveiled.

Opponents of the proposed expansion of Cohasset Heights Landfill win a hard-fought victory with the health board's decision to deny the landfill's site assignment application, which was the next step in the approval process. But the owners of the private Route 3A landfill aren't willing to concede defeat and plan to appeal the ruling.

The Cohasset Mariner features David Lloyd Brown, the new director at the South Shore Art Center.

"This has the feel of $1 million being spent.'
—Town Counsel Paul DeRensis on Cohasset Heights legal bills.

An override asking for voters to split the cost of sewering north Cohasset fails, but those leading the push for the shared-funding proposal say they'll be back in the fall.

Cohasset's punch-card ballot system comes increasingly under fire of late because recent election results are close and there seems to be a high number of "blank" votes cast.

The school committee opts to stick with in-house school bus service. The decision requires the school committee to ask town meeting for two new buses in the fall.

The Army Corps of Engineers, responsible for the dredging of about 90,000 cubic yards of silt material in the harbor's channel, which is under federal jurisdiction, have raised questions about silt testing procedures and have suggested that more extensive and expensive testing may be required before the project can get underway.

New town counsel Paul DeRensis warns selectmen that legal costs surrounding Cohasset Heights Landfill are out of control. DeRensis fans last month's $40,000 in legal bills from the Boston law firm Warner & Stackpole in front of selectmen, the board of health and members of the Conservation Commission and says "this has the feel of $1 million being spent."

A new state revolving loan fund will make $30 million in long-term, low-interest loans available to towns, offering relief to those hardest hit by Title V septic system repairs, state officials say.

Friends and family say farewell to Sheldon Sladen, a lobsterman who died of drowning following a boating mishap.

Deer Hill School principal Donna Hartlage is on leave until school Supt. Stephen Hart completes his investigation about an incident at the school during which Hartlage allegedly slapped a student. Later this month, Hart suspends Hartlage without pay for 10 days.

An election law technicality could derail the recent school override if not resolved quickly. The town's bond counsel notifies selectmen that legislation would have to be passed validating the recent school vote before the $9.9 million in school bonds could be issued because the warrant for the April 6 town election did not contain mention of the Prop. 2-1/2 exemption ballot question as required by law. But at a state hearing later this month, the House Committee on Local Affairs decides that despite the posting oversight, voters were adequately informed about the school ballot question prior to the election through advertisements, mailings and extensive coverage in the local newspapers.

Herb Towle and Herb Jason are honored at "Herb Day" at the Lightkeeper's Residence on Government Island.

Cohasset pays tribute to its fallen heroes in its annual Memorial Day exercises. Raymond Buckley, a former prisoner of war, is the speaker of the day.

JUNE

The 200-page decision in the Massachusetts-American Water Company rate case is in and all but about ten percent of the water company's proposed 164 percent rate hike has been approved by the state Department of Public Utilities. The increase will affect homeowners in north Cohasset who are served by Hingham water.

The governor validates Cohasset's April 6 school override vote by signing a special bill approved by both houses in the state legislature. The incident prompts selectmen to draft a checklist of election posting procedural steps to be followed before town meetings and elections to ensure there are no more problems.

Cohasset High graduates 78 under the familiar canopy of the South Shore Music Circus.

Just a year after celebrating his 75th birthday and 50th anniversary as a priest, the Rev. John Keohane, who served as St. Anthony's pastor before retiring last summer, has died. Keohane was stricken with a heart attack while practicing his golf shots at Seabury Golf Course in Mashpee on May 31.

'Be proud of yourself and every person sitting around you — savor every moment of this day.'
— Tafana Fiore, salutatorian of the CHS Class of 1996.

School officials announce that Donna Hartlage, Deer Hill School principal, won't be returning to the school as principal. Hartlage had been suspended without pay for allegedly slapping a student at the school. Saying the matter was in the hands of attorneys, Supt. Stephen Hart would not elaborate on why he has taken the further step of removing the $60,000 per year administrator from her post.

As part of an ongoing village revitalization effort, spearheaded by the Chamber of Commerce, plans are in the works to host a weekly farmers' market in the village.

The Mariner features retiring Osgood teacher Faith Bowker Maloney.

The annual Festival on the Common draws thousands from across the South Shore. The weather was first-rate and so was a healthy sampling of arts, crafts and entertainment for all.

Phase II of Cohasset's water main replacement project is proceeding on schedule, with new pipes now being laid on Sohier Street.

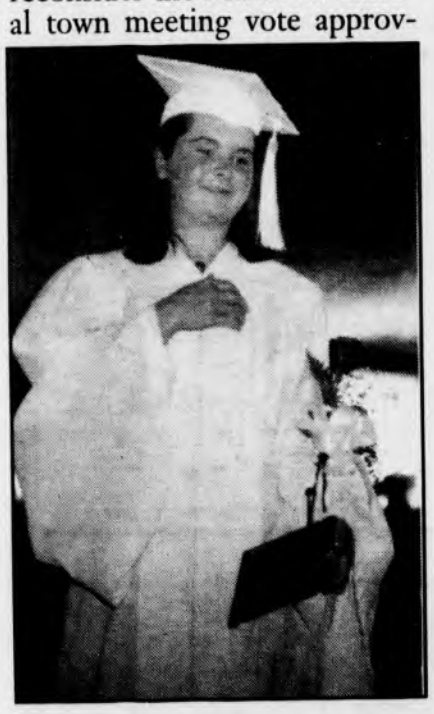
The open space committee mails surveys out to all residents the results of which will help the committee prepare an open space plan.



Coyote sightings are on the upswing in town. Several residents report seeing coyotes in their yards and a police cruiser recently struck a coyote as it darted across Route 3A.

Residents' concerns are aired in a walk-through of the new school site behind the Deer Hill School. The conservation commission and design review board comment on the school plans.

JULY

As America gears up for "The Games" this summer in Atlanta — Cohasset can be proud of its own Olympic heritage. Ellery H. Clark Sr., who lived at 262 Jerusalem Rd., won two first-place medals at the revival of the ancient Olympic games in Athens in 1896. And luckily for posterity, Ellery took along his Kodak camera and kept a personal journal of his experiences. Two of Clark's grandchildren, William Clark and Vicki Clark Widner, are telling his story in a tour of cities across the country.

Five hundred citizens, led by Cohasset Concerned Taxpayers, call for a special town meeting next month to reconsider the March 30 annual town meeting vote approving the $9.9 million elementary school.

The remnants of Hurricane Bertha drench Cohasset with more than 3-1/2 inches of rain. This sets a new record for the single wettest July day, surpassing the 3.2 inches measured on July 12, 1981.

Representatives from Cohasset, Hingham and Scituate meet with the MBTA for a workshop on noise and vibration, two of the most adverse effects that the train will have on homes and businesses that abut the 17.7 mile long Greenbush right of way.

Hoping to avoid a second special town meeting, selectmen vote to include an article on the Aug. 12 special town meeting warrant which moves the site of the new school to next to the Deer Hill School. Some abutters on Old Pasture Road say the current location of the proposed new school is too close to their property.

AUGUST

Police seek criminal charges in Quincy District Court against John Lennon of Surry Drive who hosted a graduation party where minors allegedly were served alcohol. Police began investigating the June 22 party after an alcohol-related crash claimed the life of one of the guests, 18-year-old Gregory Smith of Marshfield.

Selectmen say the town will not subsidize a baby-sitting service for parents who would like to attend town meeting but have no problem with the school department allowing Deer Hill School to be used as a baby-sitting site.

'We are determined to lift 100 percent of the betterment off the neighbors.'

— Peter Pratt on taxpayers sharing cost of installing sewers.

Despite rainy weather, the first farmers' market in the village draws about 150 people.

After two years of planning, Cohasset High's brand-new football/athletic facility will have its official ribbon cutting on Sept. 8, organizers announce.

Sandwiched between show nights featuring the brass band "Tower of Power" and a jazz event called "A Night in New Orleans", Cohasset's planned new $9.9 million elementary school is the main attraction at the special town meeting at the Music Circus. After nearly an hour of spirited debate which followed 1-3/4 hours of formal presentations, voters endorse the new school by nearly a 2-1 margin on the first night of the special town meeting.

PLAYING COWBOY, ARGENTINA-STYLE

The life of the cowboy (and girl!) in America may be experienced mainly through books and film these days, but that legendary lifestyle still thrives in rural Argentina. Especially in the northwestern province of Salta, gauchos still practice their art on sprawling estancias, or ranches. In recent years, many wealthy estancieros (ranchers) have expanded their operations to include guest houses. Like some of their counterparts in the European aristocracy, they have discovered that opening their often-lavish homes to visitors enables them to share their proud heritage – and keep up with the costs of maintaining family estates in the modern global economy. In addition to the warm hospitality, the draw of such estancias is that visitors can get a glimpse of authentic working ranches, rich in the traditions of Spanish colonial days.

At SCITUATE HARBOR TRAVEL, we have a world-class staff of travel agents who are highly experienced and knowledgeable regarding all facets of travel. And they aren't just "order takers" who quote the numbers but leave out the personal touch. Let our professionals send you on your way – to Argentina, on a cruise, around the world, or to your next business meeting. AROUND TOWN/Sallyann Chatterton

Happy New Year! It sure has been quite a year for our town, making lots of folks happy, some not so thrilled. The Paul Pratt Library had a banner year, getting a lot of things that have been needed for years – lighting in the rotunda to highlight the McIvor Reddie murals that were restored by funding from the Pilgrim Cooperative Bank (the lights came from Shirley and Jim Marten), an Apple Computer for the children's room, along with a CD Rom collection, more books, all family passes are renewed – all of these things made possible through the Friends of the Cohasset Library! Be sure that you support their next fund raising project; better still, drop them a check right now, while you think of it: Friends of the Cohasset Library, 106 South Main Street, Cohasset, 02025. Don't forget, it is tax deductible!

Gary Vanderweil, Larry Shultz, Wayne Sawchuk and Clark Chatterton saw Alumni Field become a reality, as did all the players who used it and parents who watched their athletes compete – that made lots of dreams come true. Now they are "wrapping things up" by selling bricks for the walkway going up to the bleachers. A great way to have your name in lights, or anyone else that you can think of whom you want to immortalize! Give any one of those gents a call for more information.

Zinnia's Cafe ended a good year by having Santa there for breakfast – did you know that Zinnia's will put on a high tea for you, or any private function? Reservations of course, but what fun! They also serve dinner on Friday eves! Call 383-9466 for more information.

That brings to mind Peter and Judy Kulturides, who sold the Log and Line after being there for 25 years – so many people have so many memories connected with the Log and with them. While we all wish Peter and Judy the best, we do the same to the Log's new owner, who is doing a wonderful job with it! He also offers a nice menu, and is open for supper – call for more information.

We also found out just how important the Carousel is to all of us – it has been closed since the flood in the fall. But, Norma, Mandy and Tom say that it will be better than ever when it reopens. We cannot wait for that day!

The students at Osgood are a happy lot – they will have their new school to look forward to. The sad part of that is that Mrs. Price is retiring at the end of this year, so one of their finest teachers won't be teaching there – but, everyone knows she won't be far away and always will be willing to help!

The town will start a new program to encourage more recycling, hopefully saving $15,000 in the process. The idea is that we buy trash bags with the average family using one per week at $1 per bag. Hopefully it will work!

People also had losses, it's really sad, and hard to deal with during happy holiday times! There are those, in the midst of their pain, who think of others – JoAnn Pilczak comes to mind. She recently sent a donation in her late Dad's name to the Cohasset Varsity Hockey Team. She said one of her father's greatest pleasures was to watch his grandsons play hockey, and that it would please him to support his grandsons' activities.

We heard from lots of former Cohassetites this season. Kit Megathlin and his wife, Sue, are both doing real well, but had a rough summer. Sue had shoulder surgery for a torn rotator cuff and arthritis, and Kit had heart problems. All are well, they are now fine and loving being grandparents (all three sons are married with sons of their own!).

Carol Gates sent wonderful holiday greetings, hopefully she'll be around town during these holidays – the list goes on, we will try to remember a few each week – it is fun, and it is also amazing how many people really care about us and still love our town!

We welcome the new, love what we already had, and miss those we have lost – and hope that the New Year brings you all that you want. Here's to health, happiness and love for all of our readers!

Happy New Year!

How to get a solid annual review at work

By the editors of WORTH MAGAZINE

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

Executives who subscribe to magazines such as Compensation & Benefits Review like to say that their annual employee reviews benefit workers. Many bosses say they provide valuable feedback that can build a more rewarding career.

That may be true, but those employees who'll be sitting down with their bosses for their annual review during the coming months should know that the motives behind them aren't entirely altruistic. Employers have found that a more formal and diligent review process often can lead to higher productivity — and improved bottom-line results.

For instance, a 1994 survey of 437 large publicly traded companies by the benefits-consulting firm Hewitt Associates in Washington, D.C., found that companies that aggressively manage employee performance deliver faster sales growth and higher returns to shareholders than firms that don't. "Companies with performance management produced better results with fewer people," the study found. Not surprisingly, performance-management strategies are especially critical at troubled companies. The Hewitt study found that struggling companies that adopted performance-management methods posted a 25 percent average increase in productivity.

"Employee reviews used to involve checking items off a list of things, like your appearance and your attitude," says Robert Greene, spokesman for the human-resources consulting firm James & Scott Associates in Chicago. "Now they focus on the results you're getting at your job."

But if employers are taking these reviews more seriously, then it only stands to reason that employees should, too. More is at stake than ever before — including, possibly, whether you keep your job at all. Moreover, if your boss ultimately expects you to deliver more than you have in the past, then why not try to use the review process to make sure that you get something in return, such as a raise or promotion?

The lesson here: it pays to take your annual review seriously. A little preparation, and some common sense, can make all the difference between a positive outcome or a poor one. Also, consider these pointers from management and career consultants:

Get advance feedback. A good employer should provide regular feedback about how workers are doing their job and what criteria will be used to evaluate them. Is it sales? New accounts? Productivity measures such as costs per employee in your department? Or just the overall work quality? Don't count on getting a memo about this — it's often up to workers to ask. Do it today. Chances are a boss or supervisor will be impressed and will offer helpful tips to improve your standing at the firm before the next review rolls around.

Assess strengths and weaknesses. Before the review, draw up a list of concrete contributions you've made throughout the year and get set to account for mistakes that might come up. Maintain written records of accomplishments, and keep copies of congratulations and glowing e-mail and memos as backup. For mistakes, a list of excuses won't help, but it's fair to mention factors such as an industry slump that affected results. Analyze problems and suggest solutions, such as more frequent communication with certain colleagues. "The key is to think these problems through in an honest and systematic way before the interview," says James Goodale, a senior partner at Philbrook, Goodale Associates, a Houston management-consulting firm.

Be realistic. Before the review, ask yourself: Am I the most valuable employee in my department? Somewhere in the middle? Near the (gulp) bottom? Then ask your manager or human-resources representative about the average size of raises, which may boost or lower your expectations. For example, if a company raises salaries by 4.3 percent annually, the office star can't expect a 15 percent pay hike. But 6 percent might be reasonable. "One woman at a client's firm had a good review and a good raise that was near the upper end of the company's limits, but the money wasn't what she expected — so she burst into tears on the spot," says Joan Courtney of Murray Associates, a career-development consultant in Westwood, Mass. "This didn't help her relationship with her boss."

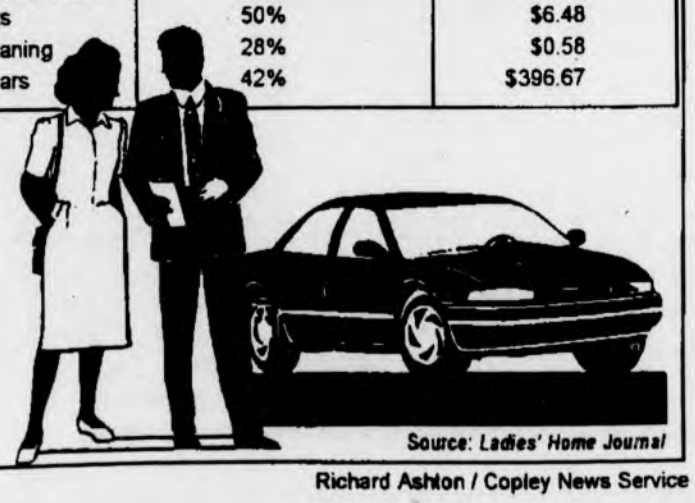
Try to have accomplishments incorporated into the final review report. "Give a copy (of contributions you made) to your boss," says Courtney. "Most managers will find that helpful."

'Employee reviews used to involve checking items off a list of things, like your appearance and your attitude. Now they focus on the results you're getting at your job.'

Robert Greene
James & Scott Associates, Chicago

Talk about the future. Mention specific career goals and plans for realizing them. If the review goes well, seize the opportunity to ask for more responsibility. You're more likely to get a quick okay if you ask for a specific job or role.

Stay cool. If a poor review catches you off guard, be calm. "It's okay to show surprise and concern, but don't get emotional," says Courtney. "Tell your boss you need time to collect your thoughts."



Firms often ask employees to sign a written copy of their review, but ask for time to consider doing so if it's negative. You may be able to convince your boss that you had a better year than he thinks you did. Then you can ask him to change the written review that goes into your record — where it might be read during your firm's next restructuring.

The Old Man and the Kid

The sash was tattered and frayed and so badly faded that he could barely discern the figures "1996" across his sunken chest. In a moment, he could take it off for the first time in 366 days. It would be over. Good riddance!

The kid, as usual, was right on time, bounding through the door at the stroke of midnight as the last grains of sand ran out and the hourglass tilted anew. His face had a fresh-scrubbed look and the "1997" on his sash gleamed with newness.

"Hi, pops, I thought you'd be gone by now," he said. His cockiness and enthusiasm irritated the old man.

"You know the rules," he said. "We have to stay to the bitter end. Pass the baton to the next runner, as it were."

"Here I am," said the kid. "You can run along now, pops."

"Don't you want to check my log, see how things went on my watch, get some ideas for yours?" asked the old man.

"Suppose I might as well," said the kid, opening the big book on the table, "see how badly you screwed up."

"I did some things right," said the old man defensively.

"You call this right?" said the kid. "Look. Bombs in Northern Ireland. Fighting in Bosnia. Tens of thousands of Hutus and Tutsis dead in Rwanda. Hostages in Peru. I guess those are the first things I'll have to straighten out."

The old man peered at the kid closely to see if he was serious and decided that he was.

"The Israelis and the Arabs are still talking," he suggested hopefully.

"I'll have to hurry that along," said the kid, making notes on a fresh page in a new log book.

"And Joe Kennedy is negotiating peace in Ireland."

"Well, that's a start, anyway," said the kid. "What were you planning for the Hutus and the Tutsis?"

"Er ... nothing," mumbled the old man.

"Let's see, now," said the kid, dashing off an idea in his log book, "we'll start with a UN peacekeeping mission and then ... then what?"

The old man started to say something and then stopped. I guess every generation has to learn for itself, he thought.

"You'll think of something," he said gently. "At least I got us through the elections. Clinton-Dole, Kerry-Weld, Delahunt-Johnston and all that."

"You sure made a mess out of that last one," said the kid. "And look what you left me with, a Democratic president and a Republican Congress. What can I do with that?"

"You'll think of something."

"Maybe I'll shut down the government for a while," mused the kid. "That'll learn them. Or maybe I'll...."

The old man glanced at the hourglass. It was down to the last few grains of sand. Only seconds remained.

"What would you do?" asked the kid, frowning as his eyes followed the old man's gaze to the hourglass. He sensed what was about to happen.

"Hey, wait a minute," he cried. "You can't...."

The old man smiled.

Three ... two ... one ... and he was gone.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Thank You for a Job Well Done!

Dear Chief:

On Friday night, Dec. 20, at approximately 10 p.m., I received a troubling telephone call from my 12-year-old daughter, Ashley, stating that, at the North Main Street house where she was babysitting a 3- and 1-year-old, a heavy translucent film was beginning to fill the downstairs, causing an eye-burning sensation accompanied by noticeable breathing difficulty. After some brief instructions and a call to the Cohasset Emergency dispatch, I rushed to the site.

Upon arrival, I found the home filled with an obnoxious, throat-closing odor due apparently to a malfunctioning furnace. My daughter and I removed the two alarmed babies to the safety of my vehicle outside. It was at that point the Cohasset Emergency System arrived and kicked into impressive motion, with Police Officer Jeffrey Treanor, Captain Mark Trask and a complete complement of the Cohasset EMT force.

After a brief deliberate, informative assessment by two of your EMTs/firemen, Jim Curley and Paul McGaffigan, the four of us were transported via ambulance to the South Shore Hospital for further remedial treatment. This ride over, which could have been terrifying for Charlie, Kyle and Ashley, was made comfortable and non-threatening by the professional, calming demeanor of the EMTs. The extent of their training and expertise was demonstrated profoundly. Equally, the treatment received by the staff at South Shore Hospital was quick, efficient, warm and attentive. Gratefully, in the early morning of Dec. 21, all were released, tired and emotionally drained, but otherwise healthy.

Although I consider my daughter Ashley a true heroine under these described circumstances, I would like you to please extend my personal gratitude to Captain Trask and all the fine response team of that evening. It was only through their experience and intervention that a tragedy was truly averted. Additionally, your personal follow-up the next day further demonstrated how benefitted we all are to reside in a community where care and concern exceed the legal mandates.

Fortunately, due in large part to your fine organization, we will all be able to enjoy a very happy, healthy and joyous Christmas '96 with what matters most on earth — our families!

Thank you, God bless and happy holidays to all at the Cohasset Police, Fire and EMT station — another job "well done."

Daniel C. Leahy
215 Forest Ave.

Editor's note: Mr. Leahy provided a copy of his letter to Fire Chief Roger Lincoln and the Mariner for publication.

On-Site Septic Plan is Challenged

To the Editor:

The citizens of the town of Cohasset are being pushed by its Board of Health to put in place a Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) program of on-site septic systems inspection which has not been adopted voluntarily by a single one of the 351 cities and towns across the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The citizens of the town have been told in a health board circular that we are under a court mandate to put such a program in place in 1997. That is untruthful. Nowhere in the "Amended Final Judgment" signed Nov. 3, 1994* — the basis for this assertion — can such a stipulation be found or inferred, and inferences have no legal bearing in court orders. Furthermore, incredibly, the two health board members present at the Dec. 10 meeting (Chairman Tom Cook and Alix White) admitted that, in fact, they have NEVER read the "Amended Final Judgment."

The citizens of Cohasset have been told by its Board of Health in a circular that they should attend five public meetings and workshops "to develop a plan" and "let your thoughts be known." A SHAM! In fact, a consulting firm hired by the health board, SEA Consultants, Inc. in Cambridge is writing a plan for presentation to Cohasset citizens just before the March town meeting. And in order to even be considered for the highly touted state funds of $3,000,000 or $500,000 a year for six years, the Cohasset plan must adhere to the rigid "minimum requirements for such plans necessary for obtaining the required DEP approval, 'including mandated inspections' at least once every seven years by a system inspector approved by the Department." (DEP document "dated Oct. 17, 1996").

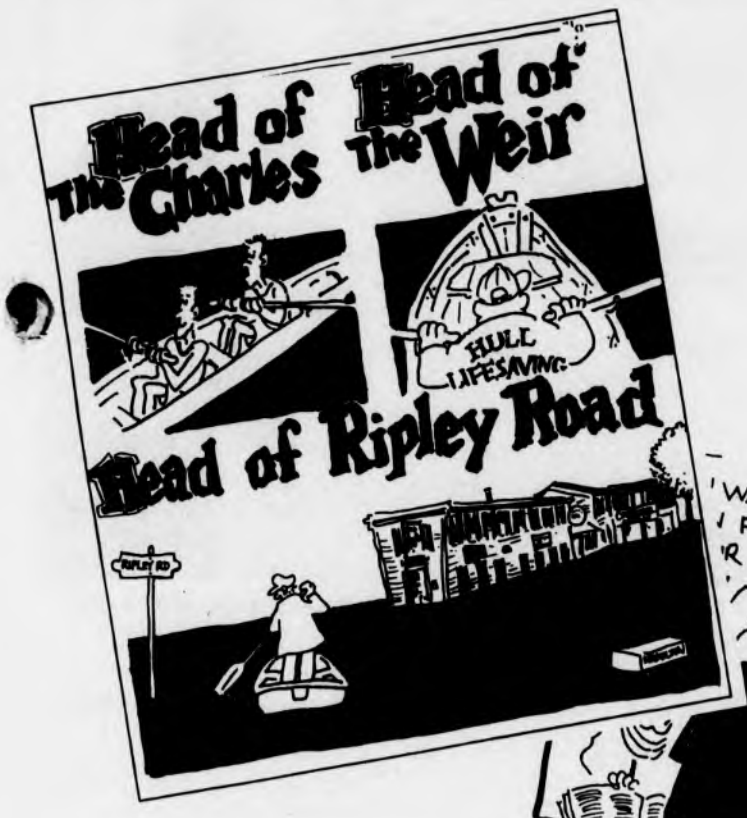
The Chairman of Cohasset's health board was asked at the Dec. 10 meeting what his position would be if a majority of the citizens at the meetings voted "NO PLAN." His response, "I don't know, guess I'd have to think about it." So much for citizen wishes in his view of democracy. The great Lincoln would weep! Guess Mr. Chairman forgot Lincoln's view of democratic government which millions of our fellow citizens have died defending: "government of the people, by the people, and for the people."

The health board tells us that 60 percent of the town will have on-site septic systems after the proposed sewering is completed and that ONLY 30 percent of the inspected systems will fail. In fact, according to the Chairman of the Board of Selectmen in the Town of Essex, Massachusetts (a town north of Gloucester) the failure rate his town is experiencing under this plan, which Essex had rammed down its throat by DEP, is 53 percent. Cohasset's failure rate would likely be 45-55 percent — not 30 percent. Another untruth exposed.

Ed Neal, Chairman of the Board of Selectmen in Essex stated in a 1-1/2 hour telephone conversation with this writer that it would be stupid and financial suicide for any town to voluntarily adopt this program. He said, "The monetary carrot is not a big enough carrot to make it financially attractive."

It is for these reasons — and several others not enumerated here — that the Cohasset Sewer Commission and the Cohasset Board of Selectmen should disassociate themselves from this proposal now by publicly announcing by vote its intention to ask for an indefinite postponement of any town warrant article proposing such a program currently under consideration by the Board of Health.

Such postponement would give Cohasset homeowners at least some modest measure of relief from the extreme anxiety and anger being created by this outrageous proposal.



In addition, I urge all citizens to attend the next health board meeting scheduled for Tuesday, January 7 at Town Hall at 8 p.m. or watch the proceedings on Channel 3. We must state again and again to the health board of Cohasset that we want "NO PLAN." The time to express your views to the Health Board and every other town official is NOW! By the March 29 town meeting it may be too late.

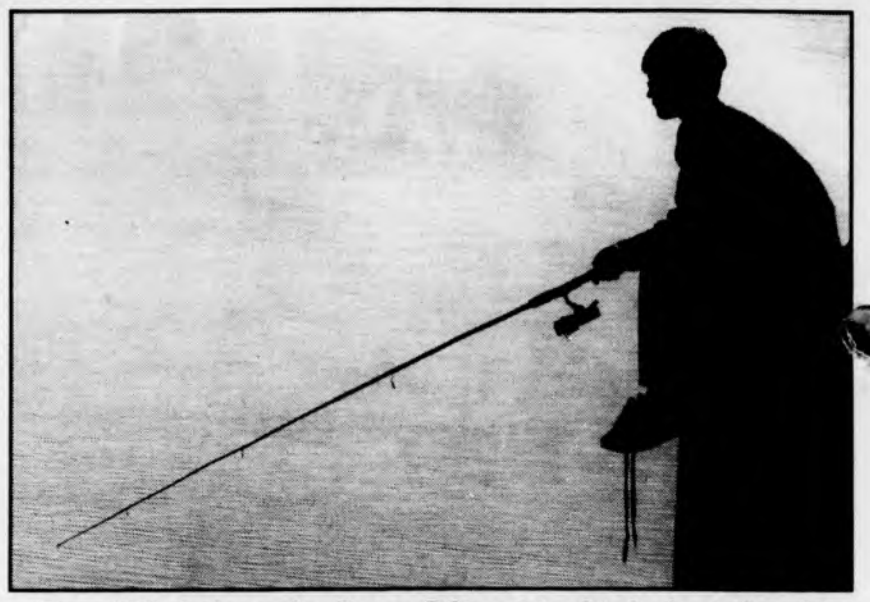
Many residents flock to the official opening ceremonies of Alumni Field on Sept. 8.

Water quality problems continue to plague north Cohasset residents. With 100-year-old pipes bringing water to 300-plus homes served by Mass.-American Water Company, residents say they are having to pay too much for an inferior product.

The former Webb-Norfolk Conveyor site on Route 3A is back on the market. Owners hope to sell the 62-acre property for $3.8 million.

A recount in the Sept. 17 primary is possible because there was less than one half of one percent difference between the votes cast for Phil Johnston and Bill Delahunt. But Johnston, a former state representative, wins handily in Cohasset with 275 votes to 107 for Delahunt.



Supt. Stephen Hart says Cohasset's school buses are safe after the Registry of Motor Vehicles sidelines the fleet for various repairs. Later in the month, the school department says it will seek an investigation on the Registry's handling of the matter which turned into a media event.

Government Island could be used as the site for dewatering silt that is dredged from Cohasset harbor, officials announce.

OCTOBER

Debate over the possibility of a village train station heats up with a group of concerned citizens calling for a vote on the matter. Stepping back from their previous support of a village station, selectmen say they need more information about increased traffic and parking before deciding whether to back that site rather than the one proposed for Route 3A.

Cohasset could be a "whistle-free" town if the MBTA's proposed grade crossing plans are used for restored commuter rail service, the town learns. The MBTA explains that some towns have successfully imposed whistle bans to lessen noise and state legislation has allowed the bans.

A Harvest Festival is held in the village as part of the revitalization effort.

More coyote and deer sightings are reported in town.

Under the requirements of a new law, Cohasset police now have a registry of three convicted sex offenders who live in town.

Water rate payers in north Cohasset reach the boiling point over their water bills. Selectman Peter Pratt suggests a solution might be an eminent domain action against Massachusetts-American Water Company. Later this month, town officials plot a rate-attack strategy with Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci and dozens of angry residents from Hingham, Hull and Cohasset march on the statehouse.

'It's a community problem, a cultural problem — I'd rather not point fingers but sit down together to see what we can do as a community, schools, family.'

The drug & alcohol committee is devising a petition to circulate around town to unite the community in stopping the illegal purchase and use of drugs and alcohol by minors and the illegal distribution of those substances by adults to minors.

Over objections from Russ Bonetti of Parker Avenue, selectmen will allow the yacht club to continue to store some of its floats on the Hagerty property this winter.

Nancy Buckley of Hingham, a anti-rail activist, launches a sticker campaign to unseat state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray.

As the town pulls together to battle the worst flood in memory which damages 50-to 60 homes and businesses, town officials realize the town's drainage problems must be addressed in their totality to avert a future disaster. The record-breaking nor'easter dumps more than 8-1/2 inches of rain in town, proving too much for James Brook. The excess water backs up into the village and surrounding streets.

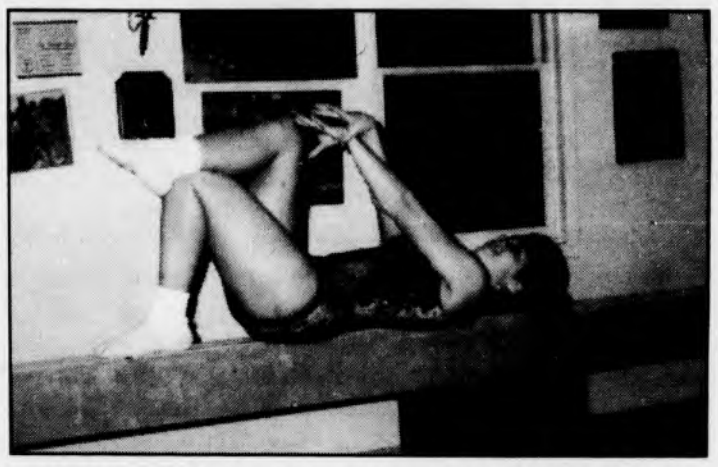
Alumni Field Heads Cohasset in Right Direction

Hoopsters, Gymnasts Continue to Impress in '96

By Joe Reardon
COHASSET MARINER

More often than not, the Cohasset High sports scene heats up during the coldest months of the year. And with three of the four most reliable teams in action, 1997 should get off to a rocking good start.



When the weather warms up again, you can expect to see your favorite spring teams playing on new fields, tennis courts and an all-weather track.

The opening ceremonies were finally held for Alumni Field in September, marking a new era in Cohasset sports. Gone are the days of the track team practicing in the high school parking lot and holding its "home" meets at Scituate High. The track is arguably the best in the South Shore League and should help push the Skipper tracksters to new personal best records.

The boys basketball team had its problems during the regular season last winter, but once the tournament arrived the Skippers moved their game up a notch and won their second consecutive Division 3 South Sectional title against Rockland. It was then on to the FleetCenter for Cohasset, but a tough Winchester team proved to be too much for the Skippers on that day and walked away with the Division 3 EMass title.

Torin Sweeney was looking forward, what he believed, to be a rebuilding season after losing several seniors to graduation. Sweeney's goal was to be competitive and give the younger wrestlers as much mat time as possible to gain confidence and experience. Cohasset wound up finishing the season with an impressive 10-6 record, a mark Sweeney would like to

Special to the Mariner

The Cohasset High basketball team found gifts under the tree this holiday season as it pulled out wins over both East Bridgewater and Norton during the week before Christmas.

Both were home games and both saw the Skippers play decent defense, but have trouble putting together a consistent offense. Senior center Ryan Bishop played exceptionally well and senior J.L. Williams and junior Paul-Michael Quintin also excelled, especially with their outside shooting.

Quintin knocked down a three-point shot and hit two jumpers, giving him seven quick points. Jamie Buick picked up a steal and fed Williams, who laid it in for two more. Bishop hit a layup and Williams sank a jumper. Bishop closed out Cohasset's slow first half with a layup and the Skippers headed to the locker room trailing 16-15.

Buick started the second half with a turn-around jumper and Williams hit a three-point shot. Burke Davis netted a pair of free throws and Bishop laid one in off the glass. Quintin tossed in one from beyond the arc and Bishop picked up four more points with a layup and two free throws. Quintin pulled up and fired a jumper and Davis weaved through the defenders and made a nifty pass to Bishop for two. Buick pulled along the baseline to sink a jumper and Bishop took another pass from Davis to the rack Quintin's clutch three pointer put the Skippers up by six and a pair of free throws by Davis and one by Quintin iced the victory for Cohasset, 46-39.

The Norton game started as Williams drew first blood, sinking a medium-range jumper. Quintin then caught fire, reeling off nine straight points, all from three pointers. Bishop followed with a layup and a steal, then dished to Davis for the bucket. Williams' two free throws made the score 17-0 and his baseline jumpers gave the Skippers four more. The Lancers finally scored but were answered when Buick snaked through the lane for a layup. Davis swished a three and Bishop's hard work under the boards earned him a pair. His open-court passing set up Pat Hurley, who banked it in and Bishop's layup brought the tally to 32-14. Williams sank two technical free throws and Davis also sank a freebie. Bishop hit a layup and fired a pass to Hurley for another bucket. Hurley then netted two from the charity stripe and Bishop's layup made the halftime score 43-20 in favor of the Skippers.

The second half started as the first had with Williams nailing a jump shot. Bishop grabbed yet another offensive board and put it home and Williams laid one in off the glass. Bishop followed with a layup and sophomore Raheem Shepard chalked three up from the line, giving Cohasset a 54-33 edge.

Matt Belson hit a layup in traffic and Bishop knocked down a free throw. Williams hustled his way along the baseline for a basket and Davis hit two free throws. Brian Kilroy tore down an offensive board in the line and muscled it back through the hoop for a deuce. Cohasset's scoring ended when Davis nailed three from the stripe and Bishop hit one, making the final score 67-58 in favor of the Skippers.

After losing a tough game to Rockland, last Friday night, Cohasset waged a battle against Catholic Memorial on Friday.

Sports Lingo for Beginners

Sports have a language all their own, with clever phrases and names for all sorts of things that happen on and off the field. To the knowledgeable sports fan, the words are all too familiar. But if you don't flip through the sports pages on a regular basis, you just might find yourself confused with the lingo. Here are some definitions of the more commonly used words and names you can refer to the next time you decide to get an update on the world of sports.

• Icing - What your hot chocolate starts to do at a hockey rink where it's exceptionally frigid.

• Suicide Squeeze - You've been looking for a parking place for 30 minutes and finally decide to parallel park in the eight-foot spot you passed 13 times.

• Pacing - What distance runners do while they're waiting in line to use the Port-a-John, five minutes before race time.

• Infield Fly Rule - When you watch a summer softball game past 6 p.m., this term comes into effect like clockwork.

• Bleachers - Assortment of cleaning goods you have to use on your white pants after watching a doubleheader in cheap seats.

• Free Throw - The guy working the game booth at the local fair gives you another try at knocking down the milk bottles and winning a prize.

• Three pointer - When a mechanic changes your oil, tops your fluids and vacuums your seats.

• Direct Kick - What your 6-year-old nephew accidently does to you when you pick him up. Can be extremely painful, depending on the position of the kick.

• Double Play - Bowling three strings then hitting the pool room after for some 8-ball.

• Slide - What your car does on black ice.

• Club House - Usually a cardboard refrigerator box you and a bunch of your friends would cram into when you were little for pointless meetings. Girls were not allowed.

• Fatigue - Funky pants you'd wear at the mall in an attempt to pick up girls.

• Strike out - What usually occurs when you wear fatigues at the mall in an attempt to pick up girls.

• Hit and Run - The process of sucker punching the neighborhood bully then fleeing for your life when he doesn't even flinch.

• Bunt - That cake you dreaded your mother was going to bake for you on your birthday.

• Shaq - The structure in the backyard where you store your lawnmower and other gardening tools.

• Nothing But Net - What the super models wear on the first 10 pages of the Fredericks of Hollywood catalog.

• Indy - That cool character Harrison Ford played in all those adventure movies.

• Hardaway - The tough manner in which to perform a task.

• Relay - What you have to do when you realize the sod lawn you put down the previous day has been stolen.

• Cut-Off Man - That wacky guy in the neighborhood who saves a fortune by making his own shorts.

• Ducks on the Pond - A hunter's dream.

• Draw Play - When it's your turn to give the hints in Pictionary.

• Fungo - A derogatory word in some foreign language.

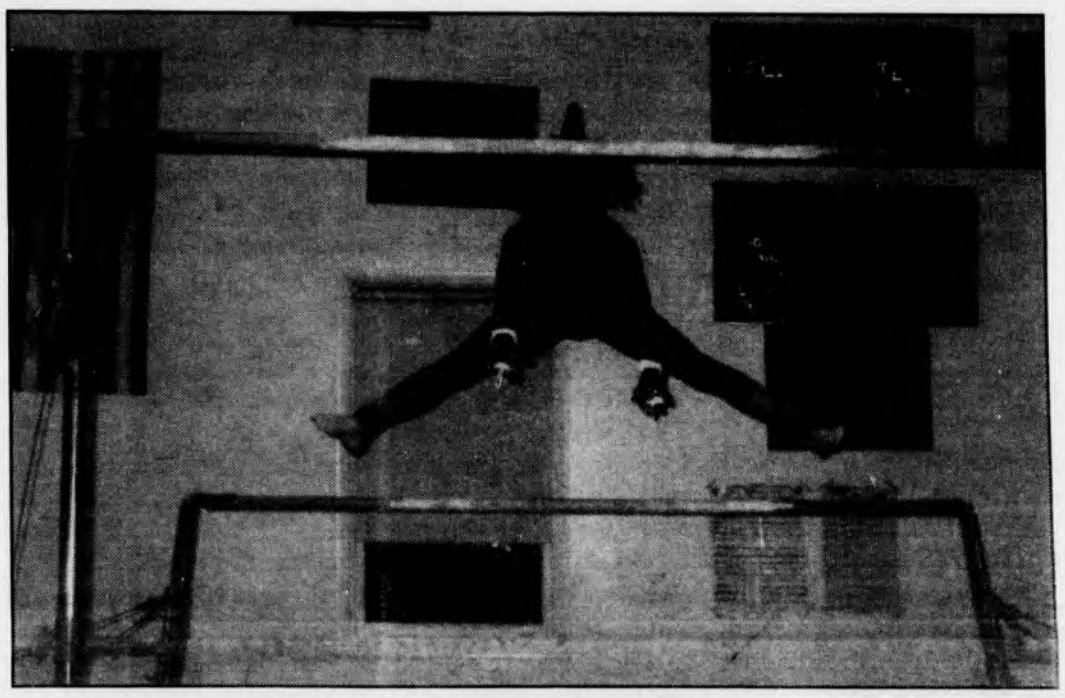
On the gymnastics front, the Lady Skippers scored a three-peat, winning their third consecutive SSL title over Scituate and finishing with an undefeated record. Cohasset was led by a crew of talented gymnasts, including Tafana Fiore, Erica and Tara Hettstrom, Jodi Colwill, Kristen Reynolds, Megan and Carolyn Pratt.

The '95-96 season marked the end of Ruthann Ardizzoni's head coaching duties. Ardizzoni, the backbone to the gymnastics program, decided to step down and concentrate on judging meets. Former Cohasset gymnast Erin Sutherland replaced Ardizzoni, but she still helps out at practices twice per week.

Ken Ekberg's lacrosse team once again qualified for the tournament. The lacrosse squad has become a tourney mainstay and is turning into the most popular male spring sport. Goaltender Ely Kahn had a sensational season in goal for the Skippers and should be even better this spring.



The Cohasset Roadrace-By-the-Sea drew close to 900 runners on a clear, cool day to run. One of the most scenic races in New England, the Cohasset course follows the rolling Jerusalem Road then heads up Forest St. The course is a demanding one, but is moreso on cold, blustery days.

The fall season was a rough one for the Skippers. The varsity football team was back in the SSL, but hardly received a warm reception from its competitors. Scituate won just one game all season, though the future does look bright A seventh and eighth grade team was formed to get the kids used to the game and the basic fundamentals. It may take a couple of years, but head coach Bob Knurek is optimistic of the future.

Year In Review

Jim Kirk announces he will not seek re-election next spring.

Sam Postbrief, 49, of Pond Street is killed in a hit and run accident while riding his bike in Scituate.

Peer counselors at the school-sponsored camp on Cape Cod confiscate marijuana and flush it down the toilet and do not reveal the names of those students involved.

The village station loses in a straw poll held before the special town meeting. The vote was 311 in favor of a Route 3A site and 112 for a station in the village.

Special town meeting voters approve $45,000 to set up a septic system management plan designed to provide financial relief for homeowners with failed or substandard systems. The plan will be available for town meeting action in the spring of 1997.

The special town meeting also approves spending $230,000 more for a public works garage on the town landfill.

NOVEMBER

If Cohasset voters had their way then Bill Weld would be on his way to Washington. The governor lost his bid to unseat incumbent Sen. John Kerry, but won big in Cohasset with 2,332 votes to Kerry's 1,700. The election in which President Bill Clinton was reelected drew 80 percent of Cohasset's registered voters to the polls. State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray and state Sen. Robert Hedlund are both reelected.

Hingham and Cohasset learn they will receive almost $450,000 in state grants to go toward the purchase the 50 acres of undeveloped land at the top of Turkey Hill.

The Coast Guard will loan Cohasset what is believed to be the second lens used at the 145-year-old Minot's Ledge Lighthouse for use in the Replica on Government Island.

Cohasset dedicates town squares to its soldiers lost in Vietnam and Korea.

Selectmen unanimously endorse the Oct. 28 special town meeting "straw poll" calling for a Route 3A train station.

'Hedlund picked his issues and did it well.'

— Polly Logan on the senator's reelection Nov. 5.

Hingham and Cohasset eye sharing a pumping station to help save money. The pumping station would be used for the Straits Pond sewer project which will hook north Cohasset homes up to the Hull treatment plant. Hingham will hook about 110 homes in the West Corner area up to the Hull plant.

The Cohasset Mariner calls for nominations for the 1996 Citizen of the Year Award.

Thirteen young Cohasset ballerinas will perform in Boston Ballet's "The Nutcracker" on-stage at the Wang Center for the Performing Arts.

The fate of the showroom on the Hagerty property has again been bounced by the selectmen back to the Hagerty Property Committee, this time for the committee's comments on a plan to use the site for a marine biology research center. Local oceanographer Kevin Ulmer has resurrected his plan, floated last year, to use the house as a "lobster lab."

Volunteers at the Cohasset Food Pantry are busy stocking the shelves to provide needy families with a Thanksgiving Day feast.

DECEMBER

By the end of the year 2000, the town could have the third volume of its history compiled by local citizens. Selectmen put out the call for volunteers and will appoint a committee of up to 20 people to complete the task expected to take about four years. Seed money for the project was approved at the Oct. 28 special town meeting.

The planning board writes to state Secretary of Environmental Affairs Trudy Coxe to state its support for a village train station. The board's action angers selectmen who recently voted to back the Route 3A site.

Area churches host the annual Village Fair on the common.

Whether or not the new DPW garage needs automatic sprinklers is open to interpretation, officials say. The town will seek a ruling from the state on the matter. If sprinklers are needed, it would add about $50,000 more to the cost of the project.

The Chamber of Commerce hosts a village design "charrette" on how to revitalize the downtown area. The rotary and MBTA also contribute to the workshop's cost.

Town administrator Gregory Doyon is appointed as the new town administrator for Abington.

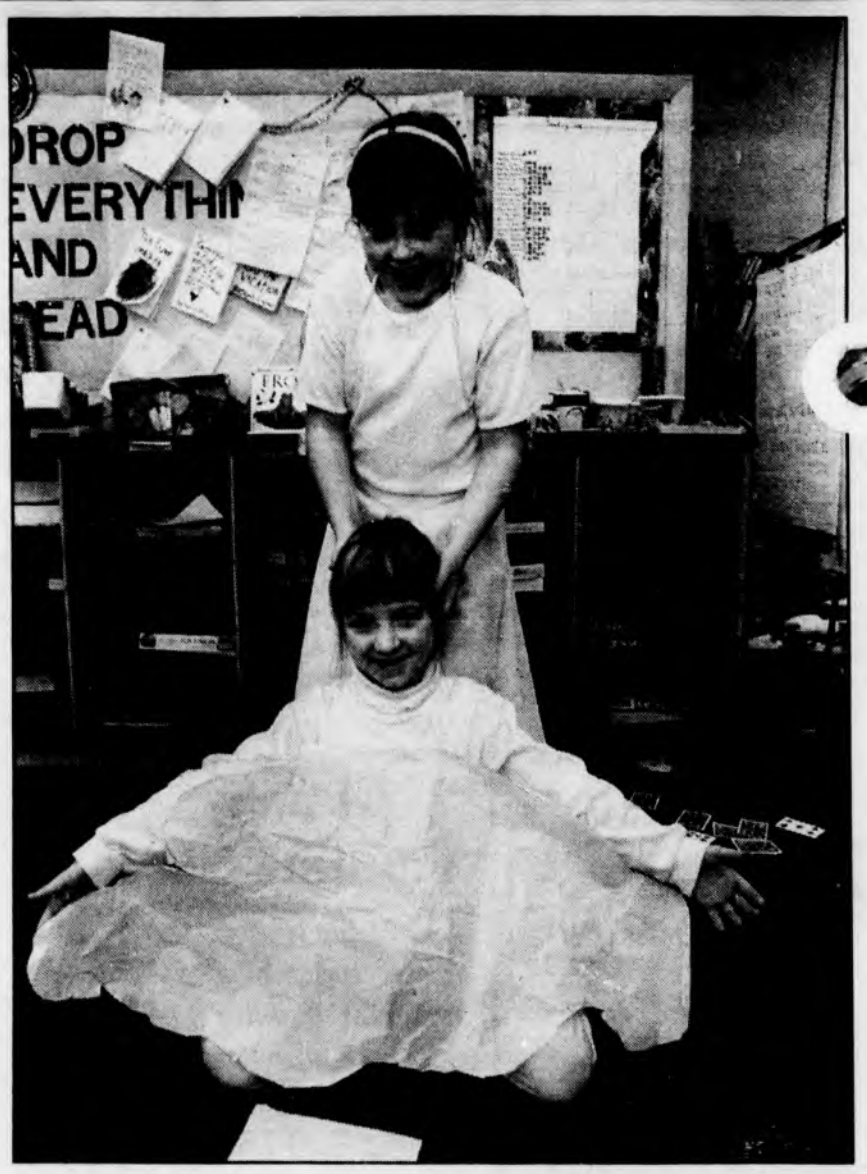
Selectmen announce that a pay-as-you-throw trash program will start in the spring.

'We're trying to get the DPU to tell us what is disputable and how it is done.'

— Hull town manager Phil Lemnios on the high water bills.

Some residents are concerned about the sweeping septic system management plan being planned by the board of health. Local cable TV personality, Wigmore Pierson leads the crusade against the plan at a public meeting on the matter.

Recreation director Jack Worley celebrates 20 years on the job.



Cable TV rates will rise in 1997, officials learn.

The sewer is coming for sure to about 440 homes in central Cohasset. Officials hope a joint override in the spring that includes the sewer project in north Cohasset will pass so the town can subsidize some of the cost of the projects.

The Hagerty Property committee backs the proposed "Lobster Lab" use of the Hagerty house but selectmen want more details before supporting the proposal.

Selectmen ink a grant application for help in paying for upwards of $1.3 million for flood control measures.

Hull leads the effort in asking the Department of Public Utilities to come up with a policy so Mass.-American Water Users understand what part of their bills is disputable.

CANCER TALK WITH TANIA LINGOS, M.D.

BREAST CANCER ALERT, PART 2

Second only to lung cancer, breast cancer is a leading cancer killer of women. The best defense against this disease is early detection. Fortunately, when detected early enough, breast cancer has a 90% cure rate.

In educating yourself about the disease, you should know that some women stand a greater risk of getting breast cancer than others. According to the American Cancer Society, the following factors increase your chance of developing breast cancer:

- over the age of 50
- history of breast cancer in your close family (mother, sister)
- first childbirth after age of 30
- never having children
- obesity (weighing 40% more than your recommended weight)

In assessing these risk factors, please note that they are just that, risk factors. They are not absolute indications of breast cancer because the majority of women with these risk factors do not develop breast cancer. Being aware of the risk factors, however, should alert you to the importance of regular screening for breast cancer.

As we noted last week, all three methods of screening - Breast Self Exam, Clinical Breast Exam and Mammography - are essential in the fight against breast cancer. If the disease is caught when the cancer is small and localized, the likelihood of needing to have a mastectomy is significantly reduced. A mastectomy is the surgical removal of the entire breast.

Precisely because we are doing a better job of early detection, mastectomies are not as necessary or as common as they used to be. If the cancerous tumor is small and has not spread beyond the breast, a lumpectomy is equally effective. A lumpectomy is the surgical removal of the cancerous lump/tumor and a small amount of surrounding tissue. Overall, the breast is saved.

As a radiation oncologist, I specialize in using radiation to combat cancer and I see the progress we are making in refining treatment. With advanced equipment, we can focus the radiation beam more precisely to eradicate or minimize the tumor. In the process, we conserve more of a patient's healthy tissue and reduce negative side effects.

Of course, in dealing with breast cancer there are no easy answers. Every case is unique and must be reviewed accordingly. Certain patients will require localized treatment such as surgery or radiation, others a more systemic approach such as chemo- or hormonal therapy. There is, however, plenty of information about all aspects of the disease from detection to emotional reactions to breast reconstruction. Your local chapter of the American Cancer Society is a valuable and free resource. Take advantage of this public service to educate yourself.

There are also many books on breast cancer. I recommend Dr. Susan Love's Breast Book by Susan Love, M.D.. It is a guide for gathering information, understanding the diagnosis and choosing treatment. Informative and clearly written, it is an excellent education tool for those concerned about breast cancer.

Tania Lingos is the Medical Director of the South Suburban Oncology Center, located at 700 Congress Street, Quincy, Mass. You may reach her by email at tlingos@shields.com or by telephone at (617) 471-3700.

South Suburban Oncology Center is a joint venture of Quincy Hospital, South Shore Hospital and Shields Oncology Services.

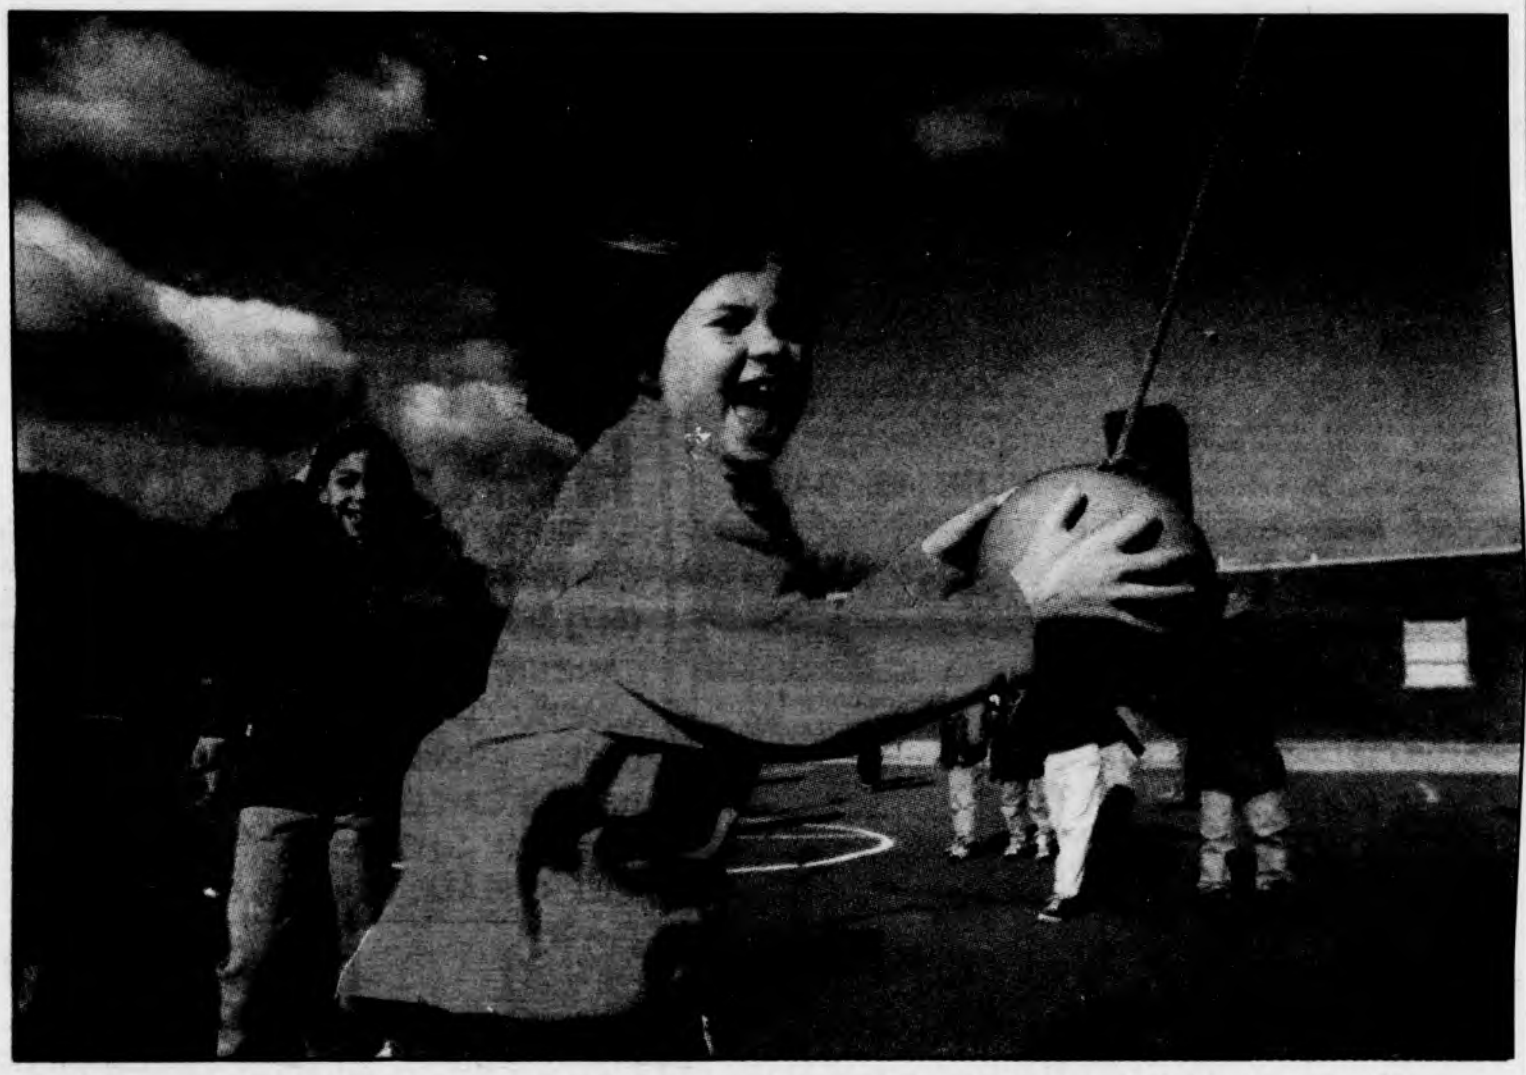
Forum on Youth Drug and Alcohol Abuse Draws Crowd

Acceptance That Problem Exists is Important Step

By Stacey K. Powers
COHASSET MARINER



The town-appointed Drug & Alcohol Committee met Tuesday night before what would prove to be the group's largest showing of concerned citizens to date in the history of the Committee, officials said.

Before a standing room only crowd, the Committee's co-chairman, Craig Muir, expressed his appreciation for the show of support.

"This is an important meeting for the Committee as well as the town," Muir said.

For this special meeting, the Committee sent out approximately 40 invitations inviting various members of the community to participate in the open forum discussing the issues facing the youngsters of the community. Half of the invited guests, including three high school students; a member of the clergy; a police officer; Mike

Reading Specialist Proposed at Osgood School

Call it a sign of the times. More and more kids are coming into the schools with speech and language difficulties.

Osgood School Principal Marilee Cantelmo informed the school committee of this issue during last week's discussion of the school's budget proposal. Part of the school's 1997-1998 budget is aimed at combating the problem.

The budget calls for a new position, a reading specialist to assist students and to help teachers learn better strategies to teach reading.

According to Cantelmo, the school has used reading specialists in the past. Under Title 1, the position was federally funded, but the town

Walsh Still has That Coaching Passion

By Joe Reardon
COHASSET MARINER

Dennis Walsh appreciates talent when he sees it. But Cohasset High's varsity hockey coach "admires effort" put in by athletes a heck of a lot more.

"I'm a positive person," said Walsh. "I believe people should go out and play 100 percent. If they do that I'm happy. I look at effort more than talent.

"(Former Boston Bruin) Terry O'Reilly was an athlete who gave a complete effort every time he went on the ice."

Walsh, a computer and math teacher at Cohasset High, has been coaching hockey since the ripe old age of 15 when he was growing up in Canada. Unlike today, parents weren't as involved in local hockey, which left the older kids to show the youngsters the fundamentals of the game.

Walsh went on to play junior hockey and began teaching in North Quebec in 1963 after graduating from Saint Francis Xavier College in Nova Scotia. Walsh played on the football team in college, but not hockey. He ended up in Cohasset in 1969 as a football coach and assistant to Ted McDermott's hockey squad for 12 years.

Walsh was out of the sport completely for five years before getting back on the ice coaching.

"I've coached all but five years as an assistant or head

Cohasset's Week

Fire Chief's Contract Approved

Selectmen approved a three-year contract for Fire Chief Roger Lincoln this week. The first year of the contract (from Nov. 1, 1996 to Oct. 31, 1997) Lincoln's salary will be $54,500. It goes to $56,000, in the second year and $57,000 in the third year.

In a telephone interview, Lincoln said he is happy with the contract.

This is the second, three-year contract for Lincoln who was appointed permanent fire chief in November 1993. He had served as acting chief for about four months following the resignation of John Nadeau in July of 1993.

Lobster Lab Support Urged

Jack Hubbard, 144 Beach St., wrote to selectmen Dec. 26, urging them to support the "Lobster Lab" proposed for the Hagerty house off Parker Avenue.

"I believe the proposal has great potential to provide the schools and citizens of Cohasset with a very exciting and worthwhile organization which will benefit everyone," Hubbard wrote.

The "Lobster Lab," proposed by resident Kevin Ulmer, a member of the health board, would be a learning laboratory for marine biology and research.

Town History Group Needs Volunteers

Selectmen said this week the Committee on Town History, which will compile the next volume of the town's history, needs ten more interested citizens. So far, ten people have signed up and town meeting set the committee size at 20.

A citizen-at-large is also needed to serve on the Greenbush Mitigation Committee, selectmen said this week. The Conservation Commission needs an associate member and the mosquito control committee has a vacancy. Interested citizens should stop by or call the selectmen's office at 383-9900.

Garage Change Orders Approved

Selectmen approved four change orders for construction of the DPW garage this week. Skylights will be eliminated and a row of acrylic lights will be added to the overhead doors; the plumbing drain line will also be relocated; and a single phase truck lift motor will be installed. The $5,600 savings from not installing the skylights covers the costs of the other change orders.

Gjesteby is MAPC Representative

This week, selectmen reappointed Martha Gjesteby of Old Pasture Road to serve as the town's representative to the Metropolitan Area Planning Council (MAPC), a regional planning agency. They will ask Gjesteby to give them a run down on where the town stands on the state Transportation Improvement Projects (TIP) list at an upcoming meeting.

Watershed Grant is Supported

After a lengthy discussion Monday, selectmen authorized John McNabb Jr. of the Water Resources Protection Committee to submit a grant application to the Massachusetts Environmental Trust. They will also send a letter of support for the $12,000 grant which will be used to conduct a public information and education campaign for residents of the reservoir watershed area.

The town, which would provide $3,000 in matching funds, would have to appropriate all the money, most likely from water revenue, and would be reimbursed on a quarterly basis, McNabb explained.

He said one criteria for the grant is to show support for the program with local funding or other support.

"I thought it was painless for us to pay $3,000," McNabb said.

He said the program will identify every residency within the watershed district and target non-point pollution such as lawn chemicals and motor oil. Then planners would conduct a public education campaign to identify potential threats from homes, businesses and industries in the area, he said.

Selectman Ronnie McMorris questioned the need for money to provide education.

"I'm not sure what it's buying [illegible]?" she asked and suggested that an article or two in the Mariner could accomplish the same thing.

But McNabb stressed that mailing is a more effective means of making direct contact and that education is a major part of any water protection program.

"We can't educate them if we don't know who they are and we can't educate without informing them," he said.

Selectman Nan Roth said she liked the idea of taking a "census" of the watershed district but was concerned that the education effort may be a duplication. She asked if other brochures were available that provide education on pollutants.

Selectman Peter Pratt, who is enthusiastic about the proposed program, said there are no brochures and that people in the district have all kinds of questions that need to be addressed, such as 'Can I build a deck?'.

Pratt praised McNabb's efforts and noted the program would include the 40 percent of the watershed district that is in Norwell.

"It will be great to be in close contact with Norwell," Pratt said.

Retirements are Acknowledged

Selectmen acknowledged the retirements of firefighter/EMTs Paul McGaffigan and John T. Boswell this week.

The board will send them letters of thanks for their many years of service.

Selectmen Chairman Merle Brown said the vacant positions created by the retirements will be filled.

Custodial Services are Debated

As part of budget discussions for fiscal year 1998, which starts July 1, selectmen will look into either contracting out the town hall custodial services or hiring a part-time custodian.

Town Administrator Gregory Doyon said town hall "needs someone to be there to maintain security and to handle the grunt work that has to be done from time to time."

The town has contracted out for the custodial services on an as-needed basis since long-time custodian Polly Litchfield retired in the fall.

Doyon suggested the town hire a town hall custodian for 21 hours a week or three full days a week at a cost of $11,725.

Selectman Ronnie McMorris said she supports hiring a custodian. She said a private service provides no savings and there is more convenience with a custodian.

But selectman Peter Pratt said it was time the town looked at custodial services in the aggregate in order to provide better facilities management and modern operational practices throughout town.

Selectmen decided to try to reach a decision on how to handle custodial services by town meeting.

Selectman Michael Sullivan said the time frame is important because while he supports hiring a custodian for town hall, he didn't want to have to let that person go if selectmen opted to contract the service out.

Alcohol Abuse

Gill, director of the health education program at the high school; Deborah Sirois, a specialist with the Massachusetts Prevention Center and various parents, represented the diverse group.

The session began with Muir presenting background on the history of the Drug & Alcohol Committee, detailing their "tremendous frustration" with how little visible support they have received in their endeavors over the years as well as the renewed vigor they have experienced following several recent meetings.

"We were getting nowhere and were just about ready to disband the Committee until some concerned parents started showing up and discussing the issues and that proved to us that there really were people out there who were interested in what we are trying to do," Muir said.

"The first step is to define the problem," Muir explained. "The second step is accepting that the problem exists here in our community and the third step is to move forward and deal with the problem as a community."

Special guest at the meeting was Deborah Sirois, a specialist with the Massachusetts Prevention Center.

"We are here for your town to offer resources as well as encouragement," she said. Funded by the Department of Public Health, the Center aids towns across the state in coping with such issues as drug and alcohol abuse among youngsters.

"Cohasset is not an insular community. You are affected by goings on in a large culture that includes a lot of factors," she said. "There is not just one answer. Prevention is ongoing and it has to become a part of how a community functions in order for the numbers to decrease."

Mike Gill explained to the group his role in the struggle to control the rising number of junior and senior high school students who are experimenting and regularly using drugs and alcohol.

> 'If we learn how to accept it, we can learn how to deal with it.'
> — Craig Muir, D&A Committee.

"The Health Education Program was first thought of in 1974 by a group of concerned parents who petitioned the School Committee to fund a program at the high school. It didn't become a reality until a tragic accident in 1980 convinced the School Committee to go forward." Gill is the architect of the school-based program.

Prompted by a question from a parent wanting to know "how does the Health Department work with the Drug & Alcohol Committee?", Gill explained that every couple of years the health departments across the nation circulate a 'surprise' risk behavior questionnaire to students which covers a broad scope of questions covering everything from nutrition to sex, violence, drugs and alcohol. The students have no prior notification of the survey which, Gill said, hopefully encourages them to answer honestly. After reviewing the survey with the Drug & Alcohol Committee, Gill sent a copy of some of the key results of the survey home to parents, along with a letter inviting them to attend a meeting to discuss the survey in early June of 1996.

"We invited 600 families and less than 50 people showed up," said Muir. "Maybe people just don't care."

One parent voiced her objection saying that "people do care but every parent cannot go to every meeting." She also said she felt that "Cohasset is an extremely small town with a small number of kids exhibiting aberrant behavior. Our kids are not bad, they're just making bad choices."

Gill also pointed out that timing has a lot to do with how well the crowd turns out for such meetings, saying that often "people not showing up is not a lack of interest" and that "people deal with the problems in different ways."

When asked what the current trend is and where Cohasset is at, Gill said that "In meeting with my colleagues across the state, I know the certain types of drug use on the rise. There are national trends that affect many schools." He told the crowd how he bases his curriculum partly on the results of the surveys and his discussions with other health educators. "This problem has been present in our society for hundreds of years. The battle is not going to end but we can minimize it and work together to change the cultural factors that affect us," he said.

One parent asked Gill what the school's position would be on an issue concerning the solicitation of marijuana on school grounds, to which he responded that "kids have been suspended after being caught

"Kids will always figure out a way to get away with what they want, but a school system cannot prevent every problem. Cohasset enforces better than any other school system around, and there are fewer problems at our junior and senior high schools than a lot of other places in the state," he said. "I'm not saying it's a perfect place — there's always room for improvement."

"This community is so negative," said a parent. "We don't promote the good that goes on here, and I blame the media and the schools for the negative publicity." She pointed out how in recent news Cohasset was reported as scoring high across the board on a statewide survey of public schools and she never saw any mention in the papers of this achievement.

Several of the students present, two tenth graders and one ninth grader, pointed out various incidents where kids have been harassed for not going along with the crowd and taking drugs and drinking alcohol. "Some kids are leaving Cohasset schools to go to private schools because of the verbal and sometimes physical abuse they are receiving fr[illegible] other kids. it can get stressful," one student pointed out.

Gill told the crowd that he welcomes any help from parents to join forces in promoting drug and alcohol awareness in schools and that attending the quarterly Health Committee meetings would be a good way to get involved. He invited the crowd and anyone else interested to attend the next meeting Jan. 21 at the guidance conference center at the high school. He also gave recognition to the Safe Homes program, started by the Drug & Alcohol Committee, which is a parents network designed to keep the lines of communication open and inform people where and when a potential party could take place.

Muir said "Mike Gill can educate the kids, but who will educate the parents?" The crowd seemed to be in agreement that the community should work together with the school system to combat the problem, not against them.

"We need a community group concerned about Cohasset," one parent said. "We learn from each other's shared experiences," another parent responded. "It's both healthy and helpful to glean information from each other." One parent suggested that Cohasset should have a parenting forum to raise the awareness level of the problems facing the community.

"If we learn how to accept it, we can learn how to deal with it," Muir said.

In closing, Sirois said "Often times the punitive road leads to frustration and minimal rewards. A better way would be to show that as a community you have zero tolerance for drug and alcohol use among kids.

"A 'norm' has been established here that has become accepted. As a community, you need to set a new 'norm' and re-define what that is." She also commended the group of concerned citizens for their eagerness to find a solution, saying that "there is no wrong answer. Everything you do is a step forward."

The next open meeting of the Drug & Alcohol Committee will be Tuesday, Feb. 4, at 7:30 p.m. in the Town Hall. All citizens are welcome to attend.

Getting Back to Spiritual Basics

The Task Force on Spirituality and Healing of the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset has scheduled their second workshop for the general public under the heading of "Pathways to Healing II." At last November's "Pathways to Healing I," four area practitioners shared their expertise and insights with an inspired audience. With a request for a more in-depth experience, just two practitioners will present at "Pathways to Healing II" Wednesday, Jan. 22, 7:30 p.m., at the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset (next to Town Hall).

Dr. Bruce Indek, a local chiropractor, will present a talk on "Universal Innate Healing Energies" to help us understand some of the basic interconnections involved in natural and spiritual healing practices. Then, Charles Mangat-Raj ("Raj"), a local, retired Yoga master will share thoughts and techniques on breath and its role in Yoga practice. The event is free and open to the public. Call 383-0345 for directions or further information.

Lobster Lab's Fate Up to Town Meeting

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

Town meeting will have the final say on whether or not the town-owned Hagerty house will be leased to a non-profit corporation.

But whether the article will be placed in the warrant by selectmen or by citizens' petition is still unclear.

Local resident and health board member Kevin Ulmer has proposed turning the former Cohasset Colonials showroom into a "lobster lab," a marine biology research and learning facility. A majority of the Hagerty Property Committee, charged with developing a plan for the 2.2 acre site off Parker Avenue, back Ulmer's plan.

Selectmen are undecided about supporting the proposal.

But they are feeling pressure to decide because the house which has been empty for nearly four years is deteriorating.

R. M. Campbell, president of the Cohasset Lightkeeper's Corporation, which would lease the house and refurbish it for the Lobster Lab, said Monday the roof on the house is leaking and the floors are starting to buckle.

Selectmen said they would hold a space open on the special town meeting warrant for an article to issue a Request for Proposals (RFP) to lease the house to a non-profit group.

But the board has compiled a six-page draft list of questions about the marine biology project which they gave to Campbell and the school department this week for them to start formulating answers.

And it is not clear what terms of the lease would be spelled out in the article. Selectman Peter Pratt suggested a 10-year renewable lease but Selectman Nan Roth thought that was too long and wanted the lease to be shorter.

Selectmen Chairman Merle Brown explained that the article must be in the special town meeting warrant to be addressed this fiscal year. Articles in the regular town meeting take effect in fiscal year 1998 which starts July 1.

Citizens petitions require 100 signatures to be included in the special town meeting, Brown said.

Murray said Tuesday, the Lightkeepers may still seek the 100-signature petition because the group is not sure what direction the language in the selectmen's article will take.

In a Jan. 7 letter to selectmen, he said the terms of the lease should be sensible.

"No group of good and sane citizens would go through the multitudinous torments of fund-raising, permitting, coordination of architects and contractors, etc. etc. etc. without assurance that the results of their efforts will endure for many years.

"A four or five year term is ridiculous, and would be an insult to responsible citizens," Murray said.

Selectmen will ask the building inspector for a report on the condition of the Hagerty house.

The town bought the Hagerty property nearly four years ago with the understanding that it would be turned into a passive recreational area available for all town citizens to use.

Salary increases Awarded

This week selectmen approved the following step-rate increases:

• For Jane E. Hoskins, a billing clerk at the fire department, $12.76 per hour up from $12.16, effective Feb. 3;

• For Leo A. Ellsmi Jr., public works department employee, $13.77 per hour up from $13.09, effective Jan. 22.

Jennifer Plante Takes the Stage in London

Hey, guess what? Jennifer Plante is in London for two weeks with classmates from the Oscar Hammerstein II School of the Arts performing a Greek Drama, "Trojan Women," by Andrei Serban.

Jennifer, a graduate of Cohasset High School and Tufts University, is a second-year graduate student at Columbia University School of Fine Arts in New York City. Jennifer's former drama coach and English teacher, Mr. Ron Emmons, as well as CHS Latin teacher, Mr. Tom O'Neill, should be pleased to know that this production is in LATIN!!

Not to worry, Jen, the audience will never know if you make a mistake. Break a Leg! And, remember that we here in little Cohasset are all behind you, and proud of you!

Speaking of budding actresses, did all of you happen to see Marilyn Adams on Channel Five last Sunday, promoting some great looking homes? Geez, if she ever decides not to sell them, she has the gift to sell whatever she wishes on television!

Oh boy, is Renee Prisble ever excited and proud! She just had a piece of sculpture accepted by Cozzi Iron and Metal, Inc., in connection with the School of Art Institute in Chicago. Renee's main interest is in using metal, ceramic and wood, but she has also designed some fine jewelry! Check out her family members when you see them, we understand that her work is dazzling, and that she gave them as presents for Christmas. Think that they are pleased and proud to wear them, you bet!

Please give a huge Cohasset welcome to Sam Murphy, brand new son of Sarah and David Murphy, who was born Dec. 30! Sam joins his two older brothers, Chris and Jack, and you just know that they are thrilled!

As are grandparents who are all right here in Cohasset, Anna and Mike Abbruzze and Marsha and Rich Murphy — by the way, that little bundle of joy makes the seventh boy for the Abbruzzee grandparent clan — their one girl reigns (her name is Kelsey!!)

We will undoubtedly be seeing Sam "Around Town" within a very short period of time, we always see Sarah and the rest of the clan walking and being busy---and you know that he will be adorable!

We know that everyone loves the Boston Bruins, they are our team, right? Well, we have a reason to cheer for the St. Louis Blues too! If you remember, years ago we used to tell you about Jim Campbell, son of Whitey Campbell and Eleanor (Tower) Campbell (CHS grads, '58 and '59.)

Anyway, the Blues met the Bruins last month, and Jim got two goals and one assist — he is tied for scoring lead — also tied for the league lead with five game-winning goals! He was even mentioned in USA Today! Here is a true star on the rise, watch for his name and be happy and proud for him!

We have heard some great news, to tell it is just so nice — congrats go to Ely Kahn (Harvard), Nichole L. Santoro (Salve Regina University), Holly Brennock (Emerson College) Karen Niessink (Babson and St. Michaels), Mark Whitman (Babson) and Chris Laas (MIT). All of these students have been accepted, early decision, to the colleges linked with their names — again, we applaud you, and know how happy you must be to know where you go next — it sure is tough times for the senior class, waiting, wondering, watching the mail — we have all been there!

The next meeting of the Colonel Thomas Lothrop Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution will be held Sunday, Jan. 12, from 2 to 4 p.m. at the Light Keepers House in Cohasset Harbor. The outstanding program will be presented by Bob and Gerda Edmunds, who have been enthusiastic amateur genealogists for about three decades. They have worked extensively on their won lineages and attempted to help others as well. Bob's family tree extends back to several Mayflower passengers, including John Alden and Priscilla Mullins. This prompted his curiosity about the Alden family, involving him in the activities of the Alden Kindred of America, Inc. and the John Alden House in Duxbury. He is currently compiling a computer data base of Alden descendants which has grown to about 31,000 individuals! Gerda's own ancestry is strictly German, she has traced her own family tree to the 1300s! She is currently the director of the Family History Center at the Later Day Saints Church in Hingham. The Chapter members are inviting all who are interested in genealogy to attend. Please let the chapter know by calling Nancy O'Toole at 383-1547.

Please call me with your news, we all love to hear it!

Richard Donovan

Richard Edward "Dick" Donovan, 69, of Cohasset, a retired investment firm executive and a former pitcher for the Boston Braves, died Jan. 6 at South Shore Hospital, South Weymouth.

Mr. Donovan pitched for the Braves from 1950 to 1952, the Detroit Tigers in 1954, and for the Chicago White Sox from 1955 to 1960. He pitched in three games for the white Sox in the 1959 World Series.

He pitched for the Washington Senators in 1961 and for the Cleveland Indians from 1962 to 1965, when he retired.

He spent a total of 15 years as a major league pitcher. His best year was in 1961 with the Senators when his ERA (earned run average) was 2.40. The next year, when he was with the Cleveland Indians, he was a 20-game winner, had a 3.59 ERA and was named the pitcher of the year in the American League. His lifetime ERA was 3.67.

He attended many investment courses and went on to work for Eastman & Dillon in Boston and was executive vice president for Bache & Co. in Boston.

He later opened his own real estate appraisal office in Quincy before retiring in 1994.

He also was a distributor for Earth Care Products of Massachusetts in Quincy, which features such products as outdoor benches made from 100 percent recycled plastic.

Mr. Donovan was born Dec. 7, 1927 in Boston and was a member of the class of 1945 at North Quincy High School. He served in the Navy.

He lived in Cohasset for more than 30 years.

He was a member of the Cohasset Golf Club.

He leaves his wife, Patricia J. (Casey) Donovan; a son, Peter C. Donovan, and a daughter, Amy J. Donovan, both of Cohasset; a brother, James Donovan of Needham; a sister, Eleanor Papile of Quincy; and many nieces and nephews.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at 10 a.m. Jan. 9 at St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

The McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., handled the arrangements.

Donations may be made to the Jimmy Fund, care of the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, 44 Binney St., Boston.

SHOCK TREATMENT

▶If all four of a car's shock absorbers have been in service for many miles and one shock goes bad, it is recommended that all four shocks be replaced in the belief that the others are also soon doomed to failure. Original-equipment shocks are, of course, suitable replacements, but a switch to heavy-duty replacement shocks will result in a firmer ride and longer life. In older automobiles, an upgrade to gas or air shocks will help compensate for sagging suspension. However, if one corner of the car sags severely, a car owner will likely have to look beyond shocks to spring replacement, along with replacement of the companion spring on the other side. As with shocks, springs should be replaced in pairs. And, those who frequently carry heavy loads in their cars, trucks, or vans may find that self-leveling shocks will work best for heavy loads.

▶Nothing eases one's ride like new shock absorbers. It is easy to tell when one of yours is going--you'll find that the bumps come right through the seat! At SOUTH SHORE CHEVROLET - GEO (383-9090), we work hard to make sure you are satisfied with every aspect of the services we provide, from evaluation and writeup to delivery. Remember, protect your engine with routine oil changes and your safety with routine maintenance. We welcome your questions--we're here to answer them. We're at 828 C.J. Cushing Highway, Route 3A (open Thursday evenings).

HINT

When a load lowers suspension height, self-leveling shocks convert the vehicle's bouncing motion into a lifting force. This type of shock also automatically and independently compensates if one side sags lower than the other.

EDITORIALS & OPINIONS

Thanks for Speaking Up

Before 1997 gets too far along, we still have some important 1996 business to attend to.

Some of the following names may be familiar to you, others may not be. But the people attached to these names all have one thing in common: they wrote at least one letter-to-the-editor in 1996.

A few wrote thank you's to the people of Cohasset or organizations for their help or support; others complained about a decision or lobbied to have their views considered; while still others educated us about programs, problems or activities.

But no matter what the subject — putting pen to paper to share your views with your fellow citizens is important. The First Amendment is close to our hearts here in the newspaper business and at no time do we appreciate it more than when ordinary citizens, like those listed here, take advantage of their Freedom of Speech. And what better vehicle is there than your local paper?

So here at the Cohasset Mariner, we salute the following local citizens:

Susan McDenison, Patricia W. Murphy, Charles Fink, Amyra O'Connell, Kevin Ulmer, Lucille McLoughlin, R. M. Campbell, Stephanie Church, Herb Towle, Ann M. Whiteley, Peter J. Wood, Daniel C. Sometimes it takes a good dose of courage to let your voice be heard but we think it's worth it. Often one voice is all the inspiration needed to propel others to action.

This year, the Cohasset Mariner set a new record. We received 220 letters-to-the-editor in 1996 from 168 different people or groups.

To those of you that have thought about writing and haven't, please reconsider. To those whom we hear from on a regular basis, keep writing!

There are lots of weeks to go in the New Year — which will be filled with events, decisions, happenings and controversy.

Let us hear what you think in 1997.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Thanks for Help in Refurbishing Teachers' Lounge

To the Editor:

This is a letter of thanks to the community of Cohasset for all the help and encouragement the Deer Hill School Council received over the Christmas break while working hard to refurbish the teachers' lounge at the school. It was apparent to the parent representatives and community representatives on the School Council that there was no better way to show our gratitude and support for the teachers at the school than to put our backs and time into painting, stenciling and re-doing the lounge.

Prior to this project, the room boasted brown walls, a stained ceiling, an ancient refrigerator that had only one shelf left inside, dark stained pine tables, and cabinets with torn off Formica, and a finish that looked as if they had been left in the parking lot over the summer! The microwave was not big enough to heat two cups of soup simultaneously! There was a "wall" made of a piece of eight foot plywood leaning against a partition to separate the lounge from the curriculum directors office!

The picture has changed, primarily due to the hard work of Mr. Paul Callahan, the principal, and the council members. Hancock Paint was very generous in donating 15 gallons of paint. Joanne Reed, of Reed's Country Way, went out of her way to donate two three-foot window boxes, and to help fill them with beautiful plants at cost. Smith Appliance was very quick to come forward with a beautiful new refrigerator at their cost and delivered at no cost. The PSO, on very short notice, agreed to a donation which funded the refrigerator. The Maher family on Old Pasture Rd. has generously given their 2-year-old kitchen cabinets to the project, which is greatly appreciated.

The work to pull this project together on short notice was accomplished because the community listened and acted to help the council reach its goal, and surprise the teachers with a special kind of a gift. We, the council, want to send a heart-felt THANK-YOU!

Local DAR Chapter Seeks New Members

Jan. 12 Meeting Focuses on Finding Roots

By Elise Aymer
COHASSET MARINER

In the aftermath of its centennial, Cohasset's Col. Thomas Lothrop chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR) is reaching out to the community and trying to attract new members.

The Daughters of the American Revolution is an organization made up of the descendants of people who supported the patriot side, whether through military service or other contributions, during the Revolutionary War.

The Cohasset chapter of the DAR, was established in 1896, by Mary Gros, the great-great granddaughter of Col. Lothrop, a combatant in both the French and Indian and Revolutionary wars.

The chapter's first members met at the Grand Army Hall, which stood where St. Stephen's Episcopal Church is today. Although, they met regularly in town, early DAR women were very active in the region as a whole.

"These women would travel all over for meetings and it was horse and buggy time," said chapter spokeswoman Barbara Dillon.

The current chapter, comprised of 20 women, is just as interested as its early members were in moving and shaking. The chapter has been growing, said Dillon, and continues to make a difference in the community.

The Col. Lothrop chapter supports a women's veterans hospital in Bedford and Wayland's Hillside School for Boys, where disadvantaged urban boys receive the opportunity to work and study on a farm. The chapter distributes "good citizen books" to immigrants; facilitates a Christmas celebration at a veterans hospital in Brockton; names a good citizen of the year; provides scholarships for deserving high school seniors and decorates and maintains the graves of revolutionary soldiers.

Among the other benefits it provides to the community, the DAR's commitment to patriotism stands out for Barbara Dillon.

"It's been a long time since we've had a war. There's a lot of apathy," said Dillon. By making people aware of their Revolutionary past and the history of the country, the DAR preserves patriotic values said Dillon.

"If you don't try to preserve those ideals, then they are lost," she said.

Despite its important work the chapter's campaign for new members has not always been successful. Dillon and chapter member Nancy O'Toole cite time constraints and misconceptions that brand the DAR as inactive, exclusive or only for older women, as reasons why some hesitate to join.

DAR members say that the claim that the DAR is elitist is unfounded.

"I don't think it's as exclusive as many people think," Dillon said.

"All of my children can join even though they have an Irish name," said chapter member Nancy O'Toole. "The US has become such a melting pot that it's [the DAR] become more inclusive."

What may attract new members most to the DAR is the organization's emphasis on history and genealogy.

"A lot of younger women are joining because they like to trace their roots. There is a big interest in genealogy now," said Dillon.

The DAR maintains a large library in Washington, D.C. which can help prospective members with their genealogical quest and the Col. Lothrop chapter holds historical and family heritage seminars to help interested people trace their roots.

The Col. Lothrop chapter meets once a month at different members' homes and at the Minot Lightkeepers residence. The chapter will be hosting a special seminar on Sunday Jan. 12 from 2-4 p.m. at the Minot Lightkeepers residence with Bob and Gerda Edmunds, avid amateur genealogists and members of the Church of Latter-Day Saints, who have reconstructed their family trees and helped others in their searches.

"Hopefully, we'll get some people," said Dillon, "some of them will be interested, find their revolutionary roots, and join us."

Lack of Advertising for Post Irks Pratt

Board to Interview Candidates for Interim Town Administrator

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

Sparks flew Monday between selectmen Peter Pratt and Michael H. Sullivan over how the interim appointment of a town administrator should be handled.

Pratt was outraged that no advertisement had been made for a temporary replacement for Greg Doyon, who has resigned to accept a similar post in Abington. Doyon's last day is Jan. 17.

Pratt said the board voted Dec. 18 to advertise and to post the position with the Massachusetts Municipal Association, a support agency for cities and towns.

But Sullivan said three to four good candidates have already surfaced eliminating the need to advertise. Two of those candidates were slated to be interviewed this week.

"What difference does it make?" Sullivan asked about the lack of advertising.

But Pratt insisted that the board's directive was not carried out. He said the interim post could be a transitional one if the town opts to change the position from town administrator town manager, which would have considerably more power. He said there was no job description for the interim position.

But Selectmen Chairman Merle Brown said the job description would be the same one that Doyon was hired under.

At one point Sullivan charged that Pratt wanted John McNabb Jr. to apply for the position.

Pratt said Sullivan owed him an apology "right now." He said he was trying to keep the board's options open and said it was a despicable practice that advertising for an important position was not done.

McNabb, a local environmental activist who chairs the watershed protection committee, was at the meeting and said afterwards that he did not know why his name was mentioned as a potential candidate.

Selectman Nan Roth said there may be someone at town hall who could be utilized if they can't find someone right away.

The board decided to advertise through the MMA for two days and hopes to find a suitable candidate by the end of next week.

Selectmen also accepted Doyon's resignation and thanked him for his years of service and wished him well in his new job.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

McElroy Backs Lobster Lab Proposal

To the Editor:

As recently retired president of Cohasset Lightkeepers' Corporation, I had reservations about the Lobster Lab proposal. My concerns included whether it was expecting too much of the Lightkeepers so soon after their initial project; a better use could be made of the house and/or the land it sits on; whether the lobster lab would benefit a broad cross-spectrum of the Cohasset community; parking, etc.

President R.M. Campbell (CLC), Ralph Kidder (School Committee), Kathy Ofsthun (PSO), Al Moore (Hagerty Committee/Planning Board) and Kevin Ulmer (Head Lobster) have responded to all concerns with clarity and commitment.

With regard to my reservations, Campbell's highly successful career has been as an engineer and project manager, and he is backed by a CLC board that has the necessary talent and commitment. It's amazing that they are willing to take on a new challenge so soon, but "let's not look the proverbial gift horse in the mouth."

As Al Moore has said, nothing would be irreversible. If the project falters or a better plan is presented, the house will still be there and undoubtedly in better condition.

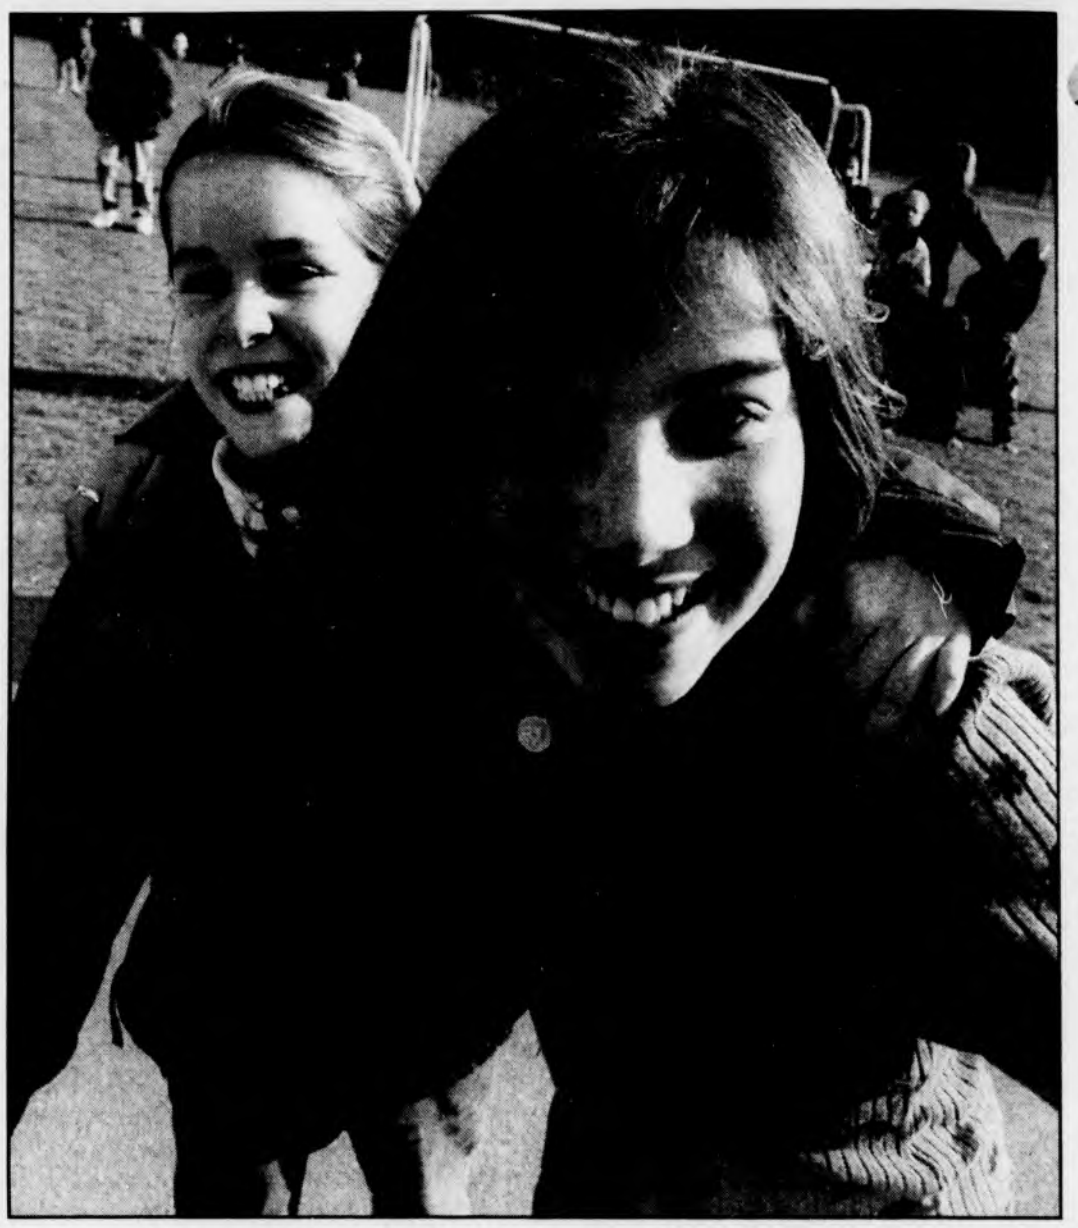
No one has suggested a better alternative, and I like the idea of the Lobster Lab anchoring the Government Island/Hagerty property with a year-round usage and on-site tenant. Both the lobsters and our youth are challenged by contemporary society; if we can help them, let's get on with it.

Parking and other legitimate concerns can be addressed during lease negotiations. The Lobster Lab could be kept closed on summer weekends.

The town needs to stabilize the house while bigger priorities are being funded by the taxpayers. The Lobster Lab is a good interim, and possibly long-term, solution. Who knows — one day there might be a "lobster in every pot."

Selectperson Roth's suggestion that a separate organization take on the task isn't realistic. The CLC has the necessary organizational structure and would avoid a duplication of functions and dilution of precious volunteer talent. As an approved 501C(3) non-profit organization with a proven track record, the CLC has a better chance of securing financial support than a start-up organization. The school district may benefit, but it has too many demands on its plate to help fund the project or take the leadership role.

Who knows? Ultimately we may lose the Marine Railway and will desperately need the house/property to support Cohasset's commercial and recreational boaters.



I suggest a five person negotiating committee consisting of two selectmen, two CLC members and a Hagerty Committee representative, and a presentation of the fruits of their labors at a public hearing to be scheduled soon.

Joe McElroy, past president,

Grapplers not Just 'Showing Up'

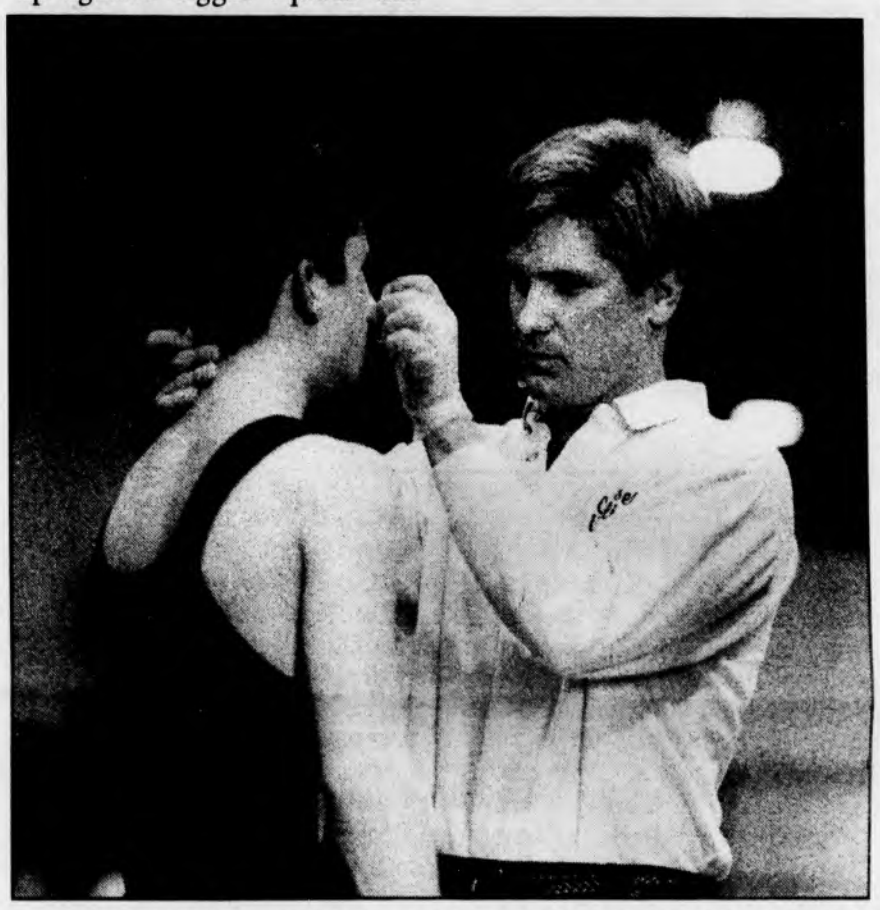
Wrestlers Improving Against the Best

By Joe Reardon
COHASSET MARINER

What you have with the Cohasset High wrestling team is a squad that "shows up," not in the sense the bus arrives and the Skipper grapplers get off, but more along the lines of giving an all-out effort without being intimidated.

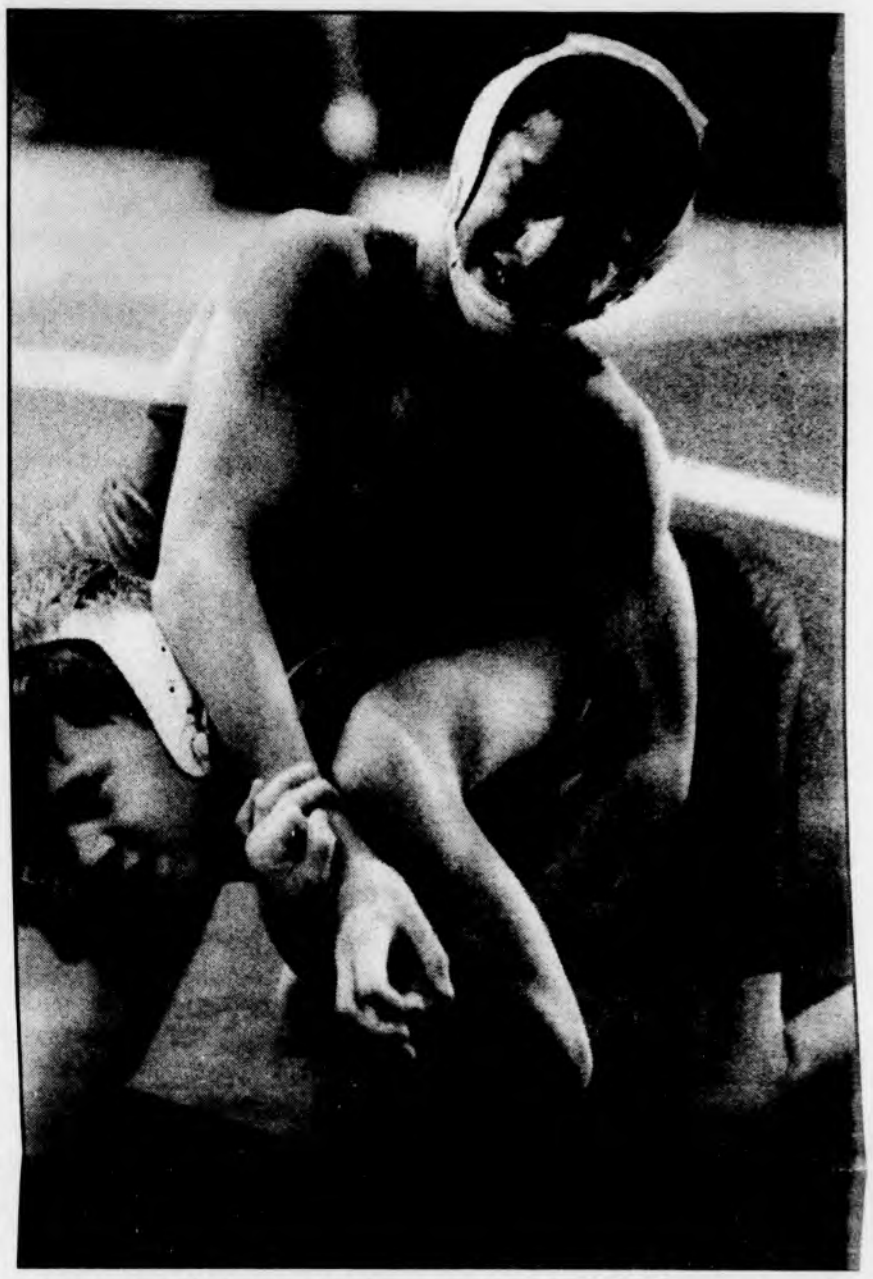
The 5-2 Skippers have gone up against bigger squads this season and earned a great deal of respect along the way. Against Bridgewater-Raynham, for example, Cohasset gave the Trojans their best meet of the year. Despite the loss, the Skippers still won six of the 14 weight classes. And Cohasset battled B.C. High until the bitter end until it finally fell short.

So it should come as no wonder that head coach Torin Sweeney's team was the highest placing Division 3 squad in the two-day Marshfield Holiday Tournament in late December. The Skippers nailed down seventh in the 19-team field with six grapplers placing in the top five.



Kevin Duffy was the top finisher with his second at 135 pounds. Mike Baird (125), Mike Rossi (145) and Justin Buckley (171) all wrestled to fourth-place finishes, while Ben Littauer and Jordan Fiore both took fifth at 125 and 130, respectively.

Sweeney is very satisfied with what he has seen from the mix of youngsters and more seasoned veterans. He can only see the team getting better, barring any physical problems.



"As long as we stay away from the injury bug we should be okay," said Sweeney.

Cohasset is currently fielding a strong roster with eighth-grader Craig Sheerin at 103, ninth-grader Chris Pratt wrestling at 112, senior captain Doug Sheerin (140), Luke Caldwell and Kevin DeVito (152), Justin Golden (160) who wrestles in the toughest weight class, Adam Sasso (189), J.P. Laugelle (215) and Tucker Gledhill, who has been wrestling at 125 and filling in as the "swing man" at 130.

Cohasset was expected to face Norwell on Wednesday, before what has become a very competitive meet on Saturday: The Whitman Hanson Invitational Tournament.

You can bet the Skippers won't be intimidated by any bigger teams. They'll show.

Patriots Highlight Wacky Weekend

Who in their wildest dreams, dare I say right mind, would have guessed that AFC juggernaut Denver Broncos and All-Pro felon Michael Irvin would have been knocked from the NFL playoffs in one wild weekend of football?

If that isn't reason enough for you to crack open the bubbly, consider this little tidbit just in from Foxboro: The Patriots are hosting the AFC title game!!!

Again. The Patriots are hosting the AFC title game!!!

Get the gospel choir together and sing the song.

It may have been a fog-fest, but the football gods were shining down on Foxboro.

New Englanders have a team they can fully embrace. And it comes when the sports scene inside Route 495 better resembles Apocalypse Now than professionals strutting their stuff.

Save for the Patriots (better yet, The Patriots Save), we've been held hostage by the antics of Roger Clemens, the complete ineptness of the Boston Celtics (can you say Tim Duncan?) and their He-Just-Doesn't-Get-It coach, M.L. Carr. The Bruins? Well they were "big and bad" a long time ago when dinosaurs walked the earth.

The Patriots and Steelers played through a thick fog last Sunday, but Bill Parcells' squad was on a mission that was loud and clear. There was no fear of the intangibles Kordell Stewart brought to Pittsburgh's offense. The Steelers' blitz was a bust and the Patriot defense was a lot more aggravating than Jerome Bettis' groin injury.

New England couldn't have played a better game. We saw the future of running backs in the N.F.L., and his name is Curtis Martin. Drew Bledsoe

Hoopsters Rock Rivals in OT

By Jim O'Sullivan
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

In a hard-fought game between two neighboring rivals, Cohasset High's boys basketball team beat Scituate in a 61-52 overtime thriller. It was the first meeting of the season between the two squads, but they had battled three times last year. Scituate posted victories in the regular season match-ups, including a blowout at Cohasset. But the Skippers won when it counted, beating the previously undefeated Sailors in the Division 3 South Sectional tourney.

The game was on both teams' minds last Friday night and only added to the intensity in the packed Cohasset gym.

Ryan Bishop stated the game with a lay-up and Paul Michael Quintin followed with a pull-up jumper. J.L. Williams also picked up a bucket and fed Jamie Buick on an entry pass to put the Skippers ahead 8-6. Williams knocked down a free throw and then drove to the hole for a pair. Senior captain Burke Davis nailed a base-line jumper and Quintin did the same, pushing the Skippers ahead, 15-12. Bishop hustled for two and Williams opened up a seven-point Cohasset lead with a three pomter and a free throw. Pat Hurley laid one in off the glass and Bishop closed the half with a freebie and a lay-up.

Davis drained a free throw for the home team's first points of the second half and Bishop cleaned the offensive boards and found the hoop for four straight points. Williams stuck a three pointer, putting Cohasset up 34-26. Bishop, who would finish with 17 points, pulled a beautiful turn-around move that earned him a basket and Quintin went the rack for two more. Davis ripped down an offensive board and scored with a nifty one-hander. Hurley netted a three pointer and Quintin followed with one of his own, but Scituate had pulled to within three, 46-43. Two clutch free throws by Bishop and sterling defense by the boys in blue preserved the Skippers' hope and forced overtime.

The Sailors drew first blood in the extra session, but Cohasset's 6-foot-9 Bishop calmly responded, tying the score at 50 with a pair from the free-throw line. Davis poured one in from beyond the arc and the Skippers held the 53-52 edge and the Sailors would not score again. Williams started to hammer the nails in the coffin with a jumper and Davis showed veteran poise by [illegible] straight free throws. Davis [illegible] in OT and ended 24.

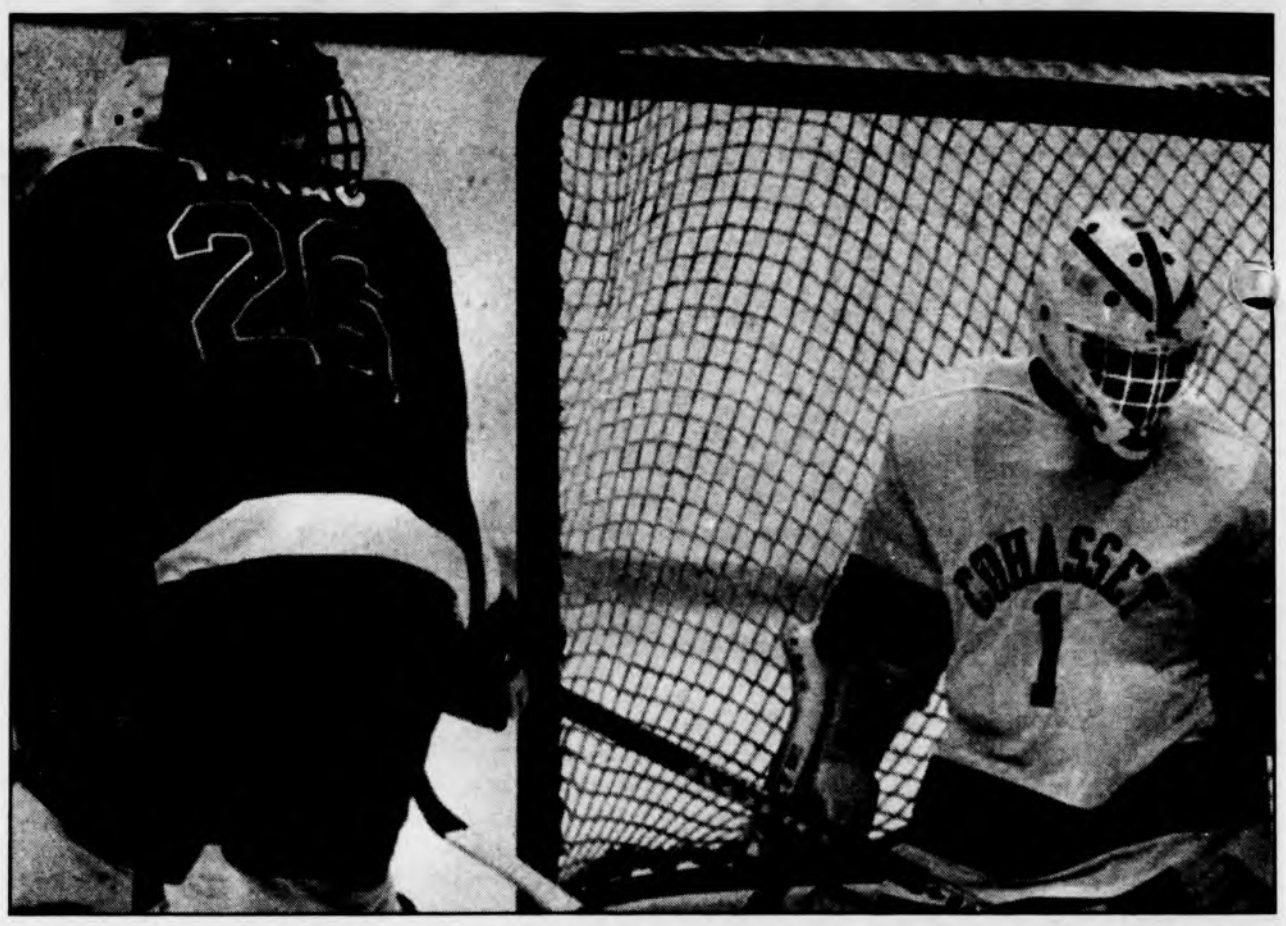
'Hockey Friends' Look to Community

Dear Friends of Cohasset Hockey:

The Cohasset High School hockey teams have been practicing since just after Thanksgiving and have already begun their 1996-97 game schedules.

Coach Dennis Walsh welcomed back a number of returning letter holders but this year's varsity team is young in terms of age. The Cohasset program will field a JV team this year as well with a large number of seventh and eighth graders.

The Cohasset Hockey Boosters support our players with an annual team dinner and attendance at a college hockey tournament game. We also provide trophies for outstanding performances by individual players and gift watches for the seniors on the team who will be graduating.



The hockey boosters are again asking for the support of local businesses, professionals and individuals to help sponsor and pay for these activities.

We and the players would appreciated any amount you can contribute. Please make your check payable to Cohasset Hockey Boosters and mail it to the Cohasset Hockey Boosters, P.O. Box 653, Cohasset, MA 02025. Your contribution is tax deductible. The names of all contributors will be acknowledged in the Cohasset Mariner unless otherwise requested.

We also invite you to support the teams by attending games. Most varsity games are played at the Pilgrim Arena in Hingham.

Thanks very much for your help.

Sincerely,
Kevin & Ann O'Connor

proved his critics wrong by winning the big game as he meticulously picked apart the Steelers' secondary as if he was searching for the petrified pickles in a Big Mac. Through it all, Terry Glenn looked like the second coming of Jerry Rice.

And we do it all again this weekend. Former Boston College coach Tom Coughlin brings his good-guy, Jacksonville Jaguar team to town in an attempt to derail the Patriots' bandwagon. The Jaguars have some work ahead of them. Patriot Nation will be out in full force, louder and more animated than ever.

Fans will have their faces, chests and kids painted in the Patriots' colors.

Tailgate parties, which used to solely be a pre-game tradition, will continue through the entire game and you'll see scalpers getting up to $500 per ticket if Foxboro's finest don't get to them first.

This is The Game. From here on in every game is The Game and the fans know it.

People are going to churches and lighting candles in hopes Parcells will return, instead of jumping ship and patching together the New York Jets. Knowing Parcells, the Big Tuna could talk Joe Namath out of retirement.

The talk show call lines will be lit up all week with Monday-Morning Quarterbacks swearing they positively knew the Patriots were going to beat up on the Steelers as much as they did.

The Patriots should beat the Jaguars. In their only other meeting this season, Jacksonville twice pulled off its best Flutie-to-Phelan impression to bounce back from a 22-0 deficit. Adam Vanieri gave the Patriots the win with a huge, overtime field goal. The Jaguars are a far better team now, but so is New England.

But even if the Patriots fall to Jacksonville, fans should stand and take note. They have a special team on the gridiron every week. New England provided its loyal and bandwagon followers football action that hasn't been seen in this neck of the woods for 10 years.

Instead of Irvin we have Martin. Instead of the ingratiating Deion Sanders, the humble, soft-spoken Curtis Martin is our man. Bob Kraft and Parcells are a far cry from those two leeches Jerry Jones and Barry Switzer. "America's Team" has suddenly become "America's Most Wanted Team." Indictments will be handed out instead of champagne bottles.

Nope. It's the Patriots who are enjoying the fruits of their labors. They're New England's Team. Fans — eat, drink and be merry. The Patriots have brought us through some tough times. Bask in the football merriment. Savor the fervor of the next week. We deserve a winner in New England and the team just could defeat N.F.C, MVP Award Winner Brett Favre and the Green Bay Packers.

But let's not look too far ahead.

Parcells will instill in his players not to look ahead to Green Bay, but concentrate on Jacksonville. If they don't, they'll never make it to New Orleans.

Once they get to New Orleans, however, New England will have all the Jumbalaya they can eat. But Jacksonville provides a formidable opponent and the Patriots will have to hold off on the "tasty" soup for a few weeks.

The fog will settle once again on Foxboro Stadium, bringing back the memories of last weekend.

Happy, and fond memories.

The game should be one huge Kodak moment inside a Hallmark card — a present to its loyal and unconditional fans. They deserve the best and the Patriots may just fit that bill.

Stage Set for Scituate Showdown

By Joe Reardon
COHASSET MARINER

The Cohasset High gymnastics team had its "feel good" meet of the season in its 120.85 — 104 win over Notre Dame of Hingham last Friday night. But Monday's 122.4 — 111.4 decision against Norwell wasn't exactly what you would call a downer either.

Assistant coach Ruthann Ardizzoni said the Lady Skippers look forward to the ND meet because the girls are friendly with several gymnasts on the squad who hail from Cohasset. The meet gives both teams the chance to compete against each other and get caught up on their respective seasons.

The meet may have been enjoyable for the athletes involved, but it fell short of keeping you on the edge of your seat.

Competing without the services of key player Tara Hettstrom, the Lady Skippers were still able to sweep all four events and take first in the all-around.

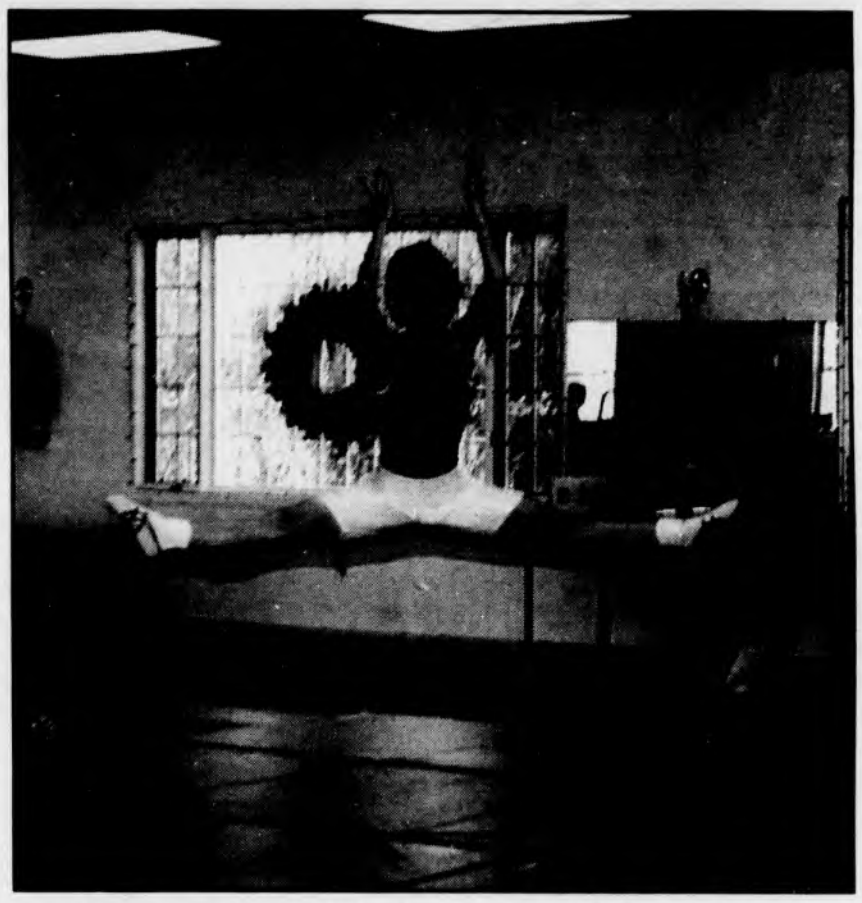
Erica Hettstrom finished in the top three in three events with two first-place showings on the bars (8.0) and beam (8.0), as well as second on the floor exercise (8.15). Seventh-graders Caitlin Flint and Kristin Sheerin continued their strong contributions to the Lady Skipper squad. Flint was second to Erica Hettstrom on the bars at 7.25, and Sheerin won the floor (8.2), placed third on the vault (7.6) and second with her beam routine (7.85). Jodi Colwill's 7.75 vault score garnered her a first, to go along with a personal best of 7.7 on the floor and 7.5 on the beam. Those scores were both good for third place.

Several other Cohasset gymnasts performed well. Carolyn Pratt, Kate Grimm, Carlie Carter, Amanda Watts and Megan Pratt were impressive in their respective events.

With Tara Hettstrom out, however, the Lady Skippers' score was considerably lower than it would have been otherwise. Ardizzoni, though, had little to fret about on this day.

"We didn't go with our full lineup so I was very pleased with our performance," she said.

Tara Hettstrom was back for Monday's win over Norwell, but her sister Erica was out nursing an injured ankle. Ardizzoni said the injury isn't a serious one and Erica should be back for the big meet against undefeated Scituate.



Tara Hettstrom led the sweep on bars. Her 7.5 edged Sheerin's 7.4 and Flint's third place 7.2. The Lady Skippers showed a dramatic improvement on the vault with Sheerin nailing a flawless landing for a 8.2 and first place. Colwill's 7.9 clinched her the second-place slot, while Flint and Kristen Reynolds finished in a tie for third, just behind Colwill, at 7.8.

The places were reversed on beam as Colwill edged Sheerin, 8.1 to 8.0, respectively. Reynolds, who has continued to improve after a fine season last year, wound up with third. Her score was a 7.2.

The judges were obviously impressed enough with Sheerin's floor routine to award her an 8.3. Fellow seventh-grader Flint was second at 7.8, followed by Megan Pratt in 7.6. Sheerin took the all-around in 31.9. Colwill followed with a score of 30.5.

Wednesday's meet against a very deep Scituate team was expected to be decided by only a few points at most. One thing is for sure. By the end of the meet, there will only be on remaining undefeated squad in the SSL.

"I think this is going to be a real close meet," Ardizzoni said.

Coaching Passion

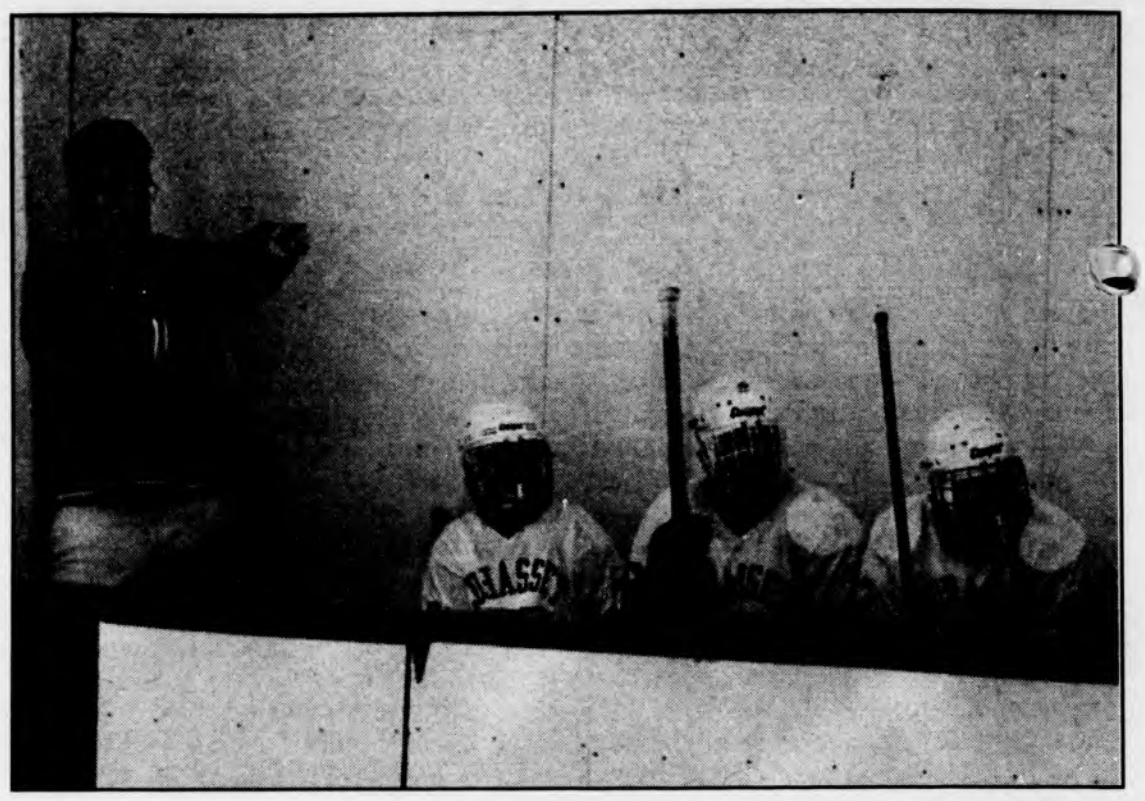
coach," Walsh said.

He has always had an attraction to the sport and still teaches clinics to kids who range in age from 6 to 14 on Saturdays during the summer at Pilgrim Arena.

"I enjoy coaching the kids," Walsh said. "You really see a lot of improvement in their skills. You can correct the mistakes they make and help eliminate the bad habits before they reach high school."

Walsh is also able to catch a glimpse of the future of hockey on the South Shore. And while many high school programs flourish because of local youth hockey, Walsh believes the absence of an established program in Cohasset, save for the Seahawks, has definitely hurt the high school.

He remembers when the old Cohasset rink would be filled with hockey players. But when it closed, the local youth program went along with it.



Despite the lack of a youth feeder system, Walsh still likes the product he puts on the ice. He knows this year's 1-3 squad is a better team that it has shown, so far, but is confident the Skippers will "come around."

The team had trouble getting puck out of its own end in a recent 5-2 loss against South Shore League opponent Hull, but was pleased with Danny Williams and Brad Powell, who both scored goals for the Skippers.

Even after all the years he has coached, Walsh still gets the same feeling he got back in Canada as a youngster when game time was just minutes away.

"It hasn't changed," he said. "I get nervous before every game and excited before practices. Losses still bother me and I love when we win."

As long as he goes through the gamut of emotions associated with coaching, Walsh will stay behind the boards, peering out and analyzing his players. The thrill is still there for him.

Cohasset High hockey coach Dennis Walsh makes an observation during a recent Skipper game. Walsh has been coaching since the age of 16 while growing up in Canada.

Tax-free strategies for the philanthropist in you

By the editors of
WORTH MAGAZINE

Charities, foundations, and colleges, caught up in the hard sell that philanthropy has become, are pitching a new breed of trust and annuity.

In effect, these devices allow benefactors to designate donations they plan to make in the future. In return, the benefactor gets an upfront tax deduction, as well as ongoing income from the assets they pledge.

Are these trusts and annuities mere gimmickry, or are they really a good deal? Think hard before you answer. If charity is your principal motivation, you might do better giving cash or appreciated securities that will immediately benefit the recipient. If tax avoidance is your principal motivation, gifts made in the here and now also usually provide the biggest and most immediate benefits.

Still, many would-be philanthropists prefer the new tools, not least because of the higher tax rates that arrived with the Clinton administration. Furthermore, some people like the idea of demonstrating their commitment to a favored institution but still need the investment income that an immediate gift of assets would deny them.

Enter the charitable remainder trust. These irrevocable trusts, used primarily for large donations, earmark funds for an institution but continue to pay the donor and his or her spouse a yearly income for life. When the donors die, the funds in the trust are transferred to the institutional beneficiary.

There are two basic types of charitable remainder trust: the annuity trust, which distributes a fixed dollar amount to the donor each year, and the unitrust, which distributes a fixed percentage of the trust's assets. The payouts to the donor are generally taxable for both types of trust.

The tax break for both types comes from the deduction that is created when the trust is established. The amount of this deduction is calculated by using Internal Revenue Service tables to figure what the gift will be worth when it is actually transferred to the institutional recipient.

Of the two types of trust, the annuity version provides the larger upfront deduction. This is because fixed dollar payouts shrink the trust principal less over time than the unitrust's percentage-of-assets payouts. For instance, suppose a 60-year-old donor wants to establish a $100,000 charitable remainder trust. According to PhilanthroTec, a Matthews, N.C., software publisher, a donor who sets this trust up as an annuity paying a fixed $6,000 a year would be entitled to value his gift, for purposes of the tax deduction, at $40,314. If the donor chooses a unitrust paying 6 percent of total assets each year, his gift would be valued at only $36,163.

One caveat: The annuity-trust beneficiary cited above must understand that he will never receive more than $6,000 a year from his trust. The unitrust beneficiary, on the other hand, receives 6 percent of the trust's assets each year no matter how much they increase. Thus, of the two, the unitrust offers the best protection against inflation.

The costs of creating and administering charitable remainder trusts usually make them impractical for smaller contributions. As an alternative, donors might consider a charitable-gift annuity. For these, the donor grants immediate possession of the gift to the institutional beneficiary, rather than placing it in a trust. New York's Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts, for instance, offers an annuity with guaranteed annual payments for life starting at age 55 for donations of $10,000 or more.

In setting annuity payments for these types of gifts, most charities, including Lincoln Center, use a schedule adopted by the American Council on Gift Annuities, which represents 1,400 organizations. The schedule is calculated to help the organization ultimately keep at least half of the original annuity investment. Thus the layout rates aren't the most generous, ranging from 4.7 percent to 11 percent a year, depending on the donor's age. "I won't pretend this is a great investment," says David Clough, director of planned giving at Lincoln Center.

Often, a portion of an annuity payout is tax free as return of principal. The donor also gets an upfront tax deduction for his gift; how much depends on his age and the number of years for which payment is deferred. Younger donors — in their 30s and 40s — beware. "You shouldn't tie yourself up in that sort of fixed-income investment," says William H. Mears, senior vice president at Brown Brothers Harriman Trust in New York City.

Inflation hedgers may prefer a charity's pooled-income fund to a charitable annuity. A $5,000 investment — most institutions won't take less — goes into a sort of mutual fund that distributes interest earned until the donor's death. Pooled-income funds generally invest in Treasuries or high-grade corporate debt; some are venturing into equities. Payouts from pooled-income funds are fully taxable. The charitable tax deduction available to the contributors depends on their age and the fund's highest yield over the prior three years.

Fidelity Investments announces redesigned corporate Web site

Fidelity Investments has redesigned, renamed, and expanded its Web site. The site, now located at www.fidelity.com, offers a broad range of investment information and features new sections geared toward investment professionals, retirement plan administrators, and individuals who choose to use an investment adviser.

Existing sections for individual investors have been expanded to include more educational content, planning tools, and interactive programming. Fidelity also brings online a selection of annual and semiannual mutual fund shareholder reports.

"Fidelity was the first mutual fund company to establish a site on the Internet," said Roger T. Servison, managing director and executive vice president of Fidelity Investments. "We are continually expanding the way we communicate with, educate, and empower our investors and our corporate and institutional clients, and this new site provides everything that Fidelity has to offer.

"Our customers invest in many different ways and have different needs. Now, whether they invest directly, through an employer, through an investment adviser, as a business, or through a combination of these channels, they can access one Web site for the information, rich content, and tools they need to help them become more-informed investors," Servison continued.

"Our investors demand timely, relevant information on our funds, products, and services, and on who we are as a company, and www.fidelity.com allows us to deliver this information — and much more — faster and more conveniently than ever before," he added.

Register for Nursery School

The South Shore Community Center Nursery School announces that nursery school applications for the 1997-98 school year will be available, Tuesday, Jan. 21 at the nursery school and community center offices.

Registration is based on a lottery system.

Applications are available Jan. 21-27.

Completed applications must be returned to the community center office by Wednesday, Jan. 29. Applications should be clearly marked "N.S. Registration Application."

Parents registering their child in the Three-Year-Old Program should enclose a copy of the child's birth certificate to ensure proper placement of students in the program. All applications must include the $85 registration fee. Family membership for the school year is included in the fee. There is no financial commitment for children who are placed on the waiting list; these checks will be returned.

The lottery will be drawn for siblings of nursery school students on Monday, Feb. 3. Children of current community center members (as of Dec. 31, 1996) will be drawn on the morning of Tuesday, Feb. 4 and for the general public in the afternoon.

Nursery school acceptance letters will be sent via the mail on Friday, Feb. 7.

The school offers three levels of programs to meet the needs of three-to-five year olds. Programs run from 9 to 11:30 a.m. and from 12:30 to 3 p.m. Some extended afterschool programs will be available.

The nursery program is for children who will be three years of age by Oct. 20, 1997. The Pre-Kindergarten program is for children who are, or will be, four years old by Oct.. 20, 1997. The Five-Day Enrichment program is offered to older four year olds, and five year olds who have attended a pre-kindergarten program but are ineligible for kindergarten.

Middle School is Topic

Attention fifth-, sixth-, seventh- and eighth-grade parents: there will be a Middle School informational meeting at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, Jan. 14 in the high school cafeteria.

Cohasset will have a Middle School next year. This meeting will address issues specific to Cohasset, report on where the project stands to date and provide ample time for questions and answers. The meeting will be hosted by Curtis Collins and the Middle School Task Force. Parents on the task force include: Debbie Niessink, Joan Pyfrom, Elaine Smoot and Midge Stone.

Pool Tourney at Teen Center

The Teen Center will have a pool tournament and pizza party from 7 to 10 p.m., Friday, Jan. 10. The Center will also be open on Saturday from 7 to 10 p.m. Don't forget to sign up for the Waterville Valley Day Ski Trip that will take place on Monday, Jan. 20.

Registration forms can be picked up at the Town Hall/Recreation Department and must be returned by Friday, Jan. 10. Please join us for a fun day skiing!

Register for Art Classes

Looking for a way to brighten the winter months? Creating art is the perfect antidote to the winter doldrums! The South Shore Art Centers winter term begins the week of Jan. 21 and offers classes and workshops for pre-K through adult of all levels and abilities.

The center also offers PDP points for educators, courses that qualify for Mass. College of Art credits and a special ART PLUS February vacation camp.

Although most courses run for eight weeks, some are four week mini courses and there are several one and two-day workshops to choose from.

Carley Zappolo steps off the bus on her way to afternoon kindergarten at Deer Hill School.

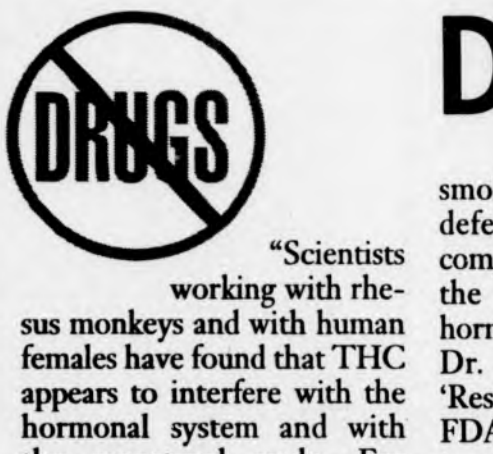
GOING PLACES



AZORES: THE LOST ATLANTIS?

If a sun-dappled vacation tinged with a touch of mystery sounds like just the ticket to brighten a dreary winter, the Azores may be your kind of place. Located in the Atlantic Ocean, about 900 miles west of Portugal, the nine islands that make up the Azores are home to mountain peaks shrouded in mist, shining white beaches, volcanoes both dormant and recently active, and a colorful riot of vegetation. The Azorean people won their independence from Portugal in 1974, and they have been cultivating a tourism industry ever since. Still, part of the Azores' charm is that they are relatively unknown to many tourists. Accommodations at an ocean-front hotel may be as little as $60 per night, with a fine meal of local produce and seafood available for $15 or less. So beautiful is this island chain that some have theorized it may be the fabled Atlantis, swallowed up by the ocean centuries ago.

Consider us your ticket to fabled lands everywhere here at SCITUATE HARBOR TRAVEL, where we are fully experienced to guide you through choosing an unusual destination like the Azores, to the comparison of complicated airline fares. It's hard to believe, too, that our many services cost you nothing above the price of your tickets, accommodations, rentals, etc. Sound good? Come see us at 53 Cole Parkway, Scituate Harbor, or call 545-4281 or 800-354-2720.

HINT: The writer and commentator William F. Buckley Jr. has called the Azores "simply stated, the most beautiful group of islands in the world."

DRUG FACT

"Scientists working with rhesus monkeys and with human females have found that THC appears to interfere with the hormonal system and with the menstrual cycle. For example, Dr. Joan Bauman and Dr. Robert Kolodny found that 38.8 percent of pot smokers they studied had defective menstrual cycles, compared to 12 percent of the non-pot smokers. Sex hormones were also affected. Dr. Bauman pointed out: 'Researchers are forbidden by FDA regulations to administer marijuana to teenagers in the course of controlled experiments. But we are particularly worried about what the drug may be doing to preteen and teen-aged girls. Any of the effects we found could be even stronger before the body's endocrine-regulated systems have matured.'"

Deer Hill Budget is Discussion Topic

Additonal Staff Needed

By Jason Bouffard
COHASSET MARINER

Deer Hill Elementary School principal Paul Callahan will seek budget hikes for the 1997-98 school year to pay for increased staffing, including a health aide, activity aide, and teachers.

The total proposed budget increased by 5.9 percent over last year's, from $1,342,227 to $1,422,377, about an $80,000 jump.

Sixty-six percent of the total increase is due to an approximate $53,000 hike in the "grade four allotment." A proposed $225,579 will be required to meet the grade's needs — a 30 percent rise from the $172,470 1996-97 figure.

The hike is due in part to an additional fourth-grade teacher. Five sections will be needed to accommodate next year's fourth-grade class, and Callahan anticipates that a sixth section will be required the following year.

In addition, new grade four social studies and science texts and kits will be needed since no purchases of these items have been made in the last two years.

Callahan's budget also calls for an additional 1-1/2 hours of work by activity aides, changing the hours of tow of the school's three activity aides form 9:45 a.m. to 1:15 p.m., to 8 a.m. to 1 p.m., The change is intended to accommodate new responsibilities, including supervision of students before school. Activity aides will also call the parents of students who have not notified the office about their child's absence in order to ensure that those students did indeed stay home from school.

Activity aides will continue to provide office assistance and supervision of lunch and recess periods, Callahan said. A $2,385 salary increase would accompany the additional responsibilities.

In an effort to increase coverage in the school nurse's office, Callahan proposed to hire a health aide. Currently, the school nurse splits time between Deer Hill and Osgood.

"Because of the number of students requiring health assistance, the Deer Hill School needs full-time coverage in the nurse's office," Callahan wrote in a memo to the school committee. "An alternative to having (current nurse) Mrs. Murphy work full time at Deer Hill is to hire another health care provider to split the time between the Deer Hill School and the Osgood School."

The proposal calls for a Deer Hill budget increase of $7,000.

The health aide will be e called upon to provide non-serious first aid procedures with the school secretary and principal are currently required to provide in the nurse's absence.

An educational component may also be part of the health aide's job description.

Callahan and Hart also discussed their "wish list" for the school if more money was available. While Callahan listed physical improvements to the school as well as advancements in the technology area, Hart talked about increased staffing, especially specialized staffing, as a means to bringing the school system to the next level. He used the example of reading specialists as the type of educator which could help Cohasset's school system to improve.

recently lost its Title 1 privileges due to a limited number of low income families. Since then, the school has been trying to make due without a reading specialist, the principal said.

The school currently employs four special needs teachers, none of which focus predominantly on reading. According to Cantelmo, referring students with reading difficulties to the special needs staff can result in overburdening.

The proposed specialist would work as a co-teacher, side by side with regular classroom teachers, offering assistance to all students. The person would split time as both a reading specialist and a moderate special needs (MSN) teacher. Due to the loss of Title 1 benefits, the position would be town-funded.

School Committee Chairman Ralph Kidder was unsure about the feasibility of expecting the specialist to give equal attention to special needs and non-special needs students.

Superintendent Stephen Hart said that early attention to reading problems could help students avoid bigger problems later on.

"This possibly will prevent some students from having to move into special ed," Hart said.

Cantelmo, who has served as Title 1 Director in another school system, said that most schools do enlist the aid of a reading specialist.

The new position accounts for $35,492 of the $50,292 increase in the proposed Special Education budget from this year to next.

While special needs funding would increase by 26 percent, the total school budget increases by just under 5.6 percent, from roughly $1.48 million to $1.56 million.

Cantelmo said that the budget goal was to level fund or decrease funding in certain areas to afford additional resources which the staff deemed important. Capital expenditures were also held to a minimum, she said.

Aside from the reading specialist, other additional resources included a health aide. Currently, the school shares an aide with the Deer Hill School and enlists help from a parent volunteer. The health budget would rise from $16,035 to $23,140.

By grade level, kindergarten through third, the largest increases are in salaries, but some funding requests were made for textbook and workbook purchases.

The school committee will continue budget discussions for Cohasset's schools tonight (Thursday) at 7:30 p.m. in the audio/visual room at Cohasset High School.

Wrought-Iron Gate Thefts are Under Investigation

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

Cohasset, Scituate and Marshfield police are investigating a spate of thefts of ornamental wrought iron gates and other decorative fixtures from local residences over the past month.

Det. Rick Grassie said three gates have been stolen, a large ornamental planter, and a weather vane all from Cohasset homes on Beach Street, Bound Brook Lane, Jerusalem Road and Nichols Road.

The items range in value from $1,000 to $4,000 and up, he said.

Grassie said the thefts take place between midnight and 6 a.m. Police have no clues except for truck tracks left at one of the crime scenes indicating the truck has double rear wheels.

He warned homeowners to try to secure their gates and keep them lit if possible.

Polly Logan, 121 Nichols Rd., said her five-foot high garden gates, which were part of the formal gardens at the old Logan estate, were stolen sometime early Monday morning.

She said her guests left at 11:15 p.m. and she turned the flood lights off by midnight. Logan said she was shocked when she went out to get the morning paper and discovered her garden gates were missing.

"They are priceless, how can I replace them?" she asked.

Police are trying to obtain photographs of the stolen items.

Marshfield police said the apparent thefts began with the disappearance of two stone griffins from a Summer Street home in that town Nov. 11.

Subsequent thefts included two large iron Victorian urns and another antique urn.

Similar thefts have also been reported in Scituate.

Police believe the perpetrators check the items out during the day. Anyone who sees anything suspicious should contact Cohasset police at 383-1055.

Eight Accidents Reported

Police Sgt. Robert Jackson said police investigated eight motor vehicle accidents during the season's first snowstorm on Dec. 31. No injuries were reported.

"Apparently people forgot how to drive in the snow," he said.

Jackson noted that half the accidents involved four-wheel-drive vehicles.

"The laws of physics apply to those vehicles," he said. "They take just as long to stop."

Jackson cautioned that when it's snowing outside, people should drive below the speed limit.

Citizens Petition for Town Manager

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

A Citizens Petition article for a town manager will appear on the March town meeting warrant, selectmen learned Monday.

Thomas Gruber, 8 Pratt Court, spoke on behalf of the petitioners, at Monday's selectmen's meeting.

Gruber thanked Cohasset Town Administrator Gregory Doyon, who is stepping down to accept a position in Abington, for his service to the town and wished him well, but said the vacancy gives the town the opportunity to examine its form of government.

"I hear good things from Hull," Gruber said. Hull has a town manager, a position that can vary from town to town but generally has more power than a town administrator does.

"Look at the size and budget of Cohasset," Gruber said, pointing out the caliber of the position that someone in private industry would hold to handle a business the size of the town of Cohasset.

Gruber said the town might be able to save the amount of the town manager's salary "many times over" if it were run more efficiently. He pointed to the recent cost overruns on the Department of Public Works garage. Overages, he said, perhaps would not have occurred if the town had a full-time manager.

According to the Massachusetts Municipal Association, town managers, who serve at the pleasure of Residents Hope for Fair Septic Plan

By Jason Bouffard
COHASSET MARINER

Town residents appeared less resistant to the proposed wastewater management program at the Jan. 7 workshop with the board of health, showing more concern in finding the best solution to the wastewater issue than was the case last month.

The sentiment may have been a reaction to board of health chairman Tom Cook's clear presentation of the reasons why a septic system maintenance plan must be developed. Cook opened the night's discussion by explaining that the town is mandated by the Department of Environmental Protection to assemble a wastewater management plan and that, with a management plan, the town becomes eligible for state loans. He also stressed that the plan would help protect the environment.

Some residents raised objections to these points. For example, it was suggested that the town stay away from state funds because of the "strings attached." As one resident stated, while most people favor preserving the environment, the cost of doing so is causing some worry.

Chairman Cook spelled out the potential costs associated with a septic system maintenance plan. Using what he called "average figures," he argued that some 1,300 homes with on-site systems would require inspection to determine whether or not they meet Title V criteria. With an average cost of $600 per inspection, the total cost to the town would

Pay as You Throw Trash Plan Challenged

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

Cohasset's proposed pay-as-you-throw program may be trashed before it starts.

Ron Massa, 140 N. Main St., told selectmen this week that there is "strong and growing opposition" to the plan which would require residents to purchase see-through trash bags at $1 a piece in lieu of the $65 annual sticker for the Recycling Transfer Facility (RTF) off Cedar Street.

Massa submitted two citizens petition warrant articles for the March town meeting which could amend the by-law to take away the authority selectmen have in setting rates for trash service and freeze fees at the current rate.

Selectmen decided to enact the new program this spring as a way to encourage more recycling and lower the town's tonnage of trash sent to SEMASS in Rochester, Mass. by 10 percent, not including savings in the reduction of hauling fees.

The recycling committee estimates that with increased recycling, an average household would use one, 33-gallon size bag per week for trash.

But Massa stressed that some see the pay-as-you-throw system as a whopping fee increase.

"I took an informal survey of 100 people and not one person used one bag or less. Almost all use two to three, and in some instances even more," he said. "That would increase our cost (to use the RTF) by 100, 200 or 300 percent."

A frustrated Selectmen Chairman Merle Brown said the pay-as-you-throw program should be given a

Elder Affairs Budget Jumps

The Council on Elder Affairs (CEA) proposed fiscal year 1998 budget is up more than $15,000 — the bulk of which will go to the South Shore Community Center (SSCC), which houses the Senior Center.

CEA director Joseph Buckley told selectmen this week the community center wants the Senior Center, which uses 25 percent of the facility, to pay for an equivalent part of the operating expenses of the building such as real estate taxes, water, custodial services, maintenance, insurance, and office administration.

Buckley explained that while the three-year-old Senior Center has an agreement that it doesn't have to pay rent, he thinks it is fair to be asked to pay part of the operating expenses of the building.

"We knew it would be rent free but we knew higher taxes or something would come along, so we left the opening there," Buckley said about the CEA's agreement with the community center.

Buckley said the Community Center needs the money and urged selectmen to support the budget increase.

"I think Elder Services is a great asset to the town and I also think the Community Center is a great asset for the town," he said.

Selectmen approved the CEA's proposed budget for fiscal year 1998, which is $83,138 up from $67,072 this year. The increase includes $13,000 for facilities maintenance for the Community Center and $3,000 more for the Outreach Coordinator, whose hours will increase.

Bill Payments are Approved

This week selectmen approved payment of the following bills:

- $6,730 to Nucci Vine Associates for matters related to the harbor dredging project;
- $682.44 & $998.97 to Joerres Electric for work on the DPW garage.
- $2,978.92 & $2,085.31 to town counsel Deutsch Williams Brooks for invoices dated Dec. 9 and Nov. 8, 1996.

Town Accountant's Budget Reviewed

Selectmen support the town accountant's proposed fiscal year 1998 budget of $61,750 up from $59,269 in FY'97, which ends June 30.

The increase reflects a jump of $2,981 in town accountant Michael Buckley's salary per his contractual agreement.

Ten Minutes for Walk-ins

Selectmen set aside 10 minutes at 8 p.m. on their meeting nights to address any concerns from members of the public who have issues that are not on the agenda.

If the matter cannot be handled briefly, it will be placed on a future agenda, selectmen said.

Building Inspector Budget Approved

This week, selectmen approved the proposed fiscal year 1998, $47,701 budget for the building inspector. The budget, which is up just .05 percent over last year, includes $156 for a pager for the plumbing inspector.

Ambulance Billing Update

In December, the town billed for 34 ambulance transports totalling $12,040.39 and collected $8,469.04 in the same period. So far in fiscal year 1997, which ends June 30, the town has collected $59,845.73 (applied to invoices from all previous years) and sent bills for $70,413.14 (for transports occurring only in FY'97).

Upcoming Meetings are Noted

The following meetings have been posted outside the town clerk's office at town hall:

- Board of Health, 7 p.m., Jan. 21.
- Conservation Commission, 7:30 p.m., Jan. 16.
- Planning Board, 8 p.m., Jan. 29.
- Selectmen, 7:30 p.m., Jan. 21.
- Sewer Commission, 6:30 p.m. & 7:30 p.m., Feb. 4. and March 12.
- School Committee, 7:30 p.m., Jan. 16, AV room at the high school.

All meetings are at town hall unless otherwise noted. Room locations are posted on the bulletin board in the vestibule at town hall on the day of the meeting. Check with the town clerk or the particular board's office at town hall (383-9900) for any cancellations.

Eight Inches of Snow Surprise Cohasset

Residents of Cohasset woke up Saturday morning to the second snowstorm of the season, which blanketed the town with eight inches.

The storm took everyone, including the weathermen, by surprise. Snow fell steadily until midday, tapering off at about 11:30 a.m. By 1 p.m., the sun had peeked its head out from behind the clouds. It shone brightly throughout the afternoon, making the snow glisten.

"We were told, we'd get one inch to a dusting and we got eight inches," said Harold Litchfield, head of Cohasset's department of public works.

There were six more motor vehicle accidents during the storm on Route 3A, Beechwood Street, Border Street, and King Street, said Police Sgt. Robert Jackson, adding that weather was a factor in the mishaps.

Eight accidents occurred during the New Year's Eve storm.

According to Mariner weather observer Bob Skilling, the weather computer models did a poor job with this storm, and the forecast snow total had to be updated as the snow was falling.

"The density of the snow (water content) was well below what we normally experience around here. Sometimes it is termed a 'dry snow,'" he explained. "In other words, eight inches of snow usually would melt down to about 0.8 inches of precipitation, but this one could manage only 0.45 inch. The ratio was 18 inches of snow to one inch of precipitation rather than the usual 10 to one ratio."

A comparison of snowfall this season versus last season to date shows 15 inches so far this season and a whopping 62 inches through this date last year, Skilling said.

Litchfield said the Jan. 11 storm cost $9,354.91 out of the $45,344 snow budget, of which, $26,137.60 remains. He pointed out that repairs to snowplows come out of the budget which is also used for plowing and sanding.

Litchfield said so far this season the department has been out 23 times. Last year at this time, plowers and sanders had been out 52 times.

Lamberts Lane Neighbors Still Want Safety Solutions

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

Lamberts Lane neighbors were back before selectmen this week to get get the status on a list of action items to improve the safety of their road.

While selectmen had some answers, implementation of the measures, such as blasting ledge and cutting down trees, must wait until town counsel advises on who must give permission for the work.

Lamberts Lane is one of a number of "private ways" in town but in 1980, then town clerk Charles Marks certified that Lamberts Lane is maintained and used as a public way in town in accordance with state law, status that could allow the town to do improvements, the neighbors say.

So selectmen want to pass the matter on to town counsel for his opinion on what the town can do and if it's necessary to obtain permission from the various homeowners before taking any action.

Fifteen miles per hour traffic signs were installed along Lamberts Lane after the neighbors appealed to selectmen in September to do something about the dangerous traffic situation there.

They were back in December to lobby for more measures such as moving utility poles back from the street, cutting down trees near the roadway, and blasting away some of a large outcropping of ledge that contributes to visibility problems.

Construction of new homes on the narrow street has added to traffic.

Selectmen Chairman Merle Brown said that 11 trees have been marked to be cut down. The town engineer is looking at the road but his report was not available this week.

The town would need permission from the property owner to blast about 30 percent of the ledge nearest to the road, selectmen said.

But Selectman Ronnie McMorris pointed out that before the board can make a determination on what to do, they must talk with town counsel.

"The question is permission," she said.

Getting Back to Spiritual Basics

The Task Force on Spirituality and Healing of the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset has scheduled their second workshop for the general public under the heading of "Pathways to Healing II." At last November's "Pathways to Healing I," four area practitioners shared their expertise and insights with an inspired audience. With a request for a more in-depth experience, just two practitioners will present at "Pathways to Healing II" Wednesday, Jan. 22, 7:30 p.m., at the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset (next to Town Hall).

Dr. Bruce Indek, a local chiropractor, will present a talk on "Universal Innate Healing Energies" to help us understand some of the basic interconnections involved in natural and spiritual healing practices. Then, Charles Mangat-Raj ("Raj"), a local, retired Yoga master will share thoughts and techniques on breath and its role in Yo practice. The event is free and open to the public. Call 383-0345 for directions or further information.

chance. Brown, who sits on the recycling committee, is a strong proponent of the program, which will encourage more recycling.

Plans were to produce a pamphlet explaining the program and to conduct meetings to educate citizens about it. Brown feels pay-as-you-throw is a fairer system than the present one when everyone pays the same amount regardless of how much trash they generate.

"The DEP (state Department of Environmental Protection) is giving us a grant to do this, they know it will reduce trash and also increases recycling," Brown said. "I can take you up there any day in the week and show you there are recyclables in there (trash)."

Brown said nixing the program before it has a chance to prove itself will disappoint those who worked so hard to bring it to fruition.

"Every town that has done it, has done it with success,"Brown said.

Massa said recycling is not the issue, it's the increase in fees the program would create. He said town voters not selectmen should decide.

Fifty percent of the costs of the RTF including hauling charges are on the tax base, the balance is covered through the stickers.

Selectman Nan Roth said she is concerned that giving town meeting control over the RTF fees could create budgetary problems because the town depends on those fees to pick up 50 percent of the cost of running the RTF.

But Massa said the voters can make the decision and claimed the estimates of one bag per week are grossly wrong.

"We can vote $10 million for schools, I think we have the intelligence (to determine) whatever it costs for us to recycle trash," he said. "We are upset with the way this was delivered to us."

Selectman Michael Sullivan said the program would encourage people to "really pack a bag" instead of using 1/2 or 3/4 full bags as may be the case now. He said ultimately the program could lower everyone's costs.

But Massa said the perception of pay-as-you-throw is that is is "just one more expense."

Town Manager

selectmen, can have relatively "strong" or "weak" roles in the administration of the town, depending on how the position is defined.

Town managers can hire and fire and appoint certain town officials that would otherwise be elected or appointed by selectmen. But speaking for the petitioners, Gruber said they want all elected and appointed boards to remain in tact.

"The town manager will need every advice and counsel," he said.

The town manager position must be created by either a home rule charter or special act of the legislature. The duties, responsibilities, and authority of the position are described in the legal document establishing the position.

Gruber likened a town manager to a CEO of the town with the selectmen serving in the role of the board of directors, providing guidance but not managing the town on a day to day basis.

He said the citizens petition article in no way casts aspersions on the way Doyon has done his job.

"We are greatly appreciative of the job Greg has done but it's time to take a fresh look at how we conduct business," he said.

Selectmen are willing to examine the possibility of switching to a town manager and will ask the government structure committee to look into it.

In the meantime, they have narrowed the field of interim town administrator candidates to Ed McCann of Scituate and Liz Lattimore of South Boston. Doyon's last day is Jan. 17.

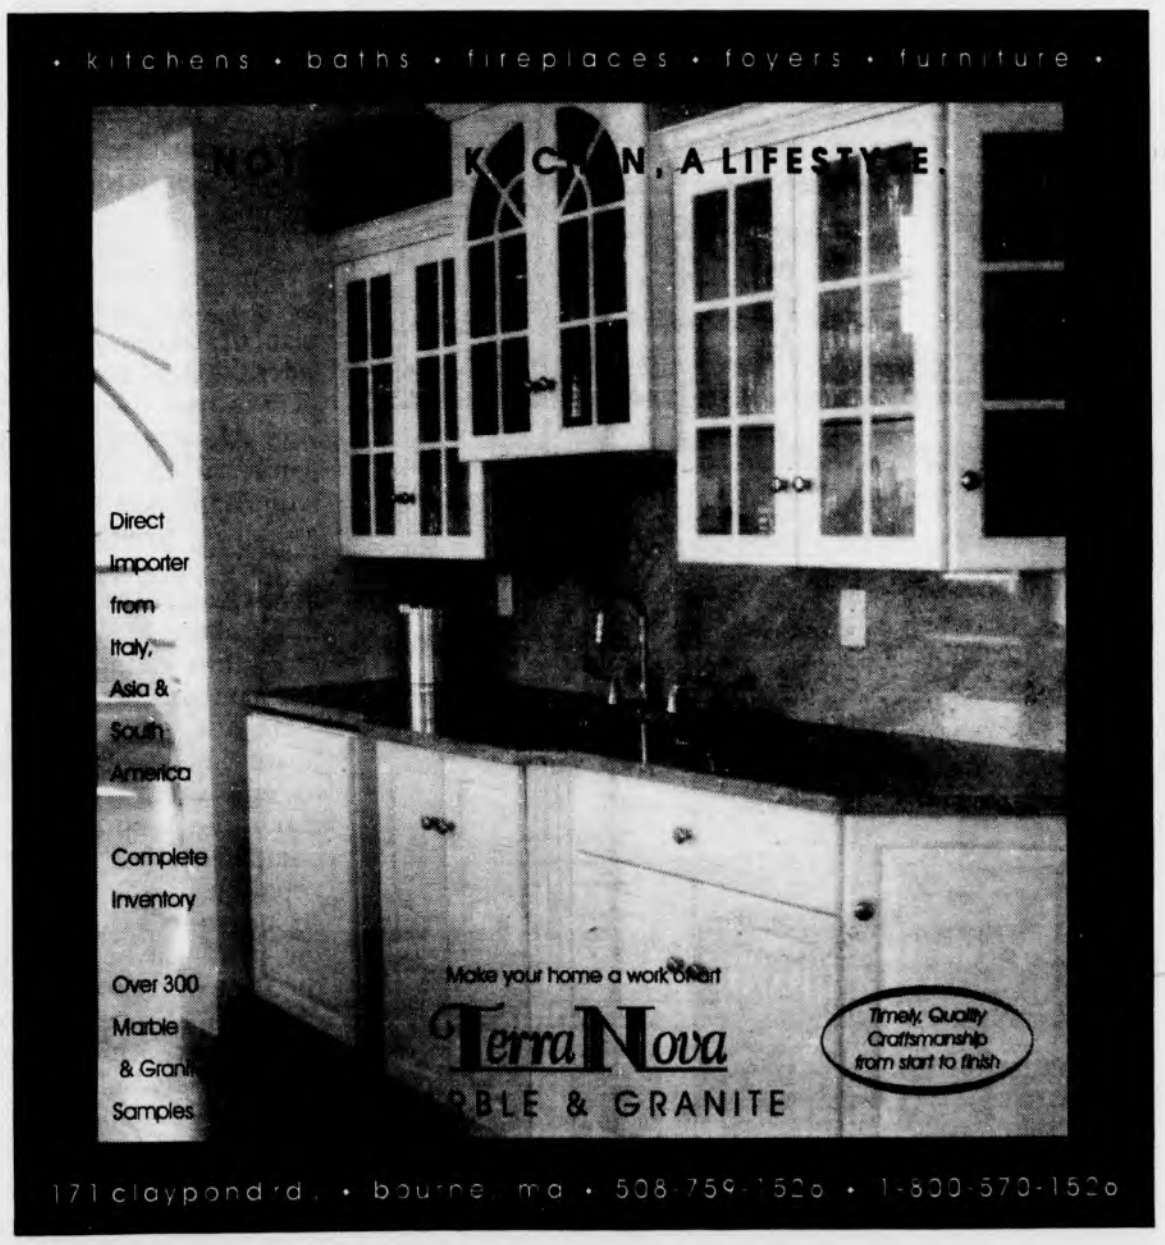
REAL ESTATE UPDATE

PRICING FOR BEST PROFIT



QUESTION: What is the best way to arrive at the best asking price when you put your home up for sale?

ANSWER: National experience has proven conclusively that if your property is priced within 5% of fair market value, the chance of making a clean, top dollar sale during the early stages is TEN TIMES greater than otherwise.

Buyers buy by comparison. Properties not competing favorably do not sell. Overpricing at inception causes properties to become shop-worn; valuable time and buyers are lost forever. Ultimately, all properties sell for their true value by comparison – or less if exposed initially at an inflated price.

Redesigned Fitness Program Proposed

By Jason Bouffard
COHASSET MARINER

Cohasset Junior/Senior High School's '97-'98 budget may bring about healthier kids.

During a school committee meeting last Thursday night, Health Coordinator Mike Gill gave a detailed account of his plan to redirect the school's phys. ed. program – gym class as most people know it may soon go the way of the Boston Garden.

Gill's idea focuses on the individual fitness of each student. Students would work on tailor-made fitness programs within the confines of a new facility currently the site of the senior study hall.

Under the new program, students would choose from a variety of exercise regimens designed to help them achieve personal fitness goals. For example, one student may lift weights to build strength, while another may participate in aerobics to improve cardiovascular conditioning.

While the initial request for equipment calls for $6,600, Gill said he envisions a long-term plan costing $100,000 to fully-equip. The state-of-the-art fitness center would be open to the public on a fee basis. Expenses could also possibly be addressed through fund-raising from private sources.

School board member Rick Shea suggested the possibility of a profit-making fitness facility using the school site as a satellite location, supplying equipment in exchange for additional space.

Gill said he would like to see a computerized system designed so that program coordinators could track a student's progress through the grades.

"Fitness is for everyone," Gill said. "Basketball isn't. Soccer isn't."

"Every student can feel success with a fitness program. Not everybody will feel success with soccer or basketball, and I feel that success translates into fun," he added.

Overall, the school budget calls for roughly a five percent increase across the board, rising to $3,644,277. Increased funding was requested by department heads from various departments, each of whom made requests for new textbooks to accommodate curriculum changes.

Other requests were made to facilitate changes in teaching methods, for example, new tables designed to accommodate group work.

"I'd like to see a math room that has more students working together, explaining things to each other, more of a cooperative work place," said School Principal Curtis Collins.

In addition, the science department is seeking $9000 worth of microscopes needed to replace old models and facilitate more advanced learning.

In light of increasing popularity of the photography program, money to renovate and expand the photography darkroom has been requested. Also, Principal Collins hopes to make the current part-time photography teacher Eileen Rohrer a full-time staff member, but the request was not yet part of the formal budget.

Collins also hopes to add another special education teacher to three-member staff to better serve the 92 students from grade 7 through 12 on individual education plans.

The School Committee will continue budget discussions Thursday night at 7:30 in the High School Audio/Visual room.

come to $780,000.

Annual inspections to determine if a system needs pumping would total an average of $108,750 per year. Annual maintenance expenses would cost the town an average of $208,000, or $139 per property.

By developing a septic system plan, the town qualifies for $3.2 million in state loans. Cook hopes the town will match that amount through the tax base.

Plans are to have a financial plan in place by town meeting, so the town portion can be tied to the override ballot question asking residents to pay half the cost of the central and north Cohasset sewer projects.

Officials think that incorporating both on-site and sewer users into a single debt-exclusion override will ensure its passage.

In response to suggestions that a sewer system would be a more economically sound choice for the town, Cook said sewering the 50 percent of the town with on-site systems would be cost prohibitive.

Cook said that the board is considering a fund of pooled resources to which all on-site system program members will contribute annually like the operating and maintenance fees charged sewer users.

Those in need of repairs would draw from that fund to pay for the work. In this way, they would avoid large repair bills, and would only pay the predetermined annual rate.

The board entertained suggestions that the annual rate for the fund be determined individually for each homeowner, with rate reductions given for smaller homes or systems which have been responsibly cared for.

The latter suggestion coincided with the board's assertion that systems that receive proper care will need attention less frequently.

Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik, in explaining the inner workings of a septic system, told residents that the system needs oxygen in order to adequately break down waste, but that systems that are not correctly maintained may not provide enough air.

While most residents did not object to the need for environmentally safe systems, several expressed concern that the maintenance program would result in unfair treatment of owners of on-site systems compared to those with sewer hook-up.

"We want everybody to be treated the same," said Cohasset resident James "Russ" Lennon of Tad Lane. Several other residents agreed with this sentiment during the course of the night, stating that the differences in annual costs between sewer-connected homeowners and on-site system owners would be problematic.

Operating and maintenance costs for average sewer users are estimated to be about $400 a year. The health board is suggesting about $200 a year be assessed those with on-site systems, which would cover an annual inspection and pumping about every four years.

Local television host Wigmore Pierson, who has been a vocal opponent of the plan, urged the board to reconsider the need to put together a plan in time for a March town vote. He argued that the town would need more time to understand and form an opinion on any proposed plan.

"How can people reasonably be expected to analyze and think about a plan a week or two before voting on it? I think that's unfair," he said.

He also suggested that the board hold meetings devoted to educating town residents about the proposal after it is completed, but before it is voted on.

Cook hopes that portions of the plan will be presented at the next workshop on Feb. 11. A March 11 meeting is scheduled to reveal all components of a completed plan.

The office next door is vacant. If you're SMART, you could land it.

'Guidelines' on Disputing Water Bills Faulted

By Carol Britton Meyer
COHASSET MARINER

Reaction to a written statement issued by the Department of Public Utilities regarding how and under what conditions customers can dispute water bills has been far from favorable.

Cohasset resident James "Russ" Lennon said the DPU response is "a kiss off. All they did was print up the law which is written in reference to rate increases. But what would you expect from the DPU? They'll defend what they did, right or wrong." (For letter, see page 7).

The DPU approved a 155 percent rate hike, which went into effect in June to help the company recoup the cost of building its $40 million water treatment plant in Hingham. Customers in Hingham, North Cohasset and Hull have complained vehemently since the increase was instituted.

In the statement, DPU Director of Consumer Affairs Claudine Langlois wrote: "Consumers should understand that when the Department has approved a public utility's rates and charges, all subsequent bills rendered by the company are payable."

In accordance with the billing and termination procedures of the DPU, "any issue relating to the proper application of approved rates and charges, or the company's compliance with the regulations may be the subject of a complaint by a customer," she also stated.

"I'm very disappointed with the tone of the letter," said Sen. Robert Hedlund. "I'm working with officials in all three towns to formulate the next step." He said DPU regulations stipulate water meters must be read at least every other month.

DPU Executive Director Timothy Shevlin said customers who receive two or more estimates in a row or have billing errors, as well as those who have received termination notices or have encountered problems with water quality, must still pay the full amount of their bills. Individuals who have had received more than one estimate should contact MAWC to request an actual reading.

"There is no legal recourse in terms of not paying bills as charged or placing money in escrow," Shevlin emphasized. He said customers should bring their complaints to the water company before contacting the DPU. "We'll intervene if necessary," Shevlin said.

In response to the DPU's letter, Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray said, "I really thought their response would say part of the water bill could be put into escrow," she said. "I am disappointed. Customers have had to deal with discolored water, old pipes and service that has not been great."

Cohasset Selectman Peter Pratt commented, "It's less than half a loaf. The letter doesn't do what the towns asked the governor to do.

"After 65 days of addressing the issue on Beacon Hill, we finally have gotten an answer. It (simply) tells us who to refer complaints to. Now one person at the DPU will be deluged with complaints," he said.

Hingham resident James L. H. Thomson Jr.'s response to the DPU correspondence was, "That's crazy." He also remarked, "We got ourselves into this mess because a lot of people didn't pay attention to a lot of people, and now we're footing the bill. But the DPU is way off base."

While the rates are much too high, he said, customers are responsible for paying their current bills.

"Now we have to try and convince the DPU we're paying for things we shouldn't be paying for," Thomson said. "They need to find out what the heck has happened, and hopefully that will result in a decrease in our rates. The water company has players on all bases, and we're just coming up to bat."

'All they did was print up the law which is written in reference to rate increases. But what would you expect from the DPU? They'll defend what they did, right or wrong.'
- Russ Lennon, Tad Lane.

Hingham Town Administrator Charles Cristello said he would have hoped the DPU would be "a little more consumer friendly. It sounds like it was written by a lawyer and they're protecting themselves." He said he was surprised they didn't have a brochure addressing the dispute issue in layman's terms.

"The letter covers the basics. There probably isn't much people can do to dispute their bills. That's probably good for them to know so they don't get into trouble withholding payment," he said.

The dispute process includes first notifying the company by telephone, mail or in person, allowing ample time for an investigation. If dissatisfied with the company's finding, the customer may contact the consumer division of the department to dispute the company's decision. Following an investigation of the complaint, the consumer division will "make an effort to resolve the issue of dispute," Langlois said in the letter.

If a customer or company is still not satisfied, there is a hearing process, which may be appealed in writing for an adjudicatory proceeding, where the complaint will be heard and determined judicially. Following the hearing, upon the rendering of a written adjudicatory decision by the department, either aggrieved party may appeal the decision within 20 days in the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court. The towns of Hingham and Hull are appealing the new rates.

Cohasset Town Administrator Greg Doyan said no decision has been made yet on how Cohasset will approach the issue.

"The DPU has set forth what the actual regulations are as they pertain to our terms and conditions. The customer's rights are spelled out," MAWC vice president and treasurer Rod Nevirduskas said.

"What people need to understand is that payments of water charges deposited in escrow accounts do not constitute payment of the bill to the company.

"This issue has been in the forefront lately. Moneys deposited in escrow are registered as non-payments, and customers are subject to whatever action results, as are other customers who don't pay."

MAWC has requested DPU approval to issue water bills on a monthly basis, rather than quarterly. The decision is still pending before the DPU, Shevlin said.

Customers with unresolved questions, complaints or concerns regarding the application of rates, billing or service termination issues may call the consumer division at (800) 392-6066 or (617) 727-3531 for assistance in resolving their problems.

AROUND TOWN/Sallyann Chatterton

Congratulations to poet, Kristen Moore!

Here is a story that will build our pride in our Cohasset Junior/Senior High School students! Kristen Moore of 29 Black Rock Rd. has just had original poetry published in "Memories of Tomorrow," a treasury of today's poetry compiled by The National Library of Poetry. The poem is entitled "Words of Death." Kristen is an eighth-grade student at CHS. She enjoys writing poetry in her spare time, and the National Library of Poetry seeks to discover and encourage poets by sponsoring contests that are open to the public and by publishing poems in widely distributed hardback volumes. Poets interested in publication may send one original poem, any subject or style, 20 lines or less, to The National Library of Poetry, 1 Poetry Plaza, Suite 13711, Owing Mills, MD 21117-6282. Please be sure to include your name and address with your poem. All poems received are also entered in The National Library of Poetry's North American Open Poetry Contest, which awards more than $48,000 in prizes annually.

Kristen, we are proud of you, and hope that you will be an inspiration to tons more young folks!

We applaud another student at this time, Adam G. Friedman — as a result of his superior academic work for the fall term, he has earned a place on the Honor Roll at Cushing Academy. As you all know the Honor Roll recognizes hard work and determination. Adam is a leader, and as such, a role model for his peers. Keep it up Adam!

News from Noble and Greenough School, concerning two Cohassetites — Stefanie Noering (Class of 1999), daughter of Richard and Sabina Noering of Cohasset, was named to ISL (Independent School League) ALL-LEAGUE for her solid performance as a member of the girls varsity field hockey team. Nobles held a season record of 13-2-3 and captured the New England Class B Field Hockey title at the NEPSAC tournament. More good news about Stefanie; she was voted co-captain of the 1997 field hockey squad!

And, Morgan Sandell, son of Jim and Nancy Sandell and a member of the Class of 1999, received an Independent School League All-League Honorable Mention for his accomplishments on the boys varsity soccer team. Nobles held a season record of 14-2-2 and captured the New England Class B Soccer title at the NEPSAC tournament in November.

Happy first birthday to our precious granddaughter, Tori Clark Litchfield! The big celebration was held last Sunday at their home, the actual date was Jan. 14. It was really a special event, now we just have to wait for Nobles Camera Shop to do its part and get the photos back to us ASAP. Next time you see us, just ask to see!

Melinda Cheel, a Union College Class of 1998 computer information systems major, is participating in the College's winter term exchange program in Athens, Greece. Melinda, of Margin Court, Cohasset, is a 1994 graduate of Cohasset Jr/Sr High School. Melinda will study the classics, classical Greek archaeology, and contemporary Greece, examining East-West relationships — what a wonderful thing! As an aside, did you know that Union College was recently ranked 11th of U.S. colleges in the number of students who studied abroad during 1994-5, and the college sent more abroad during the 1995-6 academic year! Anyway, we certainly hope to hear all about your travels upon your return, Melinda!

Accolades once again for one terrific student, this time it is from Mercerberg Academy, located in south-central Pennsylvania — Elizabeth M. Hills, who is in the 11th grade there, made high honors for the Fall 1996 term — high honors is 90-100 G.P.A., so you know that, once again, Elizabeth has more than outdone herself! You know that her mom and dad, Mr. and Mrs. David W. Hills are so proud that they are ready to burst! And, if memory serves, you know how bright she is in languages, math, sciences, you know, everything! She will undoubtedly be able to name her ticket to any college, we cannot wait to hear her continuing saga!

Starring in the recent Diane Purdy's Children's Theatre Workshop production "Robbery in Strawberry Fizz Saloon" are daughter and mother, Leighanne and Angi Walsh of Cohasset.

We also give Michael Kennedy, an 11th-grader at the South Shore Vocational Technical High School, a great big standing ovation — he made High Honors for the first Trimester, for the 1996-97 school year! A wonderful achievement indeed!

One final reminder — be sure to give Mrs. Mulcahy a giant hug (but gently), Kaye turned 90 years young recently, and she looks younger with each passing year!

Call with that one piece of news of yours, we all want to read it, and we know that you will love to share it!

Her fiancé is a 1990 graduate of North Reading High School and is employed as a motion picture camera operator specializing in "Steadicam."

A June wedding is planned.

On The Mark on Cable

Please tune in on Wednesday, Jan. 22, at 8 p.m. and watch "On The Mark with Illana Marks." She will interview reporters from different South Shore newspapers to find out what has been big in the news, and what they are finding out about the large issues facing our towns and also find out what's involved in publishing a newspaper.

Watch this Friday night, Jan. 17 at 8 p.m. to see a repeat broadcast of selectmen from our various communities addressing important issues.

Please call in with questions for our guests or if you would like to participate by writing in questions or comments, our address is "On the Mark," P.O. Box 717, Scituate 02066. Our e-mail address is Ilanamarks@aol.com.

OBIT

Dorothea C. Anacone

Dorothea C. (McTighe) Anacone, 78, of Duxbury, died at Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home December 20 after a long Alzheimer's illness.

Mrs. Anacone worked as a buyer for Filenes in Boston in the earlier years of her life before raising a family.

She was born in Boston and lived in Duxbury for 40 years.

Wife of the late William C. Anacone, she leaves three sons, William C. Anacone III of Duxbury, Robert B. Anacone of Concord, and David J. Anacone of Mansfield, a daughter, Linda W. Bolster of Cohasset, a sister, Rita McTighe Robinson of Quincy, and nine grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated December 23 at the Holy Family Church in Duxbury.

Donations in her memory may be made to Cohasset Knoll Activities Fund, c/o Mary Steele, Cohasset Knoll, Chief Justice Cushing Highway, Cohasset.

John J. Lengel

John J. Lengel, 79, of Cohasset, died Dec. 17 in Milton Hospital.

Mr. Lengel was the husband of Goldie Lengel and leaves a daughter, Donna Flynn of Milton; a son, John Jeffrey Lengel of Pittsburgh, Penn.; and four grandchildren.

Interment was in Milton Cemetery.

Virginia A. Burtner

Virginia A. (Cole) Burtner, 62, of Hampstead, NH, died suddenly Monday, Dec. 31, at her home. She was born in Cohasset, the daughter of Richard and Margaret (Torrey) Cole.

Mrs. Burtner was raised in Scituate where she graduated from Scituate High School, Class of 1951. She later graduated from the Faye Secretarial School in Boston. She was employed as a medical secretary at the Boston Children's Hospital. She later worked for Lumberman's Mutual Insurance Co. in Boston.

Mrs. Burtner had resided in Hampstead for the past 33 years where she was a member of the Hampstead Congregational Church. She was well known in the community for her many years of volunteer work in a number of areas.

She leaves her husband, James E. Burtner of Hampstead, NH, a son, David Burtner of Derry, NH, a daughter, Mrs. Paul (Nancy) Areano of Westboro, and one grandson, Joseph Areano of Westboro.

Memorial services were held Thursday, Jan. 2, at the Hampstead Congregational Church, Hampstead. The Rev. Robert Dobson, pastor, officiated. Private committal services will be held at the Lakeview Cemetery, Hampstead, at the family's convenience. Memorial contributions may be made to the Hampstead Rescue Squad, Little Lane, Hampstead, NH 03841. The Peabody Funeral Homes, 15 Birch St., Derry, was in charge of arrangements.

Professional Management

Town meeting voters are going to have the chance to debate and decide whether Cohasset should have a town manager instead of a town administrator.

It's not clear just what this means because whether a manager is relatively "strong" or "weak" depends on how the position is defined. It appears that the town can decide to give a town manager, who would serve at the pleasure of the board of selectmen, as much power as it wants to. The duties, responsibilities and authority of the position would be described in the legal document establishing the position.

We'll be following the discussion closely and agree that the time is right to examine expanding the role of Cohasset's full-time professional manager.

Personally, we'll miss town administrator Greg Doyon who was always accessible to us. He never hesitated to answer our questions or try to explain a complicated decision or vote.

But there's no question that Mr. Doyon's position could have been delegated to far more. Our board of selectmen often get so bogged down in minutiae that larger, more important issues don't get the attention they deserve. Meetings drag on and on and certain "action items" seem to get buried under massive agendas.

We're not complaining about the length of selectmen's meetings — it's our job to be there and needless to say, they provide us with tons of copy.

But clearly, whether the town has a "manager" or continues with a town administrator, the selectmen need more help. For example, some projects, such as the D.P.W. garage, which has been plagued by cost overruns, would have benefitted from more oversight.

We believe the time has come for an examination of the type of full-time professional management that a town like Cohasset needs and deserves.

Thanks, Greg

We'd like to take this opportunity to join others in Cohasset in wishing Greg Doyon all the best in his new position as town administrator for the town of Abington.

We thank Mr. Doyon for his assistance over the years in explaining innumerable issues and for always getting back to us by deadline when we left messages.

Septic Repairs Need More Scrutiny

To the Editor:

It is apparent from the recent septic system management planning sessions held by the Cohasset Board of Health that residents are greatly alarmed, and justifiably so, by the magnitude of the estimated capital and operating costs associated with a typical septic system repair envisioned by the Board of Health. However, I am concerned that most homeowners have not been made adequately aware of the adverse effects that a repair can also have on the use, appearance and value of their property as well as the potential for damage to neighboring property for which they could be liable.

I am an abutter to an ill-conceived and ill-executed septic system repair which is rumored to have cost $50,000. This repair has destroyed once beautiful grounds including trees and other vegetation. Excavation required to install a 60-foot-long concrete retaining wall along my property line cut the roots to a number of my trees. A local arborist has stated that this damage will likely kill the trees over the next three to five years. The wall also interrupts the natural flow of ground and surface water off my property causing flooding of the property, to an extent that I have never seen in 26 years, damaging our gardens and further injuring our trees. Finally, a noisy air compressor required for the repair constantly operates on our property line.

My experience, as outlined above, is likely to recur for other abutters and homeowners required to pursue future repairs. I believe that subjecting a third of the septic system users in Cohasset to such costs and the devastation of their property is not fair or reasonable. In my opinion the Board of Health should develop an alternative plan that is less extensive than it is currently proposing.

I recommend that the alternative plan require that the Board of Health coordinate with other town agencies such as the Conservation Commission and Building Inspector, and that together they evaluate the overall environmental impact of each repair. They should consider among other things ground and surface water flow, noise, vegetation and esthetics. The alternative plan should also develop by-laws to protect homeowners and abutters. A state registered professional engineer with experience in these areas should be placed in charge of reviewing all design and construction activities for the Town. Finally, the plan should empower the Selectmen to appoint an individual or committee responsible to monitor and control the activities of the all parties and approve designs so that situations such as mine will not continue to occur.

Kindergarten Comments Were Fine

To the Editor:

In the spirit of the season, I will simply say that Lucille McLoughlin might have considered the fact that the mean age of the children whose writing she criticized is 5-1/2 years.

Most of the thoughts expressed by those little ones about Christmas and Hanukkah, as published in the Mariner, were warm with joy of family and friends.

I thought them charming. Understandably ignorant and self-centered, of course; kindergartners do have a few things yet to learn. But certainly not "disheartening," to quote Ms. McLoughlin's critical summation.

Rates Reduced at Bancroft Hall for Cohasset Residents

The Board of Directors of the Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation has concluded, on the basis of last year's income and expense and predicted budget for 1997, that rates for use of Bancroft Hall can be reduced for Cohasset residents and still meet operating expense and set-asides for long-term capital expenditure such as roof replacement. Paying off the refurbishment loan was not accomplished until early in 1996, hence CLC is just beginning to build up the reserve for future capital expense. It is hoped that rates can be further reduced in the future, at least for Cohasset residents.

More than half the bookings for Bancroft Hall are at no charge, to non-profit groups, and more could be accommodated on request. To avoid continuous fund raising, expenses must be met by fees from private functions and from for-profit organizations. Now that the acoustic deficiency has been corrected, there may be more bookings for business meetings and income from these may enable further reduction of fees charged to Cohasset residents for private functions. It is recognized that the rates are too high for small family parties, but less than charged for comparable facilities for larger functions.

For Cohasset residents, the rates will be $200 Monday through Wednesday, excluding holidays, and $400 Thursday through Sunday and holidays. The rates for non-Cohasset users will be $100 higher. Only caterers approved by CLC may be used; that is caterers who have documented that CLC is named as "additional insured" for liquor liability on their insurance policies.

Town Meeting could decide to opt for a town manager form of government. While selectmen would remain responsible for policy making, the town manager could have power and control of the town's day-to-day activities and could appoint certain town officials who would otherwise be elected or appointed by selectmen.

Do you support having a town manager, who would have more power to make decisions, than a town administrator, which Cohasset currently has?

Press 1 -- Yes, the time has come for Cohasset to have a town manager.

Press 2 -- No, I think it's possible to operate the town more effectively using the present system with a town administrator.

Press 3 -- I think either position is unnecessary. Selectmen are elected to run the town, let them do it.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Evolution of a Research Program

To the Editor:

The primary goal of the proposed "Lobster Lab" on Cohasset harbor is to create a unique facility, "...to support student-initiated and student-conducted original research projects." Although primarily envisioned to serve students, it has always been expected that increasing public familiarity with the programs at the lab would eventually filter back to improve the scientific literacy of the community at large.

Perhaps the first "lesson" that needs to be taught to and understood by this larger audience, is how a scientific research program evolves, and how it differs from the structured, academic science curriculum found in our schools. Extracurricular is by definition, outside the scope of the formal school curriculum. For example, skiing and ballet are not part of the offerings in gym classes in our schools, and yet we have a ski team at the high school and numerous dancers who perform annually in Boston Ballet's "Nutcracker." There are no formal ties between the curriculum in the schools and these, or many other, extracurricular activities which enrich many students lives and educations.

Just because the lab is more "academic" in nature than these other offerings does not mean that it requires detailed, explicit and formal ties to the existing curriculum. Such a structure, in fact, runs counter to the whole philosophy upon which the lab is based. Basic research, by its very nature, is largely unstructured and undirected. Questions on the workings of nature slowly yield answers through the scientific process, but, more importantly, generate even more questions. The scientist follows this endless path of questions and answers, never really knowing where it will lead.

The science program at the lab will evolve from the research interests of the students and will follow a course that cannot be predicted at this stage. Some may find this lack of apparent direction troubling, but it is intrinsic to basic research. The lab is not "mission-oriented" or "applied," nor does it have a specific body of information to be "learned." It will be a place for children to frame their own questions about nature, and to devise means for addressing and answering those questions.

One can read books about skiing or ballet and learn much about these subjects, but it is far different from strapping on a pair of skis or ballet shoes and trying it yourself. At the Lobster Lab, students will have the opportunity to "strap" themselves into a real, state-of-the-art biological research laboratory and learn science through direct participation – IF you let them.

How to Dispute Water Bills Detailed

(Editor's note: This letter to Philip Lemnios is in response to a request about what is disputable in Mass.-American Water water bills. See related story, page 7).

Mr. Philip E. Lemnios
Town Manager, Town of Hull
253 Atlantic Avenue
Hull, Massachusetts 02045

Dear Mr. Lemnios,

This is in response to your letter of Dec. 9, 1996, in which you requested the Department of Public Utilities ("Department") to provide a written statement on how Massachusetts American Water Company ("company") customers may dispute their water bills.

In accordance with the Billing and Termination Procedures of the Department of Public Utilities, 220 C.M.R. §25.00, any matter relating to the proper application of approved rates and charges, or the company's compliance with the regulations may be the subject of a complaint by a customer. The customer should first notify the company of the dispute by telephone, mail or in person. The company must be given ample opportunity to investigate the customer's complaint and make a substantial effort to resolve the matter. The company should keep a record of the complaint as well as its response to the customer.

If the customer is dissatisfied with the company's finding, the customer may call the Consumer Division of the Department to dispute the company's decision. The Consumer Division will investigate the customer's complaint and make an effort to resolve the issue in dispute.

If the issue is not resolved to the satisfaction of the customer or the company, either party may request an informal hearing with the Consumer Division. Sometime after the informal hearing, usually about 60 days, the Consumer Division will render a written decision to the parties. Either party, if aggrieved, may appeal the decision in writing within 14 days to the Department for an adjudicatory proceeding. After a hearing, upon the rendering of a written adjudicatory decision by the Department, either aggrieved party may appeal the decision within 20 days to the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court ("Court"). M.G.L. c.25 §5.

Consumers should understand that when the Department has approved a public utility's rates and charges, all subsequent bills rendered by the company are payable. Any customer dispute regarding Department approved rates or charges must be appealed to the Supreme Judicial Court in just the way the towns of Hingham and Hull have chosen to formally dispute the Mass American Water Company rate order, DPU 95-118. However, if a customer has questions, concerns or complaints regarding the application of the rate or other billing or service termination matters, and the company has been unable or unwilling to resolve the issue, he or she may call the Consumer Division at (800) 392-6066 or (617) 727-3531 for assistance.

I hope I have answered your questions. If you have additional questions or if problems arise, please do not hesitate to call me.

Consumer Division

Army Corps Airs Greenbush Concerns

Macmillan and MBTA Disagee on Significance

By Carol Britton Meyer
COHASSET MARINER

The proposed Greenbush branch of the Old Colony Railroad has run into what may yet be another stumbling block.

The Army Corps of Engineers indicated this week that they have serious concerns about the adequacy of the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority study of alternatives to the restoration project, according to Alexander Macmillan, who has been retained by the Town of Hingham to participate in negotiations which deal with mitigation measures related to railroad restoration.

"The Corps is not sure how they will proceed," said Macmillan, who attended ACE meetings Monday in their Waltham office and Tuesday at the Mass Historical Commission. The historical commission is acting on behalf of the federal Advisory Council on Historical Preservation, whose purpose is to lessen the adverse impact of the project on historical properties or mitigate those impacts in compliance with the Section 106 process of the Historical Preservation Act.

But MBTA Manager of Environmental Affairs Andrew Brennan disagreed with Macmillan.

"The Army Corps of Engineers hasn't even come close to a decision, not remotely close," he said. The ACE has asked the MBTA to apply for the permit now to get on the regular "tracking process," he said.

The ACE is now the lead federal agency involved in the project and assumes the burden of overseeing the environmental review process, Macmillan said. Without a permit from the Corps, the MBTA cannot proceed with the project. The MBTA decided last year not to seek 80 percent funding for the proposed restoration from the Federal Transit Authority.

An ACE-mandated Environmental Assessment would include public involvement, either through a hearing or a comment period. Following that assessment, the Corps has the power to request a new environmental review.

Following such a review, ACE would consider whether the MBTA project has significant impact on the environment, and options to the restoration, including a tunnel under Hingham Square, a guided busway and an intermodal form of transportation will be reviewed again.

According to Macmillan, the announcement marks "a significant development, but what the significance is we'll have to watch closely in the weeks and months ahead. The Army Corps of Engineers didn't make their decision hastily."

"For a decision to be made on how to deal with surface rail when the ACE has no basis to reject the other alternatives would not make sense," he said. "It's obvious the Corps recognizes the concerns we have been discussing."

The development may cause a delay or adjustment to the MBTA's schedule for the project, as well as the final Environmental Impact Statement.

Macmillan told Hingham selectmen at their Tuesday meeting that the MBTA tried to convince the Corps that their studies are adequate, but apparently did not succeed in their attempt to do so.

Regarding the Town of Hingham's deep involvement in the process, Macmillan said, "It's unusual to see such a major role requested by and granted to a town" in a project of this kind.

"This new development gives us time to reflect on the project. The Army Corps of Engineers is an unbiased group which is saying the alternatives and impacts have to be looked at more thoroughly," said Selectmen Martin Crane.

Macmillan said the Massachusetts Historical Commission seemed supportive of the ACE decision.

Hingham Selectman Katharine Reardon said, "This may show if we use available environmental processes to the fullest extent, we can see good results and perhaps get another chance to look at things."

Brennan said the Corps provided the MBTA with a list of questions, including why the proposal for a tunnel under Hingham Square was deemed too expensive when the legislature allocated $50 million for the tunnel.

"We explained the bonding process (and other related issues) to them," Brennan said.

The MBTA is also addressing questions posed by ACE regarding noise standards alternatives which were dismissed early in the process along with the issue of a bypass which would avoid Hingham Square. The ACE also inquired about a guided busway, said Brennan, "which Hingham is strongly pushing."

Brennan said the ACE is "not saying there will or will not be more environmental review. They haven't made that decision yet."

While Brennan was not at either of the meetings Macmillan attended this week, he said his staff has been in touch with the ACE several times since they took place. His impression of the meetings, he said, is "The ACE is saying they need more information. Alexander Macmillan's interpretation is a newspaper spin."

Nancy Buckley, founder of the Coastal Coalition, a grassroots citizens' group which is seeking alternatives to the train, said, "Hopefully the impending delay will be enough of an embarrassment to the Weld administration, which has spent millions of dollars on this biased rail study, that the governor will direct Transportation Secretary James Kerasiotes to abandon the project so work can genuinely begin on a study of alternatives."

Reynolds Takes The Big Step

Cohasset Gymnast Makes Huge Improvements For Lady Skippers

Cohasset High gymnast Kristen Reynolds' all-around athletic skills have played a big part in her sophomore-year breakthrough.

By Joe Reardon
COHASSET MARINER

Geography has a lot do with Cohasset High gymnast Kristen Reynolds competing for the Lady Skippers.

Now a junior, Reynolds was either going to take ballet or gymnastics lessons as a 6 year old. Her parents ultimately picked gymnastics classes for Reynolds because the South Shore Community Center was closer to her Beechwood Street home.

Like the majority of the girls currently on the high school team, Reynolds continued with gymnastics under assistant coach Ruthann Ardizzoni and worked her way up to level 5. Once she reached the seventh grade, Reynolds joined the high school squad. And she had a lot of familiar company.

"I grew up with all the girls that are on the team now," Reynolds said.

Reynolds was always a consistent gymnast and did make steady progress over the years. But it wasn't until her sophomore season that Reynolds had the kind of winter in the gym that moved her to the next level.

During the spring of her freshman year, Reynolds went out for the girls track team and put together a strong season. Blessed with a tall, slim figure, she was a natural in the triple jump and low hurdles. Reynolds also competed in the high jump, long jump, 100-yard dash and high hurdles. She topped off her season by qualifying for the State Class D Meet in both the triple jump and hurdles.

Instead of going to the beach every day during the summer, Reynolds could be found in the community center working on her various routines and getting a headstart on the gymnastics season.

When the season began in December of '95, Reynolds began to improve her scores almost immediately. Previous best scores in the low to mid 7's jumped to the 7.9 to 8.0 range. Reynolds' form on the balance beam improved dramatically and she became one of the judges' favorites, throwing in her tell-tale leaps where she gets incredible height off the beam.

"The judges would come up and tell me how much that Kristen Reynolds has improved," Ardizzoni said. "Last year everybody was coming out of the woodwork and commenting on her."

Ardizzoni attributed much of Reynolds' improvement to her track training. "She's very well-conditioned," Ardizzoni said. "Kristen worked on her strength. One of the things that has made her great on the vault is the discipline from track during the spring.

"She's a real strong force for Cohasset on the beam and vault. Kristen really gets great height on the beam. She just ran out from nowhere."

Ardizzoni said Reynolds' desire to learn and improve never waned and coaching her has been an enjoyable experience.

"I find Kristen real easy to work with," Ardizzoni said. "She's very personable and has no problem doing what's best for the team. Kristen is always very eager to compete."

So far this season, the first meet against Hanover has been Reynolds' best. She scored a 7.9 on the vault and her beam routine earned a 7.8.

Reynolds, however, was hardly pleased with her performance on the beam. A slight hesitation on a full turn caused her to slip off. The rest of the routine went flawlessly. Without the fall, she was looking at a score no lower than an 8.3.

It's that type of mistake that bothers Reynolds the most. "When you're doing well and you fall, it's very frustrating," she said. "Some falls are very stupid because they're caused by a lack of concentration.

"The thing about the beam is that you can stick it right away or just have an awful night. You just never know."

Because of the unpredictability of the event, Reynolds tries not to analyze her routine before the competition. She relaxes as much as possible, but stays focused on what she needs to do for a good score.

"I go in to have fun," said Reynolds, "but also to do my best and help everyone else, too."

Reynolds, however, has seen the darker side of the sport. Injuries have limited the events she can compete in.

Reynolds has to stay clear of the bars and floor exercise because of a back problem that started two years ago. Her back began to ache after practice one day and it gradually became worse. It got so bad that Reynolds eventually had to go to a doctor who told her she had a curvature of the back which put added stress on her muscles.

The pain in her back is one of the reasons next winter will be her final gymnastics season. Reynolds' love of the competition, working out with friends and being part of a championship team will always be a part of her, but the back pain limits what she could ultimately do.

"I can't really push myself as much as I'd like to," Reynolds said. "I love the sport, but ever since I hurt my back it has put a damper on it.

"I'll remember the good times. The little moments on the bus rides."

Hoopsters Split With Hull, Hanover

By Jim O'Sullivan
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Cohasset High boys varsity basketball team split its last two games, thrashing Hull High and falling just short to Hanover.

The Skippers were led by Paul-Michael Quintin, who poured in 15 points, in their 80-39 victory over the Pirates. Burke Davis, who scored all of his 12 points from beyond the three-point arc, and the imposing inside presences of Ryan Bishop (nine) J.L. Williams (11). Another key factor was Brian Kilroy. Kilroy not only played stifling defense, he popped in eight points and hauled down tough rebounds on both ends of the floor. Unstoppable in the post and from long range, the Skippers dominated the game with tenacious defense and a precise, running offense.

Bishop started the game with a lay-up and added a free throw, tying the game at 3. Jamie Buick's clever baseline move pushed the Skippers ahead for good. Bishop also went baseline for a pair, and Quintin swished a three pointer. Williams, who played one of his best games of the season, got his defender in the air with a vicious upfake, then sank the jump shot. Pat Hurley knocked down two foul shots to put Cohasset up 14-7 and Quintin tallied four consecutive points, two from a pull-up jumper and two more after a steal and breakaway lay-up. Bishop used the backboard for a deuce and Williams netted a three.

Kilroy, coming off the bench to act as an inside force, grabbed an offensive board and popped in a six-foot jumper. Williams nailed another jumper, this one just inside the line, and Kilroy earned another pair. On the opposite end, he snatched an offensive rebound which led to Hurley's three pointer. Davis followed with a trey of his own an Quintin closed out the half with three straight, making the halftime score 38-19, in favor of the Skippers. Quintin started the second half with a steal and another fastbreak lay-up, then topped his own play with a three. Williams grabbed an offensive board and put it back for two and Davis, from his point guard spot, sank a 25-foot three pointer. Williams tipped in another offensive bound to give the Skippers 50 points. Three pointers by Andy Hamilton and Davis put the Skippers up 56-19. A Hull basket finally ended a 22-point scoring run by the home team, one which put the game far out of reach. Davis countered with another three, his fourth and final of the game. Hamilton stepped up and nailed a pair of threes and his classmate, Justin McNamara picked up a pair of free throws. Fellow junior Pat Hurley hit one from the foul line and Kilroy stepped into the passing lane, tearing away a pass and dishing to McNamara, who put in the easy deuce at the other end. Kilroy tore down a defensive rebound which led to a Bishop hoop on the other end.

Then the muscular forward finally got his own reward, notching four consecutive points, scored off the offensive glass. McNamara hit a pair of foul shots, then crowd favorite, Grant Emde, lauded by Skipper Nation, kissed a lay-up off the glass, giving the home team 80 points and thereby doubling the Pirates' feeble 39.

Head coach Ron Ford was much more pleased with Friday's effort than Wednesday's Hanover game. The Skippers lost a tough decision to Hanover, 67-56.

Lacrosse Captains Picked for Indoor Nationals

Cohasset High lacrosse captains Ely Kahn and Jon Lacks have been selected to a Massachusetts All-Star team that will compete in the National High School Indoor Championships, Jan. 18-20 at the Peddie School in New Jersey.

The tournament — which will include teams from the mid-Atlantic, the Northeast, Michigan and Colorado — is the last major college recruiting showcase of the year for senior athletes. Other schools represented on the Massachusetts team include Andover Academy, St. Sebastian's, Belmont Hill, Billerica, Needham, St. John's Prep, Concord-Carlisle, Marshfield, Duxbury, Norwell and Boston College High.

Kahn, recruited by several Division 1 and 3 colleges, committed early to Harvard University. Lacks is choosing between the University of Vermont and Providence College.

"For Ely and Jon, this tournament will be an opportunity to test themselves against some of the nation's best players," said Burke Walker, president of Top Gun Lacrosse and the team coordinator. Seventeen players were selected for the team from a pool of 700, Walker said.

Special Olympics Seeks Volunteers

The Massachusetts Special Olympics needs volunteers who can spend a few hours a month working on the management team and special events for the New Norfolk Area, which includes Avon, Braintree, Canton, Cohasset, Dedham, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Milton, Needham, Newton, Norwood, Quincy, Randolph, Sharon, Stoughton, Walpole, Wellesley, Westwood and Weymouth.

Management volunteers with experience in marketing, fund-raising, competition and volunteer recruitment are important in assuring that the area provides an opportunity for athletes to compete.

For more information, call Area Manager Mary Iacovelli at (617) 984-5841 and leave a message that includes name, address, telephone number and area of interest (marketing, fund-raising, competition, etc.).

Grapplers on Tear Heading Into Tourney

By Joe Reardon
COHASSET MARINER

Anyone who has ever had even the slightest twinge of curiosity as to what a wrestling meet is all about, your time has come.

The Sixth Annual Cohasset Invitational Wrestling Tournament should make you an instant fan. A field of nine teams will be taking part in the tourney, which gets underway at Cohasset High School this Saturday beginning at 10 a.m.

Skipper head coach Torin Sweeney said he is looking to get a big crowd of spectators, including those who have never attended a meet.

"Unless they've seen one," said Sweeney, "people don't know what they're missing."

And at 6-2 on the year, the Cohasset High grapplers are a product Sweeney is proud to be a part of.

"This is a team whose sun is on the rise," Sweeney said.

Cohasset is on a role of late, coming off an easy 57-17 win over Norwell in a South Shore League match last Wednesday.

The Skippers dominated the meet from the start, taking first place in the first eight matches to quickly put any outcome of the finish at rest. Of the 11 matches Cohasset won, eight were by pin.

Craig Sheerin (103), Doug Sheerin (140) and Justin Buckley (171) all won on points while Chris Pratt (112), Mike Baird (119), Tucker Gledhill (125), Jordan Fiore (130), Kevin Duffy (135), Mike Rossi (145), Justin Golden (160) and J.P. Laugelle (215) overwhelmed their opponents with pin victories.

Buckley was the wrestler of the day in Saturday's highly competitive Whitman-Hanson Invitational. Wrestling at 171 pounds, Buckley defeated the Panthers' best grappler, 9-3, to capture his second consecutive title.

"That's a tough tournament to win two years in a row," said an obviously impressed Sweeney.

Duffy was also a winner for Cohasset, capturing the 135-pound division, while Luke Caldwell wrestled to a courageous third-place finish in his first meet back after missing two weeks to injury.

Baird nailed down third at 119 and Fiore was fourth in the 130-pound bracket.

The W-H Tourney is one of the deepest on the South Shore with teams the calibre of Foxboro, Weymouth and North Quincy competing. So competitive is the meet, defending state champion Mark Laramee of Rockland finished third in his weight class.

"You can have a weight class with two state champions competing in it," Sweeney said.

Health Advisory Committee to Meet

The Cohasset Health Advisory Committee will meet Jan. 21, at 7 p.m. in the Guidance Conference Center at Cohasset High School. A school-wide update of the health programs for the remaining school year will be discussed. If you would like to become a member of the Cohasset Health Advisory Committee, you are welcome to attend this meeting. Please call either Michael Gill, Health Educator at the High School, 383-6107, or Donna O'Donnell, at 383-6113 for further details.

DRUG FACT

"After more than three decades of substantial marijuana use in this country, few people seem to know that an individual smoking even one marijuana cigarette a week is never free of the drug. It is now known that cannabinoids are not 'washed out' of the body shortly after consumption the way alcohol is, that they tend to stay in the fatty tissues for a week or more and accumulate with repeated exposure. Kids who smoke one or two joints a week think they're light smokers. They don't realize that they're never off the stuff. When they wonder why their outlook seems dull and life seems uninteresting their marijuana habit is probably the answer."

Consumer alert: Beware creative commission tricks

By the editors of
WORTH MAGAZINE

There's nothing like a desultory Dow to inspire creative investment strategies and thereby a steady flow of commissions.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

For example, one broker at Great Western Financial in Los Angeles says a colleague recently decided to move an elderly client out of a mutual fund she'd been in for nine months. She needed a tax-deferred investment, he told her as he plunked her $70,000 in a variable annuity his firm was pushing. When she balked, he transferred her funds to a fixed annuity. She insisted he put her back in her mutual fund and leave her alone. The broker did just that, but only after running up $2,800 in fees and commissions.

Furthermore, he put her into the same fund and bought shares that carried a back-end load, even though she already paid a front-end load on her original investment. "She won't even realize she got soaked until she tries to get out of the fund," the broker says. "It was nothing but churning."

The story is, sadly, becoming more familiar with each passing market close. Financial advisers are cooking up new ways to make money. Advisers are getting used to fat commission fees. According to the New York Stock Exchange, member firms are collecting massive increases in commissions, from $8.9 billion in 1990 to $13.7 billion today. To keep that money flowing, advisers are getting creative, so watch out for these latest gimmicks:

•The surefire zero-coupon bond. The zero-coupon Treasury bond is often pitched as the investment that can't lose money. Brokers say if interest rates go up, you can trade it in for another bond at a discount with a longer maturity. Don't fall for this, says Glen Buco, an investment adviser for West Financial Services in Annandale, Va. Buco says he's met several investors who swapped zeros and ran up huge commission charges. Furthermore, they owed taxes on each sale.

•Long-term rollovers. Last September, a Dean Witter broker called his client, a Chicago widow, to tell her he had rolled over two expiring Dean Witter variable annuities into another investment. He put her in two similar six-year Dean Witter annuities carrying high commissions. Unless she wants to pay towering surrender charges, she's stuck with these investments until the year 2000. "It was so obvious the broker was just generating commissions," says James Platania, a certified financial planner in Mount Prospect, Ill., who studied the woman's portfolio. "If she didn't have a strategy, she should have stayed put or gone into something more short-term."

•The fixed-income shuffle. A broker says it's time to get out of the fixed-income fund you just invested in, because it just doesn't look as attractive. How about a nice, safe, tax-deferred variable annuity? Whether or not this is a good move for you, it's certainly good for the broker's pocket, since he or she gets a 5.5 to 8 percent payment from the annuity outfit. An honest broker would recommend you hold a mutual fund for at least three to five years, not just one. If your broker suggests differently, says Glen Buco, then "maybe this isn't the person who should be giving you financial advice."

'Ultimately, the investor has to educate himself and realize the best defense is a good offense.'

Mark Fitterman
SEC associate director of market regulation

•Hot rate! (High charges, too!) Some so-called bonus annuities promise a 12 percent return. Sounds good, Platania says, but the fine print reveals a 7 percent initial rate with an additional 5 percent bonus rate that's guaranteed for the first year only. After that, the bonus flies out the window, and the only guarantee an investor has is that the rate will stay above 3 percent. Plus, you either keep your money there for 10 years or more, or face charges.

•Pushing numerous fund families. Citicorp recently kicked off a program that encourages customers to allocate money in numerous load-carrying mutual funds. "We want to offer our customers a choice," says Citicorp spokesperson Susan Weeks. While funds from different families may deliver better value to the investor, investors should be aware of a money-saving option known as rights of accumulation, where larger amounts invested translate into lower costs. If you have a large amount to invest, you can save 2 percentage points or more in commissions by investing with one fund family instead of several funds. Or stick with no-load funds.

To protect yourself when investment pitches roll in, check prospectuses for hidden commissions. Don't be afraid to ask how much an adviser will earn in commissions on a transaction. Arthur Levitt, the chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, has asked an industry committee to look at compensation practices in the securities industry. Mark Fitterman, an SEC associate director of market regulation, warns: "Ultimately, the investor has to educate himself and realize the best defense is a good offense."

Truckloads of Toys Donated

Again this year, local members of the South Shore Truckers, Herbert Jason and John Small, raised money to buy toys for the Toys for Tots drive sponsored by the U.S. Marine Corps Reserves.

"It was the best year we've had yet," said Small about the nearly $7,000 worth of toys donated to the program which helps needy families at Christmastime

"We had three truckloads of stuff," he said.

Money was raised through donation cans at MaryLou's News, Dunkin' Donuts, and Bradlees.

The Cohasset Police Association, VFW post, MacPhail Investments and Goodwin Graphics also made donations.

The Cohasset police station also served as a drop off spot for toys.

Master Gunnery Sgt. Ken MacWilliams congratulates John Small on the South Shore Truckers fund-raising effort for the Toys for Tots program.

Friends of the Paragon Carousel Name New Development Directors

The Friends of the Paragon Carousel Inc. announced the appointment of Jane O. Goedecke and Monica Y. McKenney, both of Cohasset, as co-directors of development and public relations. The announcement was made by Friends Board President Susan Fleck.

"The board of directors is excited to have acquired the services of two such energetic, accomplished and talented people," noted Fleck in announcing the appointments. "Since its inception, the Friends have achieved a great deal. Under the direction of our new appointees, these achievements will continue and be expanded to a much broader audience."

Well known to South Shore residents for her outstanding career in public service, Jane Goedecke was a Cohasset selectman for six years, serving for a period of that time as chairman of the board. Prior to her election as a selectman, she served as a member of the Cohasset Advisory Committee for five years. Additionally, Goedecke is involved with the Garden Club of America at the local, regional and national levels.

Monica McKenney has worked as an advisor and consultant for special events for Executours, a Boston destination management company. An active volunteer, she is currently on the board of the Friends of the Cohasset Library and has served on the Executive Board of the Cohasset PSO.

"We are excited to be working with such a dedicated and diverse group of people. The Carousel is an historic treasure and a happy place with appeal for all ages," said McKenney.

"Many people are responsible for keeping the Carousel in Hull. We hope to spread the word still further," Goedecke added.

In their role as directors of development, Goedecke and McKenney will oversee the design and implementation of a capital campaign which would raise the approximately $450,000 needed to secure a $100,000 challenge grant from the Massachusetts Historical Commission. The combined funds would retire all mortgages on the Carousel five years ahead of schedule, eliminating thousands of dollars in interest payments and allowing the Friends to concentrate on additional preservation and development of the Carousel and surrounding site.

To this end, the new directors expect to announce a number of initiatives to bring funding and attention to this historic community asset. Built in 1928 by the Philadelphia Toboggan Company, the former Paragon Park Carousel is one of roughly 200 antique carousels still in existence, and one of this country's finest.

Established in 1996 for the purpose of securing and preserving this unique regional treasure, the Friends of the Paragon Carousel is a nonprofit corporation.

Offices for the Friends of the Paragon Carousel are at Nantascot Place Condominiums, 155 George Washington Blvd., Hull 02045.

For information about the carousel, its operations or to volunteer, call (617) 925-0472.

Appalachia Project Helps Cheer On Patriots!

This Super Bowl you can support the Appalachia Service Project while cheering on your New England Patriots! The Appalachia Service Project will be making and selling sub sandwiches, Greek salads, and chili to help you and your family celebrate this long-awaited Super Bowl!

Sub assortments include turkey, roast beef, tuna, chicken salad or Italian cold cuts. Meat or vegetarian chili is sold by the pint and comes with a slice of pita bread, as do the Greek salads. All items cost $4.50 each and should be pre-ordered by Thursday, Jan. 23. Order forms are available at local churches, in the school menus or by calling 383-0345. Food orders can be picked up Super Bowl Sunday, Jan. 26, between 2 and 4 p.m. at First Parish Trueblood Hall. There will also be a home delivery service for a nominal fee of $1.

Proceeds from this fundraiser help support the Appalachia Service Project's home repair mission in central Appalachia.

Jazz, Folk at Coffee House off the Square

On Saturday, Jan. 18, at 8 p.m., the Coffee House off the Square presents the jazz harpist Monika Stadler and the lively duo of soprano Sue Krueger and flautist Jim Lester.

Monika Stadler started playing the harp in a folk group in her early teens. After extensive classical training and a symphonic career she sought more freedom and began to explore jazz, coming under the influence of Deborah Henson-Conant. Now she draws on folk, jazz, Latin American and new age influences in her own brilliant style.

The evening will begin with an open mike offering all performers a chance to be heard.

The Coffee House is at the Old Ship Church's Parish House at 105 Main St., Hingham Square, just up from the Loring Hall Theater. It is on the MBTA's 220 bus line from Quincy Center. The hall is fully handicapped accessible.

Admission is $8 at the door and a variety of coffees, teas and desserts are available. Profits go to the Unitarian-Universalist Service Committee for Central American medical relief and the Coffee House recently sent $800 to these efforts.

For information call Sue Krueger, (617) 545-2798 or Jim Watson, (617) 749-1767.

Music at British Relief

There will be a Coffee House and open microphone at the British Relief Restaurant, 152 North St., Hingham, Saturday, Jan. 25, at 8 p.m. Featured performer is Seth Connelly. Open mike sign up is at 7:30 p.m.; $5 admission and hosted by MacIsaac and Ross.

Alzheimer's Support Group Meets

At the Alzheimer's Disease Support Group of the South Shore Wednesday, Jan. 22, 7:30 p.m., two representatives from the Blue Hills Alzheimer Center of Stoughton will share techniques for caring for an Alzheimer patient at home.

Barbara Despres, R.N. and Tracey Shea, life-enhancement director, will focus on assisting the patient with dressing, bathing, nutrition, incontinence and eating as well as simple activities to enhance the patient's quality of life. Emphasis will be on solutions to help the patient maintain dignity, adapting to the patient's experiences, innovating the home environment as well as the caregiver's well-being. There will be time for questions and discussion.

Call Gervaise Healey, (617) 749-4774, for a respite reservation by 3 p.m., Jan. 22.

Meetings are free and open to the public. For further information, call JoAnn Mitchell, 749-5417 or Mary Saunders, 749-8171.

Free Seminar Offered

Author/educator Jack Agati will present a free seminar on "Managing Children's Behavior" on Tuesday, Jan. 28, at 7 p.m. in Sarah Derby Hall at Derby Academy, 56 Burditt Ave., Hingham. His approach combines both humor and practical techniques for maintaining discipline and instilling responsibility in children of all ages. Everyone is welcome. Call Peg Mead at (617) 828-7042 with questions.

Cabaret is in Full Swing

Cabaret rehearsals are in full swing. "Come Alive with Cabaret 35" will feature showgirl, dance couple and Rockette-style performances, along with polka and softshoe numbers, comedy routines, specialty acts and solos.

"Everybody is having a great time rehearsing, and the people who go to the show will have a good time. It's a very special show," said Publicity Chairman Eileen Cutler, who is performing in several numbers, including the Charleston.

Reed Dickinson dares to pat the boa at the Skins and Scales Show presented recently by the South Shore Community Center. Call the center at 383-0088 for information about classes.

At evening rehearsals at the community center, cast members are enthusiastic. They seem to have gained a second wind, even after a long day at work. More than 100 performers are participating in the event, which is directed by Howard Miller of Cargill Productions in New York.

"Super Sunday," a full day and evening of dress rehearsals, is planned for Jan. 26, the same day as the Super Bowl. "Come Alive with Cabaret 35," a celebration of the show's 35th year, will be presented at Hingham Armory Jan. 30, 31 and Feb. 1.

Patron tickets go on sale Jan. 16 and 17 and for the general public Monday, Jan. 20. Proceeds from the show and ad book benefit Hingham Community Center and help defray the cost of producing the show.

For further information call the center at 749-9786.

Register for Art Classes

Looking for a way to brighten the winter months? Creating art is the perfect antidote to the winter doldrums! The South Shore Art Centers winter term begins the week of Jan. 21 and offers classes and workshops for pre-K through adult of all levels and abilities.

The center also offers PDP points for educators, courses that qualify for Mass. College of Art credits and a special ART PLUS February vacation camp.

Although most courses run for eight weeks, some are four week mini courses and there are several one and two-day workshops to choose from.

Adult classes include painting, pastel, collage, colored pencil, Chinese brush painting, photography, monoprinting, clay and more. Faculty includes award winning artists from Cohasset to Sturbridge. Local South Shore Artists Donna Basile, Patricia McCarthy, Kimberlee Alemian, Judy Rossman and Jim Smalley are just a few of the teachers.

Children's classes include clay, painting, printing, drawing, clay, monoprinting and more. Will Robinson, Nancy Connolly, George Dalton, Valerie Vitali and Esther Maschio are just a few of the local award-winning artists who have formulated great courses geared for the young artist — including high school students.

Call the center at 383-2787 to register today! Courses fill fast and you won't want to be "left in the cold!"

West Corner Reunion Set

A West Corner reunion party will be held Saturday, Jan. 18, at 7 p.m. at Sons of Italy Hall, Hingham. Admission is $10 and includes a pasta dinner with meatballs, sausages and salad. There will be dancing to DJ Cindy Lee and her light show.

All are invited to attend, especially those who grew up in and around the West Corner area. Come and reminisce about the good old days, have fun and see some familiar faces.

Tickets may be purchased in advance by calling Tony Sestito at 749-0787; Jim Reichardt, 749-1216; or at Argiro's Barber Shop, Station Street, Hingham.

Business Notes

Charrette Results are Due

The results of the Village Design Charrette, held last month to seek solutions and ideas about improving the village, will be presented at the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce meeting at 5:30 p.m., Jan. 22 at the Chart House on Border Street.

Architect Jim Sandell of Carr, Lynch & Sandell Associates will lead the presentation.

Also speaking will be Joe Hajjar, proprietor of the Yard Rock Cafe in Quincy and organizer of the City of Presidents Blues Festival.

Proceeds from the Nov. 16 Chamber auction, which raised $4,000, will also be presented to the Appalachia Service Project, Veterans of Foreign Wars and Harborfest.

Dickinson Direct Is Honored

Dickinson Direct was recently honored by the South Shore Chamber of Commerce as part of their "Success" awards, citing companies which have expanded revenues, number of employees and square footage.

Last year, under the aggressive direction of the second generation leadership of Reed Dickinson, the company grew an impressive 38.8 percent and expanded revenues to $23 million. Bursting at the seams with over 240 employees, Reed also implemented "teams" so that individuals would still have an entrepreneurial approach to creating new opportunity. The teams were also designed to surround the client with a host of people who could answer their questions and anticipate their needs.

Forty-eight years ago when Don Dickinson founded Dickinson Direct in the spare room of his father's house, there wasn't a direct mail "industry." He and his family, who helped grow and shape the business, literally had to help write the book on direct marketing.

The industry has evolved and so has the family business. Son Reed Dickinson of Cohasset has taken over the reigns from father Don and has successfully and significantly expanded upon the company's strengths.

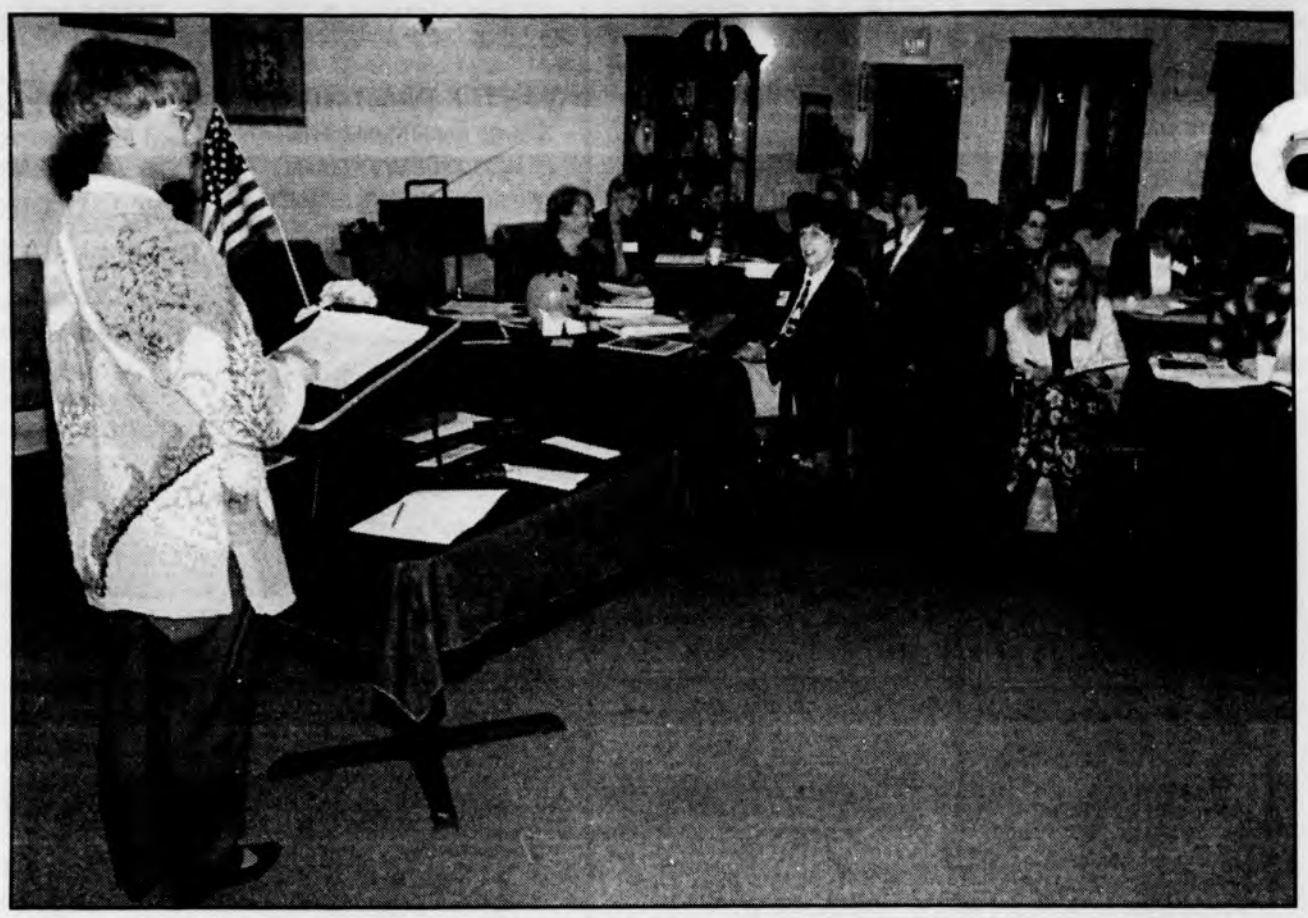
Toastmasters Group Gives Confidence to Speakers

By Susan Hagstrom
COHASSET MARINER

You start to sweat. Your lip starts to quiver. Your mouth is dry and you're afraid that when you open your mouth you'll fail to speak.



These are common reactions for many people who lack experience in the arena of public speaking. The Network Voice, a local chapter of Toastmasters International, has been the cure for many who suffer from the above ailments.

According to Toastmasters International, its mission is to make effective oral communications a worldwide reality. Through its member clubs, Toastmasters helps men and women learn the arts of speaking, listening and thinking, which are vital skills that promote self actualization, enhance leadership potential, foster human understanding, and contribute to the betterment of mankind.

Club president Sue Barbuto said the club became chartered last March and was an offshoot of the South Shore Women's Business Network. Barbuto, who is also president of her own business, Logos to Go, said the group has 22 charter members and meets every other Wednesday from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Deerfield Senior Center in Hingham.

"I wanted to polish my public speaking skills, my leadership skills and my presentation skills," Barbuto explained. "I've always had a fear of public speaking. The biggest fear, for most, is not getting a point across or that you'll make a fool of yourself. This (being a Toastmasters member) gives us all of the tools to make us a better speaker."

Barbuto said that three-to-five members make a presentation at each meeting. Members start with a four-to-six minute speech and work their way up to a seven-minute speech. Guidelines are given and technical information regarding grammar, gestures, eye contact, voice control and more can be found in each member's manual.

Nancy Boyle, executive director of the South Shore Women's Business Network, speaks at a recent Toastmasters meeting in Hingham.

Staff photo/Bill Wadsworth

"After the speech, each person is evaluated by an assigned evaluator," Barbuto said. "It's a very supportive environment. We all started out at square one and we've made great strides. I can now confidently get up in front of a group and speak. Of course, I still get nervous, but I know I'm not going to flip out."

The group has also given a lot of confidence to Maura Fitzgerald. Fitzgerald was born in Ireland and said she was also self-conscious about her accent. Fitzgerald, who is an assistant treasurer and development officer at the Weymouth Savings Bank, said there are occasions when she would have to stand up in front of a group of employees to speak and became very nervous.

"It was awesome for me to think about speaking in front of a group," Fitzgerald said. "I'm a shy, introverted person. I joined the group for courage. In a word, that's why I joined, courage."

Fitzgerald said group members are asked to adhere to a number of rules regarding how the meeting is run but after becoming familiar with the protocol, she became very comfortable.

"It has given me a comfort zone and has taken away the fear of public speaking. I'm not intimidated by public speaking anymore and I'm sure it's because of my Toastmasters experience," Fitzgerald said.

According to Fitzgerald, members are allowed to progress at their own pace. Members are encouraged to give at least one speech within the first month but there is no pressure to fulfill any requirement. Fitzgerald said that although it sounds very school-like, it's really very enjoyable.

"It has been a lot of fun," said Pat MacIsaac, a group member and the owner of the South Shore Hypnosis Center in Hingham. "We are critiqued in a very kind and gentle way. It has given me confidence and the ability to think on my feet. The combination of practicing public speaking and learning technical information makes it a very effective course."

Barbuto and Kathleen Hassan, another club member, were recently interviewed on "The Business Show," a Continental Cable show based in Scituate and broadcast all over the South Shore.

"Being involved in Toastmasters has helped me immeasurably," Barbuto said. "I never would have been able to go on a cable T.V. show in a million years."

The cost to join the Network Voice is $36 and the membership fee is renewed every six months. Barbuto said the membership is drawn from the South Shore Women's Business Network and currently 22 women members make up the group but men are welcome to join. Barbuto said in the future, she plans to introduce some new elements to the group, including the development of a guest speaker pool from which local business people can draw.

According to Fitzgerald, anyone who has to address people in public, stand up and talk at a meeting, or anyone who wants to regain a feeling of confidence or control would benefit from being a member.

For more information about the Network Voice, or to find out how to become a member, call Pat MacIsaac, 749-9050 or Nancy Boyle, 749-8883.

GOING PLACES

THE AMBIANCE OF ENGLAND CLOSE TO HOME

"Would you care for a bit of clotted cream with your scone, Madam? Please, allow me to pour your tea..." No, you don't have to travel across the Atlantic to enjoy an authentic, traditional English tea. A trip to Victoria, British Columbia, can do quite nicely, thank you very much. Located on the southern tip of Vancouver Island, off Canada's Pacific Coast, Victoria has steadfastly stuck to its British heritage. (The city was named for England's Queen Victoia.) As a provincial capital city, Victoria also is home to an ornate Parliament building, and the renowned Royal British Columbian Museum, which brings alive the history of the area's Native North Americans as well as the arrival of the British. Just for fun, take a stroll along the sparkling Inner Harbour, and catch the boats, shops, and street performers – with English accents, of course.

The accent is on well-planned travel here at SCITUATE HARBOR TRAVEL, whether you are vacationing on Vancouver Island or traveling for business here in the States. We are fast, efficient, thorough, and professional in all aspects of travel, and hope you'll stop by soon at 53 Cole Parkway, Scituate Harbor, and find out how hassle-free travel can be. We can make your travel arrangements over the phone (call 545-4281 or 800-354-2720), but we'd love to have you come see us, get acquainted, and look over our exciting travel brochures.

Winter hours: Mon.-Fri., 8:30-5:30, Sat., 9-2. 24 hour answering, free ticket delivery, senior discounts.

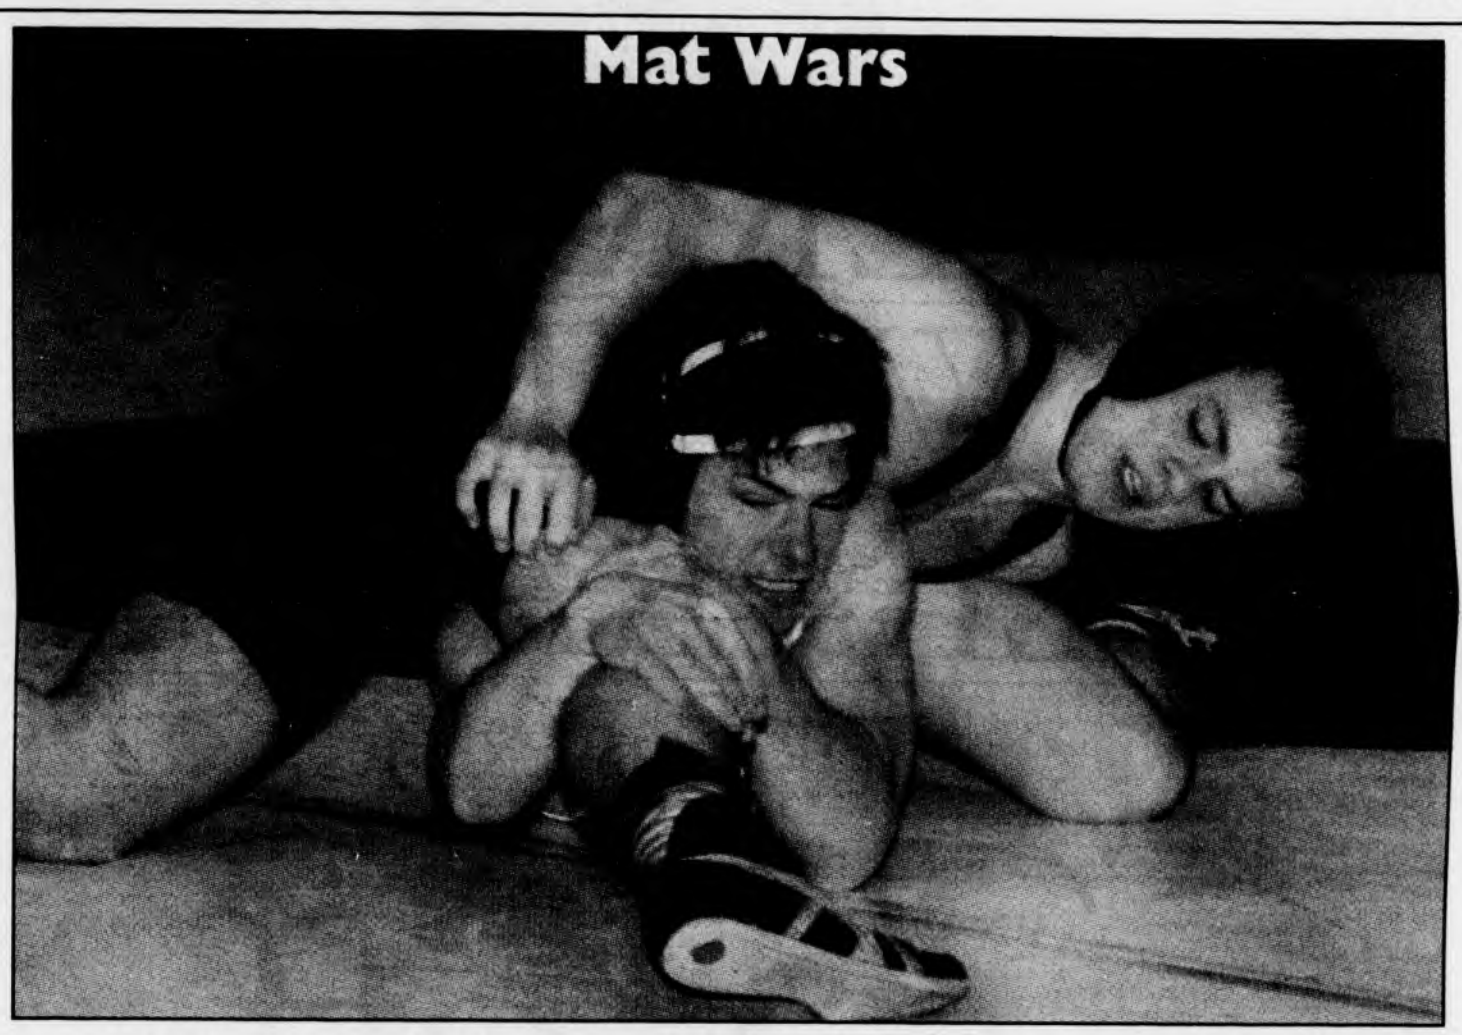
Plan to be Put Before Town Meeting

Town Could Take Control of Private Septic Systems

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

Managing on-site septic systems is the third and final piece of a town-wide wastewater management plan and could be the most controversial because those affected would have to turn over control of their systems to the town.



"This is changing the whole concept of dealing with on-site systems," Selectman Nan Roth said. "Essentially, it's the town's system on your property."

The complicated on-site septic management plan would involve having the town manage on-site septic systems and assess homeowners for operating and maintenance costs, the way the town will for those in the sewer districts.

Plans are to tie the two pending sewer projects in north and central Cohasset and the on-site management plan into a single town meeting article which will ask the town to subsidize 50

Cole Named Publisher of South Division of CNC

Community Newspaper Company announced this past week a new executive publisher for its south division, which includes the Mariner and Cape Cod Community Newspapers.

Asa Cole of Norwell, who was publisher of the company's west division, will take over for Margaret Smoragiewicz, who announced her resignation last week.

"I have greatly enjoyed my time here and am proud of the work we accomplished, but now it's time to move on," Smoragiewicz said. "I wish Asa all the best and leave him with a wonderful staff to carry on the mission of the papers."

For Cole, the move is somewhat of a homecoming since he

Principal Conducts Musical Valentine

By Doreen Leggett
COHASSET MARINER

Marilee Cantelmo, principal of the Osgood School, has attended numerous concerts put on by the Plymouth Philharmonic Orchestra. On Feb. 15, she'll have the best seat in the house.

Cantelmo will conduct one of the scores in the Philharmonic's benefit pops concert "Let Me Call You Sweetheart: A Musical Valentine."

The concert combines love songs from opera, stage and screen. Operafest, a group of young adults training for professional singing, will join the Philharmonic.

"I'm wondering what it feels like to hear the music from the conductor's podium," she said.

She won the honor at the Philharmonic's "Denim and Diamonds" fund-raising auction.

"I used to work at an auction, so I'm not shy," Cantelmo said of her bidding style.

Cohasset's Week

Interim Town Administrator Named

Selectmen named Ed McCann of Scituate as interim town administrator this week. They said McCann would be paid at the same rate as former town administrator Gregory Doyon, whose salary was about $55,000 a year.

McCann, a consultant, has 20 years local government experience. He could be at the post for up to six months or longer if town meeting opts to change to a town manager form of government, a process which would take longer than hiring a new town administrator.

McCann, who said he has "a short learning curve," said once details of his new position are ironed out, he could be on board within a week.

Osgood Committee has Vacancies

The Osgood School Reuse Committee has been expanded to nine members and needs some recruits, Selectman Peter Pratt said Monday. The charge town meeting gave to the committee is to maximize the sale value of the property and to bring it onto the tax rolls, Pratt pointed out. Up to three more members are needed. Interested citizens should contact the selectmen's office at 383-9900.

Street Light Request Denied

Selectmen said approving a street light between 66 & 72 Church St. would open the door for similar requests from all over town.

They told Tony Carbone, who brought the matter to the board, that they have no problem if citizens want to pay for the lights themselves.

Carbone pointed out that Church Street narrows where he feels the light is needed and that it is a safety issue.

Selectman Peter Pratt said by granting this request, the town would be on a "slippery slope" and would have to respond to others, such as those on Cedar Street who also want more street lights.

After grappling with the issue, selectmen decided to "re-inventory" the town and find out which lights are out and which ones are being paid for by citizens.

The town's budget for street lights is $52,000 a year, Selectmen Chairman Merle Brown said. The town gives priority lighting to intersections and dangerous curves, he said.

Keep Water Pipes From Freezing

It's getting colder outside. But if you think it's tough for you, think about your water pipes. Freezing weather can cause them to burst, which of course, won't be any picnic for you either.

That's why the Massachusetts-American Water Company has created a list of cold weather tips to help you and your water pipes through the winter.

* Wrap exposed pipes with insulated material.

* Plug drafty window cracks and repair broken panes to make basements — and any water lines and meters in them — more secure against the cold.

* Check crawl spaces and garages to make sure the pipes are protected.

* Drain water and remove hoses from outside faucets. During freezing weather, any water in the piping may freeze and cause a rupture.

* Identify your home's main water shut-off valve with a tag or colorful sticker and instruct all members of the household where it is located. If a water line bursts, use this valve to close the water supply entering your home. If you do not have a main shut-off valve, consider having one installed.

* Also remember to keep garage and basement doors closed, since cold air could freeze any exposed pipes.

Beach Stickers Won't Go Up

Selectmen refused a request by Town Clerk Marion Douglas to increase the price of beach stickers from $7 to $10 ($3 to $5 for senior citizens).

Douglas said the increase would make it easier to issue stickers and bring in more revenue.

Selectman Nan Roth said she couldn't support the increase unless it was "only in some budget sense that we need the extra money."

Town to Try New Voting Machines

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

Secretary of State William Galvin apparently does not want a repeat of last fall's race in the Democratic Primary for the 10th District Congressional seat when it took a recount and two judges to determine the winner.

As William Delahunt, D-Quincy, takes over the reins in Congress from Gerry Studds — no doubt to both Delahunt and his Democratic Primary challenger Phil Johnston of Marshfield, "punch-card ballots" are dirty words.

Cohasset was one of several towns in the 10th District using the antiquated system where voters use a stylus to punch a hole in their voting card. The card is then read by the voting machine which counts votes only when light shines through the hole. Results in punch-card towns were challenged because of the high number of "blank" votes cast.

Town Clerk Marion Douglas may take advantage of a $3 million state revolving fund proposed by Galvin for punch-card communities that wish to replace their voting systems.

"Since voters are questioning the punch-card system, I think we should look at alternatives," said Douglas in a Jan. 6 letter to selectmen.

Douglas said she will test the Accu-Vote System, an optical scan reader at the May 3 town election. In this system, voters fill in circles and the scanner reads the marks.

The test run, with no obligation to buy, will cost $250 plus ballot printing costs, Douglas said.

If Cohasset decided on the new system, two machines at $6,000 each would be required, one for each precinct. The annual service contract would be $125 per machine. Machines could be purchased through the proposed state revolving fund with money reimbursed to the state through the town's local aid "cherry sheet," which represents the revenue sharing the town receives annually from the state.

percent of the price tag of the projects pending a successful Proposition 2-1/2 override. The override would be necessary because the projects' costs could not be absorbed within the tax base.

Town meeting voters can decide to approve one, two or all three projects through the article, which is currently planned to be in three parts. Town meeting approval is required for the projects to move forward. If the subsequent override fails, the affected homeowners would have to pick up 100 percent of the costs of the projects.

Officials said this week that the town accountant is working with the numbers and did not provide a ball-park override figure. But if the town matches the $3.2 million state loan program to manage septic systems with taxpayer subsidy and pays for 50 percent of the about $12 million needed for the sewer projects, the override could be in the vicinity of $10 million.

Under the plan, the board of health would inspect the remaining 1300 septic systems in town and prioritize wastewater districts according to their proximity to water sources. The health board would then decide when systems need maintenance, pumping or replacement. Two hundred septic systems in Cohasset have already been inspected, repaired or replaced and are therefore in the plan, Health Board Chairman Tom Cook told selectmen Tuesday. Plans are within ten years to bring all 1500 systems in town into compliance with Title V, the state environmental code.

The 10-year on-site wastewater management plan will cost about $10 million with the town picking up half the cost (about $3.2 million) over the first six years through an override with the balance coming from state loans, administered by the town, that homeowners would have to pay back. The town would then provide loans for the remaining four years that are needed to bring all septic systems into the plan.

In addition to operating and maintenance fees, homeowners would also pay into a pool that would go toward paying for the future replacement costs of failing systems for a total annual assessment of $438 on average. The fees are comparable to those that sewer users must pay and would be based on water usage, the way sewer fees are, the health board said.

Health board member Kevin Ulmer said the septic plan will allow those homes with on-site systems to appreciate in value at the same rate as those on sewers.

Selectman Peter Pratt said the plan addressed concerns of those citizens who say: "I'll never have a sewer district, what can you do for me?"

The town is under a court order to solve its sewer problems and address failing septic systems. Sewer Commission Chairman Edward "Ted" Guild pointed out that if the town reneges on its plan to upgrade its sewer system, it will find itself in court.

But selectmen said this week, they want to be kept "in the loop" on these matters. Selectman Nan Roth and a health board member will join Guild in negotiations with the state on the town's legal liabilities relating to the sewer and septic issues.

"It's not every day you get to work in your hometown and the area you were raised and summered in," Cole said.

"Because I know these towns, I know what the community weeklies mean in terms of keeping people informed and celebrating local accomplishments. My goal is to make our papers even more relevant to our readers' lives," Cole said. "I hope people will share their views with me on our newspapers and how they would like to see us better serve them."

"I think there is no business more rewarding than putting out a good hometown newspaper which helps shape the day-to-day life in the community," he added.

Cole started his newspaper career in 1968 as a reporter at what is now called the daily Middlesex News in Framingham. He became executive editor in 1982 and took over as publisher in 1994.

"Asa will bring his years of successful newspaper experience, strong management skills and tremendous work ethic to this new assignment," said CNC president Michael Veitch in making the announcement.

CNC also announced other organizational changes this past week, including the search for an executive editor in chief, a position which Cole filled on an acting basis for 20 months.

At the same time the company restructured its staff, approving 64 new positions and eliminating 35 others.

Principal Conducts

What made her more zealous in pursuit of the prize, which included conducting lessons, limousine service and dinner, was that she wasn't bidding for herself.

Her husband, Frank, had said earlier that he'd really like the chance to conduct. When he was in college at Mass Maritime Academy, he was the head of the band.

Cantelmo said since their 21st anniversary was fast approaching, she thought she'd give him the opportunity as a gift.

Her plans went awry.

"The maestro came up to congratulate me, and I said no, this is for my husband," said Cantelmo.

The maestro, Steven Karidoyanes, had other ideas. He said that since last year's guest conductor was a man, this year it had to be a woman.

"I tried my best to convince everyone it was for my husband," she said. "I couldn't get out of it."

She said her husband chuckled at the turn of events and told her later that he'd enjoy the concert more watching her.

"This has become one of the very coveted prizes," said Philharmonic Director Roberta Otto. "It is really unique to get up and and conduct a symphony orchestra."

Cantelmo has a minor in music, and has learned how to play many instruments, such as the oboe, piano, and recorder. She has also had singing lessons.

However she has never conducted, except for a brief stint with her high school band.

That is where the lessons come in, she explained. Cantelmo said the Philharmonic conductor, Karidoyanes, is tentatively teaching her to perform one of Sousa's marches.

"But who knows? It might be a surprise. It depends if I can learn it," she said with a smile.

Cantelmo, who holds Karidoyanes in high regard, is both nervous and excited about her opportunity.

She explains that the orchestra is comprised of about 70 talented musicians. The conductor is the one who brings them together.

The musicians are very familiar with their music. Without the conductor's guidance, however, they could get out of sync.

The musicians set their music stands so they can see the conductor at all times.

Cantelmo raves about the Philharmonic, whose concerts she and her husband have attended since the 1970s.

She said they became season subscribers, and then became involved in fund-raising and the board of directors.

The Philharmonic, whose concerts routinely sell out, is trying to raise additional money to put on more concerts, including a July Fourth celebration.

The July 4 concert will celebrate the birth of the nation, in America's hometown, and the 100th birthday of one of United States' greatest composers, John Phillip Sousa, said Cantelmo.

Because ticket sales only cover 40 percent of the costs, additional funds are needed.

"We try to keep prices low so people on the South Shore can take advantages of an opportunity to hear good quality music locally," she said.

The Plymouth Philharmonic was founded in 1913 and improves every year, said Cantelmo.

Cantelmo was introduced to the symphony at a young age. Her parents were big fans of the symphony and used to take their children, starting in elementary school, to the closest one, which was in Minneapolis.

With three children of her own - Alysia, Nate and Caitlyn - plus numerous others at the Osgood School, Cantelmo rarely finds time to play her instruments. She makes time, however, to enjoy the music of others.

"My love for education overcame my love for music," she said. "I always wanted to do something with children."

Cantelmo said her parents' influence helped her develop an interest in music and that music is part of a child's well-rounded education.

Marilee Cantelmo, principal of the Osgood School, will take center stage at the Plymouth Philharmonic Orchestra's benefit pops concert, Feb. 15.

She said the Plymouth Philharmonic has an open house before some of the concerts where children can come in and try the instruments.

Cantelmo explained that hearing a live concert is a different, more powerful experience than just hearing a recording.

"I particularly admire the strings," she said. "There is something about the strings that is absolutely beautiful."

Cantelmo's two daughters play string instruments, as did her grandmother.

The Philharmonic draws subscribers from over 70 local communities.

"If anything it seems to be growing," Cantelmo said, adding that Karidoyanes always says that the Philharmonic is one of the South Shore' best kept secrets.

Cantelmo hopes it won't remain so. The secretary at Osgood has told most of the staff, and several family friends are planning on attending.

The sweetheart concert is perfect for lovebirds, and a group of couples can sit together at tables up front.

"It is light and people feel they have a real chance to participate," said Otto.

"It tends to be a fun evening for everyone," agreed Cantelmo."I feel honored to be a part of this concert and have the opportunity to lead such a group of talented musicians."

"Let Me Call You Sweetheart" begins at 8 a.m. at Memorial Hall in Plymouth. For more information, call (508) 746-8008.

Golf Club Parking Lot Debate Only at the Surface

By Jason Bouffard
COHASSET MARINER

To pave or not to pave. That is the central issue in the debate between the town's conservation commission and the Cohasset Golf Club concerning the proposed expansion of the club's parking lot.

Representatives from the golf club met with the conservation commission last week to discuss changes in the plans for a parking lot at the club with about 200 spaces.

Since they last met, the club has down sized the proposed lot, and addressed other areas of the plan in order to mitigate potential flooding in the neighboring community and danger to nearby wetlands.

During the meeting, several commission members endorsed the idea of laying a surface on the proposed lot that is able to be penetrated, such as gravel, rather than impervious pavement. Many members came out in favor of the suggestion because a penetrable surface would not produce as much runoff water, and would therefore reduce potential flooding.

This would also be a reduction in the amount of runoff flowing from the lot into a nearby intermittent stream. Although the stream is protected by law, part of the proposed work would take place inside a 100-foot buffer zone surrounding the water.

While commission chairman Veneta Roebuck and conservation agent Paul Shea suggested that areas outside the buffer zone could be paved and areas inside remain unpaved, other members felt differently. Vice-chairman Jeff Waal, along with member Ed Graham, felt that the entire area should be topped with a permeable covering. Commission member Susan Cope said she would be willing to see the site paved if golf club owners paid for the mitigation of the resulting runoff water.

Member Jim Dedes, after pointing out that a pervious surface can allow contaminants such as oil and gas to seep directly into the soil, supported a paved lot, provided that adequate detention of runoff is provided. Currently plans incorporate two detention ponds to which runoff water will flow.

While golf club representative Peter Costello argued that it would be difficult to delineate parking spaces in an unpaved lot, Roebuck disagreed.

"There are many standard engineering practices currently in use to delineate parking in lots that aren't paved," she said. noting that the line painting is not the only way to depict a parking space.

"Delineation of parking is not a problem, The problem is 'how much fill is going in here?" she asked. She and other members felt that too much landfill on the site would add to the flooding problem. Although the total landfill figure was not available, commission members hope to get a better idea of the amount of filling proposed so that the effects of the work can be assessed.

Abutter, Mary Foley, 184 Lamberts Lane, told the commission that flooding conditions already exist in the neighborhood and cautioned them to think hard before making a final decision.

"If there is a mistake made and we end up with a worse problem, the town is not necessarily going to help," she said. Because of Lamberts Lane's private road status, residents are concerned that the town may not be responsible for repairs along the roadway.

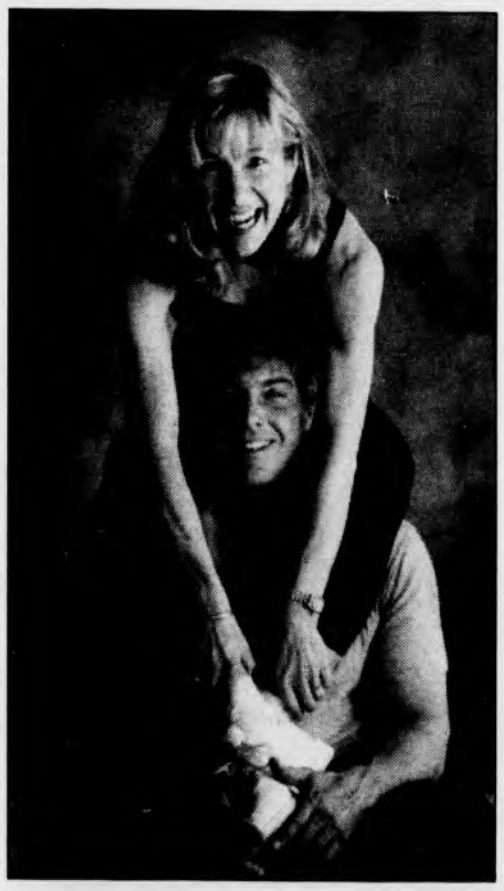
Golf club representatives plan to revise the site plan and meet with conservation commission members in working session by Feb. 20.

Turkey Hill Grant Money Confirmed

State environmental officials have confirmed that the towns of Hingham and Cohasset are receiving almost $450,000 in self-help grants to purchase 50 acres of undeveloped land at Turkey Hill.

Last fall, Secretary of Environmental Affairs Trudy Coxe announced the grants during a visit to Turkey Hill, and praised the joint efforts of private conservation groups and the two towns to acquire this property that offers commanding views of Boston Harbor and Harbor Islands.

Town meetings in Cohasset and Hingham approved $125,000 and $164,500, respectively, as their shares of the $810,000 purchase price. The balance was raised through the grant, and by the Cohasset Conservation Trust, the Hingham Land Conservation Trust, and the Trustees of Reservations, which will manage the property.



Hingham's share of the grant for the 30 acres in that town is $262,440; Cohasst's share for the 20 acres on its side of the town line is $174,960.

Turkey Hill, which straddles the town line between the two towns and is adjacent to the 800-acre Whitney and Thayer Woods and the 2,900-acre Wompatuck State Park, was offered for sale earlier this year by the heirs of Joseph Saponaro, who operated a riding stable on the property for many years.

The Trustees of Reservations plans additional fund-raising to cover the costs of renovating the Saponaro house which will be used for a resident caretaker, and to provide facilities for visitors to the area.

AROUND TOWN/Sallyann Chatterton

Be Sure to See 'Welcome Garden' at Alumni Field

Remember some time ago we told you about the "welcome garden" located in front of the new Alumni Field? If you haven't seen it, it is a great addition to the field! Anyway, we have to give some wonderful people credit for making this happen, and maintaining it! Rose Collins, on behalf of field hockey, Paul Cotter who is representing soccer, Joe Sestito who will plant it in the spring and Ralph Froio who will take care of it in the fall — this to be done on an annual basis! See how lucky we are to live in a town where people are great, and care! A huge thanks from us!

Happy Anniversary greetings go to David and Anita Bernstein, they celebrated their 35th Jan. 14. You two are a special couple, and we hope that the next 35 are even better than the first!

Also, Happy Birthday greetings go to Russ Yeager — his birthday was Jan. 4, but sometimes this reporter doesn't get the news until after the event! Anyway Russ hope your day was a special one! We know that you are!

Hope that everyone who got the recent invitation from Principal Collins is as proud of it as we are of you for receiving it! Tuesday, Jan. 7, at 2:15 p.m. in the cafeteria at CHS, academic awards for the first quarter were presented. Lots of times we neglect to mention how wonderful you scholars are, — that does not mean that we don't know how super you and your efforts are!! After all, you are our future!

Plymouth State College sends us word that one of their freshmen, Nathan Caldwell is doing an admirable job on the wrestling team for them! He is in the heavyweight division.

Here is some great news from Boston College High School, three residents from our town have been named to the first term honor roll at their school. Benjamin T. Smoot, class of '99, earned himself the distinction of High Honors; Jason S. McCaffrey, class of '98 and Robert C. Morgan, class of '99 have established themselves as scholars also! As we have said in the past, be proud of yourselves and keep up your outstanding work.

A standing ovation goes to Stefanie Noering, a sophomore at Nobles & Greenough, who was awarded the honor of a field hockey all-star for her dedication and ability last season! Stefanie is a sophomore and has already played for two years as a starter! She is the Bulldogs top offensive threat!

She finished in the top five of the Independent Schools League in scoring with 17 goals and four assists for 21 points earning her the slot on the A11-ISL squad. Listen to this, Stefanie broke her nose to win a game in overtime, if that isn't dedication — she was back on the field the next day for the finals, and scored the first goal en route to victory! It was Nobles first ever New England title! Get this folks, Stefanie also skis and plays lacrosse at Nobles, and she is a hockey captain-elect as a junior next fall. She strives to be the best, and we extend our applause!

Grace Nevins from Cohasset takes her grandmother, Sharon Hedden of San Francisco, along to an open house at the Old Colony Montessori School in Scituate.

Emily M. D'Urso, a sophomore at Mount Holyoke College is on tour this January as a Member of the Mount Holyoke College Glee Club. She left Boston Jan. 11 with 45 other classmates. Emily will have quite an adventure, including a visit to Mozart's houses and many tours — while on tour she will perform six concerts and while there she will stay with a German family! Isn't that a wonderful thing? Oh, Emily, will you please fill us in upon your return? It sounds so great and we are so happy for you!

Polly Doggett has news of two former Cohasset families, the Turners who lived off of Forest Avenue, and the Woodburys who lived on a new lane off of King Street. Beau and Kathy have chosen to serve as Mission President in Tacoma, Washington for the next three years, and Tom and Zella Turner are living in Roy, Utah — you can believe that further news of these families will appear soon, we think that they are Cohassetites at heart! And, we miss them!

Lastly, time to tell you of a great new hair stylist, no frills included! 'Tis called Cohasset Cuts, his name is Danny, located in the Cohasset Plaza — he is busy, but your wish is his command.

I really hope that you will call with your news, we all want it, need it, love it!

Winter Wildlife Camp Offered

The New England Wildlife Center is holding a four-day winter vacation camp entitled "To Fly," Feb. 18-21, for children ages 7 to 12. The camp, which will be held at the center in Bare Cove Park, focuses on all aspects of flying. Students will hold and fly hawks and owls and other birds, examine feathers and insect wings under a high-powered microscope, learn how to make the best paper airplanes and set off model rockets. Students will also visit Harvard University's Museum of Comparative Zoology to examine flying dinosaur and bird skeletons. Participants will also visit the Norwood Community Airport, where they will examine airplanes up close and see how airfoils work.

The cost of the camp is $150 and includes transportation, admissions and supplies. To register, please call the center at 749-1248 and speak to Elaine Mahoney or Greg Merts.

Portable Wheelchair Ramp is Available

In the photograph, Robert "Buzzy" Stanton uses a portable ramp to get up a six-inch step outside the Cohasset Fire Department on Elm Street. Bud Ahearn of the Cohasset Commission on Disabilities arranged the demonstration for the photograph. The ramp was purchased three years ago by the Disabilities Commission for use by anyone in the community who wants to attend an event that is not accessible because of a step, curb or high threshold. The ramp is about three feet wide by three feet long and is made of light-weight metal with a flat that fits over the top of the step to prevent it from slipping. Stanton felt comfortable going both up and down the ramp. To borrow the ramp, call the police dispatch center at 383-1212.

Put a Student to Work

The Social Service League of Cohasset has compiled a list of Cohasset Jr. High School students who are ready, willing and able to do odd or not so odd jobs around your home. Jobs include yard clean up, snow shoveling, pet sitting, babysitting, house cleaning, and cooking at reasonable rates.

For names and phone numbers of students, call 383-0771.

Community Gardeners to Meet

The monthly meeting of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset will be held Tuesday, Jan. 28, at the Lighthouse Keeper's Cottage, 97 Border St. Coffee will be served at 9 a.m.; the meeting will commence at 9:30 a.m.

This month, club members will create a valentine terrarium. Please bring a clear glass container for this project.

Redirecting Physical Education

If you were a typical teenager way back when gym was required every day — you probably expended as much energy trying to get out of class as you did breaking a sweat.

Many of us remember gym class as lining up to do calisthenics, such as jumping jacks and touching our toes, followed by picking teams, getting a ball of some sort, and playing a game.

While this was fine for some — many students hated gym with a passion. But ironically — a generation or so ago, that didn't matter so much because as a rule, we were slimmer and fitter than most of today's adolescents. We saw less TV, ate less fast food and walked more.

Cohasset schools health coordinator Michael Gill wants to redirect today's physical education program by focusing on the fitness of the individual student who could reach personal fitness goals through a variety of exercise regimens.

As he reported to the school committee two weeks ago, he envisions a state-of-the-art fitness center which could also be open to the public.

"Fitness is for everyone." Mr. Gill pointed out. "Basketball isn't. Soccer isn't."

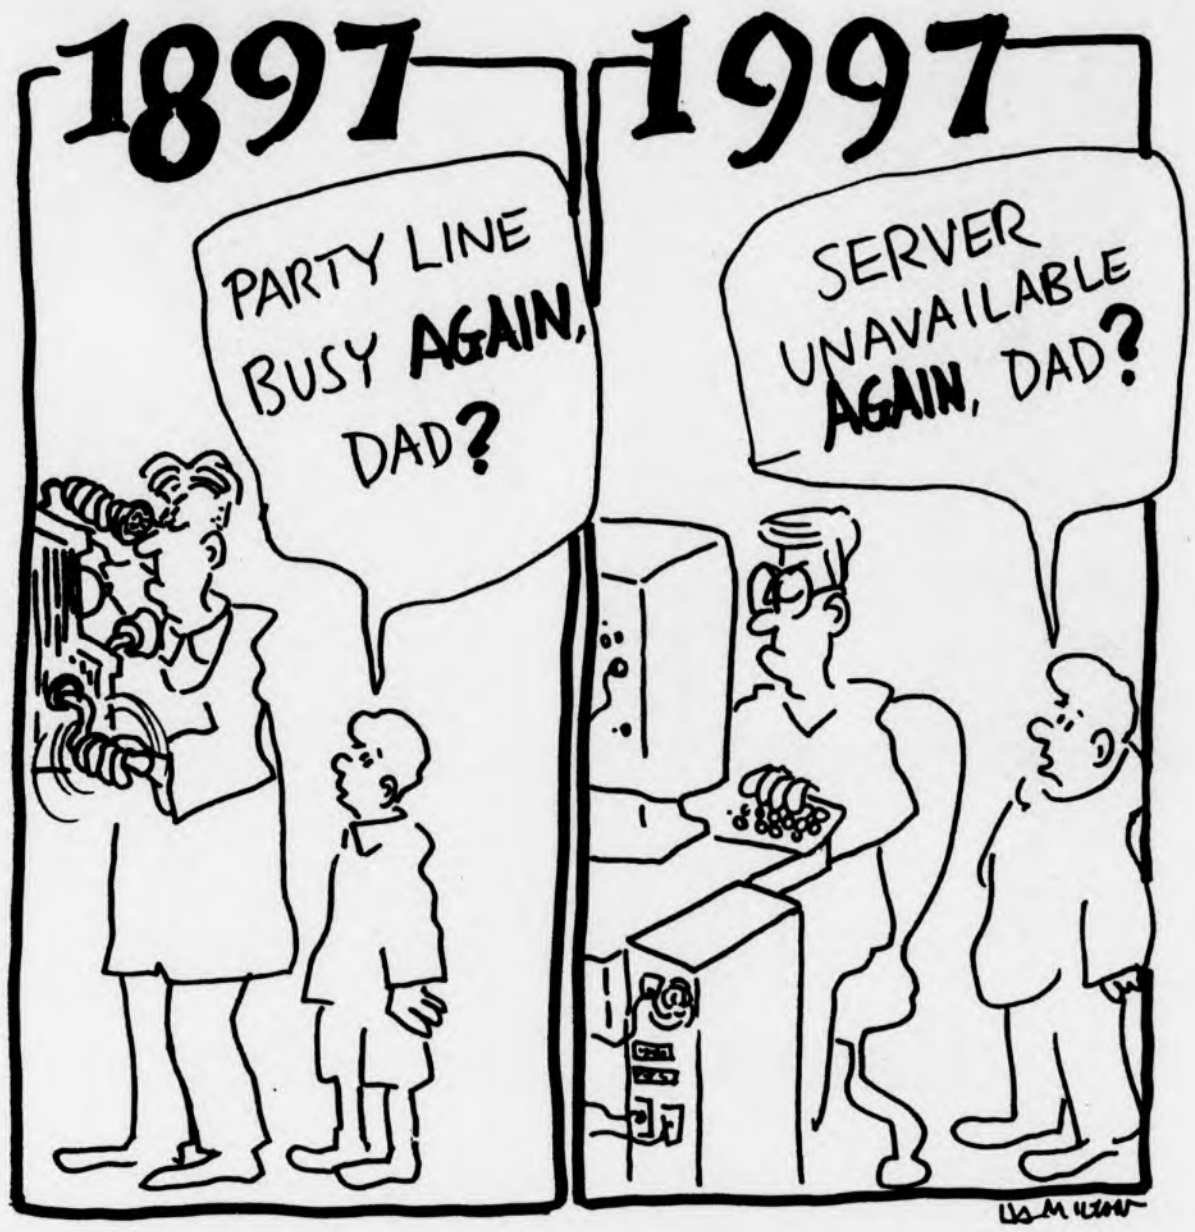
We think Mr. Gill's proposal has great potential.

Not only would more teenagers become physically fit — but if graded on their fitness improvement and not on their ability to perform in a game, they might really get motivated.

The result is a natural one: better health and feeling better about oneself.

Nothing feels as good as being in shape. And it's a shame to see so many youngsters today with weight and health problems because they sit around too much.

Mr. Gill's proposal comes with a price tag. Initial equipment costs would be $6,600. To fully-equip the fitness center would cost $100,000, money which could be raised through private donations.



While the fitness center may sound expensive, we believe improved fitness among our youth will pay off in the long run. What better education for life is there than taking care of your body? Let's face it, with "managed care" our personal health is our responsibility. Educating our youth to that fact is critically important as health care dollars become more limited.

We hope this program gets off the ground and encourage any potential sponsors to contact Mr. Gill at the high school.

As Mr. Gill says: "Every student can feel success with a fitness program. Not everybody will feel success with soccer or basketball."

The same way an athlete finds that success on the field can lead to success off the field — students, who dislike gym, may find that a personal fitness regime is to their liking and leads to results they'd never imagined.

Keep Hagerty Property Open to All

To: Board of Selectmen

At their Jan. 13 meeting, the recreation commissioners discussed the various questions surrounding potential uses of the Hagerty property in some detail and depth.

Resultant of this discussion, the commission, with all seven members present, unanimously voted to voice their opinion that the property be utilized for the recreational and conservational purposes it was purchased for. That is, Town Meeting voted to purchase this property under the premise that it be utilized for recreation, conservation and access to our waterways.

Any other use or uses would, in the commissioners' opinion manifest in a misrepresentation to voters of Town Meeting, as it was for these specific purposes that residents agreed to appropriate revenue for purchase of this unique and valuable waterfront property.

The recreation commission feels the building should be sold and relocated from its existing site, perhaps keeping the structure on the tax roll, while providing, via relocation, more space for land use for all residents at that site.

Access for all residents to this property is of essential importance to the commissioners. As you know, the land is unique and offers the potential to be enjoyed by all residents. Utilization of the property to its maximum extent would provide for a waterfront park/recreation area, while providing better access to our waterways. Both passive and active recreational opportunities are possible, while also retaining the area in a conservational way. Removal of the structure, even across the street, would allow ample area for parking, picnic benches and an enhanced boat launching facility. All of this could be provided at relatively low construction and continued maintenance costs. All residents would have access; important in the light that all residents have helped purchase the land.

Further, the recreation commissioners feel that any Request for Proposal under consideration currently, should be postponed until after Town Meeting. Concern exists for the potential of unclear and/or conflicting legislation to be placed before voters at Town Meeting.

As you may be aware, the seven member board of recreation commissioners are elected to represent the best interests of all residents relative to their recreational and leisure needs. This charge can often mean exclusion of good ideas and projects, in favor of other projects which have a wider spectrum of impact upon residents.

We thank you for your time and consideration of our thoughts and input regarding this matter which we feel is of extreme importance of all residents.

John M. Worley, Recreation Director
Richard Barrows, Recreation Commission Chairman

Most Callers Want Town Manager

Results of last week's question:
Town Meeting could decide to opt for a town manager form of government. While selectmen would remain responsible for policy making, the town manager could have power and control of the town's day-to-day activities and could appoint certain town officials who would otherwise be elected or appointed by selectmen.

Do you support having a town manager, who would have more power to make decisions, than a town administrator, which Cohasset currently has?

32 Yes, the time has come for Cohasset to have a town manager.

0 No, I think it's possible to operate the town more effectively using the present system with a town administrator.

2 I think either position is unnecessary. Selectmen are elected to run the town, let them do it.

We strongly endorse the idea of a town manager form of government for Cohasset, we moved here eight years ago from Bronxville, N.Y., a small town exactly Cohasset's size which is very well run by a professional town manager guided by an elected mayor and board of trustees. The contrast in efficiencies of government of these two towns is painfully obvious to us as we go to town meetings to make uninformed choices about replacement of front-end loaders and the like.

We think a town manager may certainly be helpful if we could find someone of the caliber of Mr. Lemnios who has been very helpful to the town of Hull. We think that might be great.

Hedlund's Committee Assignments

State Senator Robert Hedlund (R-Weymouth) announced today his legislative committee assignments for the upcoming session and included in his appointments was the influential Senate Ways and Means Committee.

Hedlund was appointed to eight committees, the most of any legislator in the 200-member Legislature. Hedlund was reappointed to the Transportation, Health Care and Public Safety Committees, on which he served last term. Besides Ways and Means, Hedlund was newly appointed to Commerce and Labor, Counties, Science and Technology, and Post Audit and Oversite Committees.

"These new committees will be discussing important legislation in just the next few months. The Committee on Counties will be shortly debating the abolition of county government, which is a bill I filed. Cuts in unemployment insurance rates are being pushed for a quick hearing before Commerce and Labor and both business and labor are very interested in this bill. And as always, local transportation issues will be heard before the Legislature's Transportation Committee," Hedlund said.

Salute to Bob Hedlund

Sunday, Jan. 26, there will be a salute to Senator Bob Hedlund (R-Plymouth/Norfolk) at South Shore Country Club, Hingham, noon to 2 p.m. with special guests Norfolk Sheriff Jack Flood, Plymouth Sheriff Peter Forman, Norfolk District Attorney Jeff Locke, and Plymouth District Attorney Mike Sullivan.

Committee Chairman Polly Logan of Cohasset said Hedlund won every town (Weymouth, Hingham, Cohasset, Hull, Scituate, Marshfield, Duxbury, except three precincts in Braintree). She added Hedlund captured 57 percent of the vote and is now a senior member of the senate.

Other special invited guests include GOP Senate Leader Brian P. Lees of East Longmeadow and GOP House Leader David M. Peters of Charlton and Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray of Cohasset.

For brunch reservations, call Logan, 383-0031, Ann Collins, 749-0817, Carl Harris, 749-7715, Audrey MacDonald, 934-0366, Linda Glennon, 337-4138 or Dana Toland, 337-4383.

'Leap' to Lobster Lab Supported

To the Editor:

I would like to encourage the Selectmen to approve and recommend, and Cohasset citizens to support, the leasing of the Hagerty showroom building to the Lightkeepers for the development of the proposed "Learning Laboratory."

While the proposal to sell the building seemed the first best outcome, the town rejected it. Now this appears as a welcome alternative in a stalemated situation.

Admittedly this is a "leap of faith," but there is a history of success...at least not disaster...in such leaps in the past. The old office building that Habitat turned into housing and taxable property, the old police station became the Teen Center and, of course, the wonderful Lightkeepers facility on Government Island, all are credits to vision. There may have been others that I have forgotten.

The promise of this project is great, and the current sponsors have a record of keeping promises. The risk seems minimal: if it eventually fails, the town is no worse off. The only alternative seems to be to tear the building down, an ultimate cop-out.

I would recommend the leap.

Doyon Bids Adieu to Cohasset

Dear Board Members:

It is with regret that I tender my resignation as Town Administrator of the Town of Cohasset after eight years of rewarding service to the town, effective Jan. 28.

These years have seen many changes in town government, including the building of a transfer station/recycling facility, renovation of the police/fire station, improved athletic facilities, and a soon-to-be-completed public works garage. The town has taken major steps toward preserving its future through key land acquisitions for recreational, open space, watershed protection and improved access to its beautiful harbor.

Service improvements, including establishment of a 911 civilian public safety dispatch center, private operation of the Water Department and consolidation of several operations into a Department of Public Works, have all transpired during these past eight years. The position of Town Administrator also took on new responsibilities over the years, including a more proactive role assisting the Personnel and Capital Budget Committees, chairing the Civilian Dispatch Committee and assuming budgetary control over the Town Hall clerical staff. A closer relationship was developed between the key financial boards of the town, which no doubt was one factor in the large number of successful Proposition 2 1/2 overrides.

It is not my intention to take the credit for all of these projects, as they involved the hard work of many department heads, boards, committees and ordinary citizens, including their willingness to pay more in taxes to improve the town and ensure a better community for future generation of residents. However, I do take some satisfaction in knowing that I was involved in implementing many of them.

In conclusion, I wish to thank the current Board of Selectmen, the eight members that preceded them during my tenure, the management team, selectmen's office staff, as well as the many board and committee members and employees whom I have worked with during this time, for their cooperation and support.

The town of Cohasset has many assets and a lot to be proud of, and it has been a great pleasure for me to have served the community these past eight years.

Gregory J. Doyon
Town Administrator

New Deer Hill School Drama Club Presents 'The Wizard of Oz'

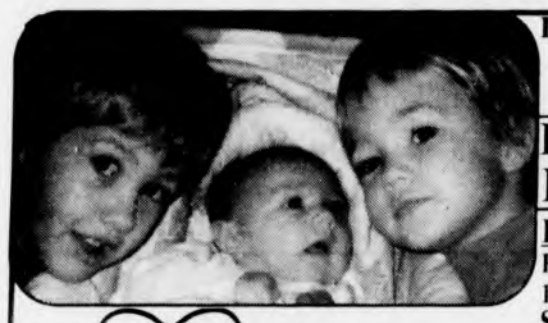
By Mary Earon
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

In 1996, a theater need for the age group at Deer Hill School in Cohasset was realized by Sharon Weber, a Deer Hill mother, dancer and theater enthusiast. Offering a drama club in a public school for fourth- through sixth-graders was not a unique idea, but it would become a unique accomplishment for Sharon and the club steering committee that would form the Cohasset Plays By the Sea Drama Club at Deer Hill School.

The drama club steering committee was comprised of several age groups. They included Ron Nicynski, a Cohasset High School sophomore who has been acting and directing plays since the first grade, and Mary Earon, a Deer Hill mother and writer. Since this was the school's club, and interested in the children's creative input, Sharon encouraged Deer Hill students to join the committee. Those who did included Nicole Turgiss, Meghan Marr, Ali Earon and Krista Nicynski.

Paul Callahan, principal of Deer Hill School and Betty Cisneros, a sixth-grade teacher who became the club's liaison, were supportive and assisted the committee in locating a rehearsal and performance space within the school and setting up a rehearsal schedule conducive to other after-school activities.

Registration for the Cohasset Plays By the Sea Drama Club began in September. When 75 children signed up, Sharon Weber felt satisfied that the need for a theater club had been a true one. Although most children were from Deer Hill, two members came from St. Paul's in Hingham.



Once "The Wizard of Oz" became the chosen project, with Ron Nicynski as director, two more joined the efforts of the club. Joan Jensen, a pianist and Cohasset piano teacher, would become the director of music. Dee Dee Nicynski, Ron's mother, would become instrumental in production.

Local Internet Provider Expands

A local Internet Service Provider (ISP) in Cohasset is taking advantage of the problems being faced by AOL by opening up 13 new POPs (points of presence) for Internet access in Massachusetts. The new POPs, located around Boston, give the 1-year-old South Shore firm a total of 58 communities with local dial-in access numbers.

"The phenomenal growth has been spurred in large part by the poor service being offered by the large providers," said founder Aaron Sawchuk. "The large providers can send the free disks, turn the subscriber on to the wonders of the Internet, and then lose them because of the busy signals and poor customer service."

Compared to the large national providers, local ISPs often can react to market changes quicker, by adding new lines and modems where needed, and adding part-time tech support as needed from the local colleges and universities, to handle fluctuations in demand, Sawchuk said.

AOL announced last month they would provide unlimited dial-in access for $19.95/month, and since then have been unable to handle the volume of activity. "They currently have a user to modem ratio of 50:1, where most ISPs operate on a 15:1 ratio, " Sawchuk said, "and we began noticing an increase in demand for access numbers in areas we didn't serve, so we accelerated our expansion into these 13 new communities." The new exchanges include Cambridge, Billerica, Burlington, Framingham and Woburn. Sawchuk said, "DreamCom now has local numbers from the South Shore to the North Shore, with plans to expand further south to Plymouth and the Cape by summer."

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

DON'T WAVE RED FLAGS

QUESTION: We are going to sell our home. We just repaired a leaky roof. Now, a yellow stain remains on the ceiling. I want to get the ceiling repainted but my husband claims we have spent enough money and showing the paid bill will suffice. Will it?

ANSWER: Don't be pennywise and pound foolish. Each of your prospects will ask about the yellow stain on the ceiling. The receipted bill will never put their minds at ease. Your home will probably sell, but not for the price you are hoping for. The fewer apologies you have to make, the easier it will be to sell. If you have any "red flags" waving – remove them.

GOING PLACES

CARD-CARRYING BARGAINS

Whether it's business or pleasure that takes you to some of the world's great cities, there is a new, increasingly popular way of going in style -- for less. Calling them "city passes" or "city cards," cities including London and Monaco are offering credit card-like vouchers that entitle their bearers to discounts and special perks. For example, the Vienna Card is a three-day pass allowing unlimited use of public transportation and discount rates at many of the city's most popular museums and other attractions. The London for Less card entitles the card holder and four companions to savings of 20 percent at posh shops. plus special deals at over 200 accommodations, restaurants, and tours. Not to be outdone, Paris offers La Carte Musees et Monuments, which lets you skip the lines at the Louvre and other of the city's finest museums and sights. "Play your cards right" and save on your next trip.

You can search and search, but you'll never find a better bargain than making your travel arrangements, for business or pleasure, through the experts at SCITUATE HARBOR TRAVEL. We are your friendly, knowledgeable travel professionals, with years of experience in providing comprehensive, efficient, creative travel planning. And, best of all, we always have your best interests at heart, so you know we won't be satisfied until you are. Our services are free here at 53 Cole Parkway, Scituate Harbor. PSO Seeks Volunteers for Executive Board

The Nominating Committee of the Parent School Organization is seeking volunteers for next year's school board. The PSO is the main communication link between the schools, parents and the community. The board consists of a variety of positions including publicity, treasurer, special program planners, fundraising, METCO liaisons and many more. The board meets once a month during the school year. If you are interested in getting involved with the PSO please call Sarah Markert, 383-6124.

Tribal Rhythms at Deer Hill

On Thursday, Jan. 23, students at the Deer Hill School will participate in a unique educational performing arts event with Tribal Rhythms, appearing in a program entitled Tribal Rhythms Celebration. This program is presented under the auspices of Young Audiences of Massachusetts. Funding for this program comes from a number of sources, including the Cohasset Parent School Organization (PSO).

The program is highly participatory. Students become part of the dramatic stories, create spontaneous music on handmade musical instruments, and move together in "the dance of the mysterious creature." Tribal Rhythms is designed to build community spirit, foster multi-cultural understanding and promote cooperation, respect, creativity and critical thinking.

STUDENT OF THE MONTH/Lydia Guild

I nominate Lydia Guild (grade 8) for Student of the Month for September because of her positive attitude and good spirit.

Lydia is upbeat and easy-going, which is why she is liked by many of her peers. She is also mature about taking responsibility for herself.

Lydia is consistent with her work and thoughtful in her frequent class participation. She is always willing to help other students understand their assignments during study periods when the teacher requests her assistance.

Lydia is simply a pleasure as a person and a student.

Register for Nursery School

The South Shore Community Center Nursery School announces that nursery school applications for the 1997-98 school year are available, at the nursery school and community center offices.

Registration is based on a lottery system.

Applications are available through Jan. 27.

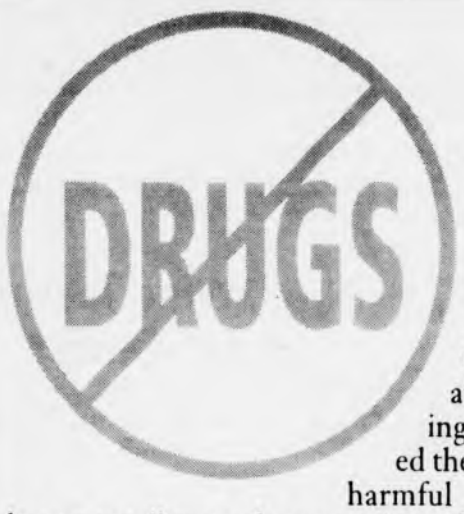
Completed applications must be returned to the community center office by Wednesday, Jan. 29. Applications should be clearly marked "N.S. Registration Application."

Parents registering their child in the Three-Year-Old Program should enclose a copy of the child's birth certificate to ensure proper placement of students in the program. All applications must include the $85 registration fee. Family membership for the school year is included in the fee. There is no financial commitment for children who are placed on the waiting list; these checks will be returned.

The lottery will be drawn for siblings of nursery school students on Monday, Feb. 3. Children of current community center members (as of Dec. 31, 1996) will be drawn on the morning of Tuesday, Feb. 4 and for the general public in the afternoon.

Nursery school acceptance letters will be sent via the mail on Friday, Feb. 7.

The school offers three levels of programs to meet the needs of three-to-five year olds. Programs run from 9 to 11:30 a.m. and from 12:30 to 3 p.m. Some extended after-school programs will be available.



The nursery program is for children who will be three years of age by Oct. 20, 1997. The Pre-Kindergarten program is for children who are, or will be, four years old by Oct.. 20, 1997. The Five-Day Enrichment program is offered to older four year olds, and five year olds who have attended a pre-kindergarten program but are ineligible for kindergarten.

Summer Arts at Derby

Registration is now open for "Summer Arts at Derby 1997" at Derby Academy in Hingham. "Summer Arts at Derby" is a comprehensive arts program for ages eight to 15, that offers classes in drama, music, visual arts, dance, writing, gymnastics, martial arts, photography, and sports. Students choose their own schedules for the five-week program. Dates are June 30 to Aug. 1; hours are 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday. The program culminates in an arts festival Friday, Aug. 1. For more information, call Thalia McMillion, director, at (617) 740-4766.

PSO Help Sought

Many different fund-raising events are being sponsored by the PSO this year, including gift-wrap sales, a fall dance and silent auction etc. The success of these events requires the work of many individuals with many different talents. If you would like to join a committee for one of these events or help out in any manner, please call Tomi Bukowski at 383-6771, Lesley Faber at 383-2071, Patty Smith at 383-2773 or Jane Wasel at 383-0121.

DRUG FACT

"It is sad, and in my opinion, unfortunate that, after having evaluated the multiple harmful effects due to marijuana, the committee decided to be concerned only with the heavy use of this intoxicant. Are we, as the experts of the health of our youth, going to compromise with a drug causing long range consequences to practically all systems of our body? This drug is accumulative, and therefore will sooner or later give some deleterious effect to any user. The drug also develops tolerance and addiction, and its symptoms are often not noticed by the user him/herself because of changed judgment...By not voicing our concern we are responsible for the fast escalating use of marijuana among our patients."

Local Grapplers Prove to be Winning Hosts

Skippers Garner Four Wins to Take Cohasset Wrestling Tourney

By Joe Reardon
COHASSET MARINER

There's nothing quite like dominating the competition in front of your hometown fans.

The Cohasset High wrestling team knows the feeling. The Skipper grapplers had four individual winners and a host of other strong performances to win Saturday's Cohasset Wrestling Tournament. Cohasset's score of 192 points easily outdistanced second-place Rockland, which finished with 164.

Adding to the satisfaction of the win for the Skippers were the performances of Mike Rossi, Justin Buckley and Kevin Duffy. Rossi, winner of the 145-pound division, was named the tournament's Outstanding Wrestler. Buckley dominated the 171-pound division and Duffy turned the competition away at 135. The victories marked the second year in a row the two Cohasset wrestlers finished atop their divisions. Jordan Fiore also recorded a first-place showing, winning the 130-pound division.

Cohasset was never threatened as its grapplers ripped off 11 first-round pins to put the meet away early.

Gymnasts Primed and Ready for Scituate

Lady Skippers Roll Past Hanover on Road to League Showdown

By Joe Reardon
COHASSET MARINER

If they were surfers, Cohasset High's gymnasts would like nothing better than to ride the perfect wave on Monday.

But seeing that the 6-1 Lady Skippers perform their talents on various pieces of apparatus inside a gymnasium, they won't be needing surfboards in their 3:30 meet against undefeated Scituate. What the squad is in search of are flawless, consistent routines.

The Lady Sailors remain the lone team to defeat Cohasset. A win for the Lady Skippers on Monday could practically guarantee share of the Pilgrim Conference title.

Cohasset and Scituate shared the league crown in 1994 and the Lady Skippers then captured undefeated seasons in '95 and '96.

Head coach Erin Sutherland isn't by any means conceding the meet to Scituate.

"If everyone on the team stays healthy and has the meet I know they can, I'm sure we can give Scituate a run for their money," Sutherland said. "If we end in a tie with Scituate (for the title) we'd have a shot at going to the South Sectionals."

Cohasset is coming off its best win of the season, putting the team in position for a quality outing if it can build from Tuesday night's 126.2-123.5 victory over third-place Hanover.

Hanover head coach Dan Hannigan said there were several variables that would have to play out for the Lady Indians to win.

"We had to have a perfect meet and they had to make some mistakes," Hannigan said. "Unfortunately they did-

The Cohasset High gymnastics team faces unbeaten Scituate on Monday at Cohasset beginning at 3:30 p.m. A Cohasset victory would almost guarantee the Lady Skippers a share of the South Shore League title and possibly a trip to the South Sectional meet.

Hoopsters Raise Record to 7-2

By Jim O'Sullivan
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Cohasset Skippers took the hour-and-a-half-long bus ride down to Harwich last Wednesday to square off against the Roughriders. The trip proved worthwhile when Cohasset made quick work of the Roughriders. The trip proved worthwhile when Cohasset made quick work of the Roughriders, handling them easily by a score of 70-59. Junior Paul-Michael Quintin posted a career-high 26 points and Ryan Bishop chipped in 14 of his own.

Fittingly enough, Quintin started the game with two three-pointers to push the visitors out to quick 6-0 lead. J.L. Williams grabbed an offensive board and put it back for two, and Bishop hit a bucket in traffic. After Bishop's two free throws, Quintin reeled off four more points, with a steal and a lay up, and the a pull-up jumper.

Bishop collected four more himself, with an offensive tip-in and a five-footer in the lane. Brian Kilroy ripped down an offensive board and put it back for a pair, giving the Skippers a 24-4 lead, then hustled down to the other end of the floor to come up with a blocked shot. Quintin sank two from the foul line and Buick tossed in one. Burke Davis' three ended a shot run by Harwich and Jamie Buick found Quintin underneath the hoop with a nice pass. Buick hit a turnaround and Quintin closed out the half the same way he started it: with a pair of treys, making the halftime tally 38-28, in favor of the Boys in Blue.

Davis, from his point guard position, popped a three-pointer and Bishop took the entry pass form Buck to the hole for two. Quintin nailed two from the charity stripe and Buick tipped in an offensive rebound. Then, on the next possession, he made a pretty baseline move and finished for the bucket. Kilroy's lay-up made it 51-39 and Bishop's hoop added two to that.

Kilroy's persistence on the offensive glass earned him two more points and set up a Justin McNamara free throw. Bishop hit two free throws, which put the Skippers ahead 58-42. Bishop made a great pass to Quintin, who finished it underneath. Buick made a foul shot, Quintin hit a lay-up, and Davis sank one from the line, making it 65-48. McNamara scored the Skippers final five points, all from throws, bringing the final score to 70-59.

Captain Burke Davis summarized the Skipper victory.

"After an hour-and-a-half bus ride, we didn't come out smoking," he said, "but we came out controlled and we did some things that helped us win."

Coach Ron Ford was even more effusive in his praise of the Skippers' play.

"We played really tough tonight against outstanding team. Harwich is always a difficult game for us. They're very well prepared, they play hard, and it's a long bus ride for us. But the guys came out, got a lead, and the guys off the bench, particularly Kilroy, Buick, McNamara and Hurley, maintained it. They were awesome tonight. We played with a toughness that we haven't shown all season."

After their triumph over the Harwich Roughriders, Cohasset took another trip, this time only to Carver, where they faced the Crusaders. The Skippers improved their league record to 7-2 and avenged two of last year's losses with a 79-68 victory over the home team. Cohasset was led by its big men, as senior J.L. Williams poured down 20 and senior Ryan Bishop marked up 16.

Williams put the Skippers on the board with a three-pointer and Bishop picked up his first points with an offensive tip-up. Williams hauled in an offensive board and put it back for a pair. Bish the dished J.L., who finished nicely. Williams stuck a jumper and

Chatterton Remembers Sweeney's Talent, Problems

By Joe Reardon
COHASSET MARINER

Cohasset High Athletic Director Clark Chatterton remembers just how good a football player Walter Sweeney was, from his days at Cohasset High right through his professional career.

Chatterton, who graduated from Cohasset High with Sweeney in 1959, still has clear memories of the way the former NFL star abused alcohol and drugs.

"We used to watch him when San Diego came to Boston, said Chatterton, a quarterback on the undefeated 1957 Cohasset team when Sweeney played fullback. "He didn't say it, but you could tell he was taking drugs. He could go two straight days without sleep and he had a high tolerance for alcohol."

Sweeney is suing the NFL for $2 million in benefits and $200,000 from the league's player disability fund, claiming he became addicted to drugs that were available to him as a pro player.

The case is being watched closely by lawyers because a ruling in Sweeney's favor could lead to lawsuits by other players and eventually use up the $400 million pension and disability provided by the NFL.

"This is going to have major ramifications if people can proved they take drugs to get away from from the stresses of their jobs," said Chatterton.

Chatterton said Sweeney was among his "close inner circle of friends," during his high school years in Cohasset. Chatterton would often travel to Syracuse University with friends to watch Sweeney play after he received a full football scholarship.

"Even the players at Syracuse marveled at how god he was," said Chatterton.

Following college Sweeney was the No. 2 pick in the draft in 1963 and signed with the Chargers. At the time, his $15,000 contract and $5,000 signing bonus was considered big money for a professional athlete. He played on the first AFL/NFL All-Pro game and his talent was held in high esteem. At the height of his career Sweeney was making $85,000 per season.

"From 1966-71 some considered him to be the best offensive lineman in the game."

Sweeney played for 13 seasons and was selected as an All-Pro eight times. He was known mainly for his strong blocking ability and eccentric behavior. Sweeney once fired a gun when he learned he was being cut by the Chargers and traded to the Washington Redskins. All through his career, however, Sweeney never missed a game.

"He was one of the most clebrated fotball players of his time," Chatterton said.

Sweeney retired in 1975 and then in the '80s toured the country with presidential candidate Michael Dukakis, preaching the evils of drugs and alcohol.

Sweeney, however, was leading a secret life. He was still drinking heavily and hasn't worked since the '80s. Sweeney admitted in 1994 that he was taking drugs during that time frame. He hasn't held a job since 1991.

Chatterton planned to call Sweeney on Wednesday. "It is a sad story," he said. "Anyone in Cohasset who is near that age knows him.

n't make any mistakes. We just didn't have the depth Cohasset had."

Hanover couldn't have gone up against Cohasset on worse night.

For the first time this season, the Lady Skippers were able to field their complete lineup. Every gymnast competed in her best event and a number of season best times were established.

Hanover had the edge on the majority of the top-two slots with Kim Richardson and Renee George owning the first two positions. Only Tara Hettstrom's 8.45 floor routine, which tied her with Richardson for the top spot, saved Cohasset from being shutout from first place in every event.

The Lady Skippers, though, had a tremendous outing with several solid performances. Jodi Colwill's 8.3 on the vault gave her second and she also hit an 8.05 on the beam.

Kristin Sheerin's 8.4 mark on her floor routine tied her for second place with George. Sheerin also registered her top high school score ever with a 32.3 finish that took third in the all-around.

Sutherland said the Sheerin's scores were just an example of her competitiveness.

"She was tired tonight, so she wasn't at her best," Sutherland said. "But even when she's tired she pulls out a good performance."

Erica Hettstrom (8.25), Caitlin Flint (7.9) and Megan Pratt (8.45) all hit season bests with their respective floor exercises.

Sutherland was quick to commend Carlie Carter's vault score of 7.1. "She normally doesn't vault much," Sutherland said, "but she really came through for the team."

Cold Weather Needn't Deter Runners

By Joe Reardon
COHASSET MARINER

With the Boston Marathon and the New England road-racing season a little more than three months away, runners are out in droves packing in their miles in preparation to race.

Up until the end of last week, winter had been kind to the South Shore with only 13 total inches of snowfall in the area and moderate temperatures for this time of year.

The snow has held off, but the first real deep freeze this winter is upon us. And unless you're independently wealthy and can travel to a warm climate to train, or you own a cumbersome indoor treadmill, there are two options. You can bag the daily runs for a few days and wait until the temperature climb back to a sane level. The second option is making sure you are dressed properly and continue with your schedule.

Knowing runners, I mean "real" runners, they're more apt to continue training outside. "Why let a few chilly days interrupt my schedule," they say to themselves. It may sound a bit bizarre to those who have never set an athletic goal for themselves and followed through on the training, but it's the natural reaction.

Cold-weather needn't force you away from the sport. Common sense and a few helpful hints can keep a runner comfortable even on the coldest of days. There are, however, several guidelines to follow when the mercury struggles to reach double digits and the wind is howling.

• On windy winter days, try to begin your workout running into the wind and finish up with the wind at your back. You'll feel less cold and have a forgiving tailwind over the second half of the workout.

• Wear a hat and gloves. This is where the common sense part comes in. Studies on runners and their reaction to the cold have shown that up to 65 percent of their body heat is lost through the head.

On bitterly cold days, a hat that covers your face and mouth is also recommended. You breath in warmer air and you don't have to worry about wind burns. Also, be sure your neck is covered.

I've found that no matter how much you wear on a cold day, if you don't wear gloves you'll be uncomfortable your entire run. Your hands are very sensitive to the cold. There are several different kinds of gortex and winter gloves on the market, but it's not necessary to pay what can be ridiculously high prices for them. A pair of mittens or painter's gloves do the job just find.

• Be sure to wear layers of clothing on cold days. When your body temperature rises during the run, warm air is formed between the layers. If the temperature warms up during the run, you can take off your jacket and tie it around your waist. If you get cold you can simply put it back on.

• Runners should consider wearing their workout clothes in the following order. Start off with a long underwear T-shirt, followed by a short-sleeved T-shirt. A turtle-neck should come next with a nylon jacket the last to go on.

Although they can be quite expensive, serious runners should consider buying a gortex running suit. The material allows sweat to evaporate through it and continues to keep the runner warm. Even on the coldest days, a T-shirt and turtle neck are the absolute most amount of clothing you would need to wear underneath.

It's much easier to keep your legs warm while you're running. It's extremely rare to need to wear more than a pair of long underwear under nylon pants.

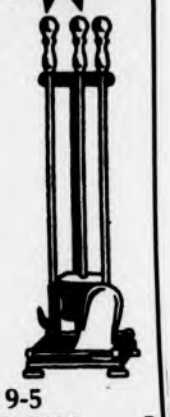
• If at all possible, try to run on off-road courses where the trees provide a natural barrier to the wind. Wampatuck Park in Hingham is a great location, as are the Blue Hills. I wouldn't recommend World's End on extremely cold days. The scenic area is a peninsula and offers little, if any, relief from the cold.

Remember, extreme temperatures, whether they are high or low can tire you out quicker when you first head out. Don't get discouraged. Run at a slower pace and relax. Try to enjoy yourself. Running in cold weather has its advantages. You're out burning calories, losing weight and getting in shape while other people are sitting in front of the TV munching on snacks. Pardon the pun, but in the long run, you're the one who'll be better off.

Cohasset Girls Basketball 'Spirit Night'

Please come to cheer on the girls junior high, jv and varsity teams as they play East Bridgewater, Friday, Jan. 24, at Cohasset High School. The junior high team will play at 3:30, the jv team will play at 5 p.m. and the varsity team at 6:30 p.m.

Children will be admitted free with a paying adult. During halftimes and at the intermissions between games, there will be a basketball shooting contest to benefit the Teen Center. The shootout is for everyone with plenty of prizes.



Don't worry about dinner, the Cohasset Boosters will sell hot dogs and Papa Gino's pizza. The girls basketball teams look forward to seeing you and having you cheer them on. Call Betsy Connolly at 383-1248 if you have any questions about this special basketball event.

Talk on Youth Sports Set For Jan. 28

Does your child play a sport? Are you a coach? If so, then plan to attend the Cohasset PSO's winter presentation on Tuesday, Jan. 28 at 7:30 in the Deer Hill Cafeteria. The featured speaker will be Bob Bigelow, a four-year former NBA player, whose topic will be "A Common Sense Approach To Organized Youth Sports." Bob Bigelow is one of the foremost lecturers in the country regarding the needs of children in youth sports. His opinions have been heard on WEEI-AM Sports Talk Read, NESN and the New England Cable News. He has lectured extensively throughout New England. His talk is educational, challenging, motivational and humourous. Reserve Jan. 28 to attend this forum.

Skipper head coach Torin Sweeney admitted he was surprised by the pace Cohasset set in the early going.

"I wasn't expecting us to open up such a quick lead," said Sweeney.

Cohasset had six other wrestlers finish in the top three. Eighth-grader Craig Sheerin continued putting out strong showings with a third at 103. His older brother, Doug, also garnered a third at 140. Ben Littauer joined his teammates with his bronze medal in the 125-pound division.

Second-place finishers included Mike Baird (119), Luke Caldwell (152) and J.P. Laugelle (215).

The meet offered more excitement than last Wednesday's complete domination of Scituate which resulted in a 44-22 victory. Cohasset came away with 10 wins, four of which were by pin. Baird, Littauer, Fiore and Rossi earned pin victories, while Duffy, Doug Sheerin, Justin Golden, Buckley, Laugelle and Craig Sheerin won their matches on points.

The Scituate win improved Cohasset's record to 7-2 on the season, but the Skippers came up just short in their 33-30 defeat at the hands of three-time state champion Carver on Tuesday night.

Wrestling in front of a huge, vocal crowd, the Skippers came the closest they have come this decade in defeating the Crusaders.

Although he was disappointed that his gritty squad had come so close to beating Carver, only to walk out with nothing, Sweeney was nonetheless extremely pleased with the effort the Skippers put out.

"There's nothing else we really could have done," Sweeney said. "Every kid poured everything out. We wrestled them tooth and nail."

Sweeney said there is still a "mystique" that surrounds the Carver squad. Fans flock to the meets as though the gym was the FleetCenter, and the cheering is non-stop for the former state champions.

"It's one of the few places where home-court advantage plays a part," said Sweeney.

Duffy, Baird and Littauer all had sensational meets, wrestling to victories by pin, while Caldwell and Buckley earned their respective wins on points.

Cohasset takes to the mats again on Friday at home when Marshfield, Braintree and North Quincy come to town for a tri meet beginning at 3:30.

Family limited partnerships help establish limits

By Amy K. Barrett
WORTH MAGAZINE

What do you do when you want to start parceling out your estate and your kids haven't, well, turned out the way you had hoped?

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

A trust fund can keep the money locked away, but after you create the fund you have to hand over control to a trustee, who must be consulted before terms can be altered. That means if your daughter decides to found a religious cult and her trust comes due, you may be out of luck. So here's another option for parents who are planning their estates: family limited partnerships.

"The primary difference between a trust and a partnership is that (in a trust) the giver cannot be a trustee," said Tom Abendroth, an attorney who specializes in estate planning at the Chicago law firm Schiff, Hardin & Waite. Under limited partnerships, however, parents become general partners and are in charge of making decisions about how to manage their real estate, mutual funds, etc., for their children.

And control can mean everything. "I have clients in their 70s who don't feel comfortable giving their children control, because they don't like their son-in-law and think he'll influence spending and because the children don't have their values," said Gideon Rothschild, a New York estate-planning attorney. Instead, those clients put $500,000 into a limited partnership, make themselves general partners, and make their kids limited partners; this gives the kids a stake in the assets, but no voting power. The parents can pay out gifts or interest payments as they see fit. Upon the death of the parents, an appointed successor would take over the partnership.

At that point, another benefit of a limited partnership will come into play: lower taxes. You could structure the partnership so that the kids, as limited partners, own 99 percent, while the parents hold the remaining 1 percent. When you die, only that 1 percent will be included in the parents' estate and subject to inheritance taxes.

And there are other ways you can save on taxes, if you structure your trust the right way. "People traditionally view family partnerships as a way to get property to children but limit access to it," said Abendroth. "An additional benefit that has become more important in recent years is that (partnerships) don't have the same value as the sum of their parts." That means the Internal Revenue Service allows you to pay less tax on your children's limited partnerships. Why? Because as limited partners your kids can't readily access their investments to sell or trade; their stakes are considered worth less than their face value. Therefore, for tax purposes, you can mark down the value of their stakes between 30 percent and 40 percent. So $10,000 would be taxed as $6,500.

This tax break also comes in handy if parents are in a hurry to hand out their property to their children. Under current laws, gifts of more than $10,000 per child per year are subject to hefty gift taxes. In a limited partnership, a parent can give about $13,500 to each kid and value it at $10,000.

Of course, nothing that good comes without a catch. "Rumor is that the IRS is beginning to audit these tax returns and has begun to challenge the value appraisals," said Rothschild. While you can't be penalized for discounting the value of your assets, you might want the help of a professional appraiser to help you fill out your gift-tax form correctly at tax time. Large accounting firms usually have a special department for appraisals, a service that could cost you a few thousand dollars, according to Rothschild.

If this all sounds a little pricey, well, it is. Limited partnerships tend to be more expensive to set up and maintain than your basic trust. Legal fees for registration and amendments, as well as costs for any accounting and administrative help, could get pretty high. While a bare-bones trust could run you $1,500 in legal start-up fees, a partnership could cost you twice as much.

On the other hand, actually getting a certificate of limited partnership — the slip of paper you need to be official — is simple. For example, in Boston, with just some basic information about your partnership's guidelines and $200, you can register with the secretary of state.

Another consideration is the location of your assets. If you are stashing out-of-state property in your partnership, you must establish your partnership in that state for legal and tax purposes. There are statutory agents who can act as a long-distance surrogate for the partnership. For example, CSC, the United States Corporation Co., and CT Corp. have offices in all 50 states and charge about $165 a year.

And if you are trying to get all the tax breaks you can, you might want to look into starting your partnership in Delaware, Georgia, North Dakota, or South Dakota, states whose tax structures are more favorable to limited partnerships.

Keep in mind that there are as many different types of limited partnerships as there are families. For those who simply want the tax benefits and don't mind their kids' laissez-faire spending, you can give your limited partners access to their funds or dole out generous gifts. If you want more control, you can put your children's partnership interest into a trust until they turn a certain age. Then when the trust comes due, you, as general partner, will still have a say in how they spend it.

This so-called layering of partnerships and trust funds can also translate into a sophisticated tax strategy. "Layering is crucial for estate planning," said Martin Shenkman, an estate-planning attorney based in New York City and author of "The Complete Book of Trusts." For instance, putting the kids' stakes into a grantor-retained annuity trust (GRAT) for five years would further discount the value of their taxed assets, because it widens the gulf between them and their money.

Don't be intimidated by the options. These are all suggestions that should be ironed out with a professionalplanner who can tailor a limited partnership to your needs.

Ski Team Finally Races

Members of the Cohasset ski team patiently awaited Mother Nature's cooperation in providing snow for their race course and practices at Blue Hills Ski Area. They were able to have their first race Monday, Jan. 13.

Eleven schools are represented in the Mass Bay East League. On race nights, each school chooses eight boys and eight girls to compete. The league is comprised of skiers from Cohasset, Easton, Waltham, Xaverian, Fontbonne Academy, Milton, Wellesley, Westwood, Brookline, Newton North and Newton South.

The following skiers raced for Cohasset Jan. 13:

Boys:

Bobby Stansell, Rob Buckley, Brian Donovan, Mark Connelly, Mark Equi, Ely Kahn, Lane Forrer and Matt Pescatore.

Girls:

Caitlin Stansell, Liz Myers, Kelly O'Donnell, Maggie O'Connor, Rebecca Jenkins, Clara Sceery, Lydia Guild and Morgan Hurley.

The icy course did not seem to intimidate several new members of the team who raced for the first time. They included Rob Buckley, Maggie O'Connor and Morgan Hurley.

Senior Bobby Stansell finished sixth in the league for the boys and sophomore Brian Donovan finished 29th. Freshman Caitlin Stansell finished fourth in the league for the girls and freshman Liz Myers finished 26th.

All in all, coaches Bob Stansell and Jack Dane were pleased with Cohasset's performance despite the lack of snow which prevented the team from getting much practice time.

Races are generally held Monday nights at 5:30 p.m. and practices are Wednesday nights. The Cohasset ski team encourages parents and friends to come watch a race and cheer on the team.

Boating Skills and Seamanship Course

Flotilla 12-4 of the United States Coast Guard Auxiliary will conduct a Boating Skills and Seamanship Course. Classes will be held Mondays, from 7 to 9 p.m., at the Weymouth Junior High School, 360 Pleasant St., South Weymouth. This is a 10-lesson course with classes beginning Monday, Jan. 27.

This course is directed to the first-time boater and as a review for the more experienced boater. Subjects to be covered include boat construction, boat handling, safety and legal requirements, navigation rules, aids to navigation, piloting, marine engines, marlinespike, weather, radiotelephone, and trailering.

There is a minimal fee to cover the cost of materials.

Call Dick Kenney at (617) 925-5760 for more information.

Bishop's blocked shot set up Burke Davis for two free throws on the other end. Davis drained them and his back court mate Paul-Michael Quintin posted his first basket with a pull-up jumper.

Buick made a nice drive along the baseline and dished to Bishop, who collected a deuce, but this only pulled the Skippers within eight points, and Carver still led 27-19. Quintin dished to Bishop who hit the shot in a traffic. Davis picked up a steal and took it all the way himself for a bucket. Quintin hit a cutting Davis for two more and Williams closed out the half with a three-pointer.

However, the Skippers still trailed 32-39 at halftime and had some ground to make up. Bishop went to work right away, knocking down two foul shots. Bishop's defensive recovery and block on the other end earned him two free throws, which he sank, giving Cohasset a one-point lead. Buick hit one from the line and Williams hit a long two, with his toes on the arc, and then a free throw. Williams hit another long jumper, and this too counted only a pair, but Cohasset still led, 39-38.

Quintin got his hands in the passing land and found a cutting Buick for two. Davis nailed two foul shots, and Bishop's turnaround put Cohasset up by five, 45-40. Williams nailed his second trey of the game to put his squad up by six points. Buick hit a free throw and Davis hit Pat Hurley for two more. Quintin swished a free throw and then stuck a pull-up jumper. Hurley went coast-to-coast off the glass for two points and Bishop's lay-up put the Skippers up eight, 59-50. Buick banked one for a bucket and Bishop made a nice head-fake in the lane, earning him a pair.

After the ejection of Carver's head coach, Davis hit the two technicals and Buick hit a free throw of his own. Bishop used the window to get a basket and Quintin made a nice cut without the ball and Davis found him for the lay-up. Bishop's block, his third of the game, allowed Buick to hit a free throw. Davis hit a trio in a row from the charity stripe and Quintin buried five straight from the line. Hurley finished off the Cohasset scoring with a free throw, making the final score 79-68.

The Skippers head to East Bridgewater Friday to battle the Vikings and visit Scituate next Wednesday.

Quit & Stay Quit Support Group

A tobacco-free support group has been formed on the South Shore. You may be interested in this group if you have quit smoking and want support to stay quit; you want to quit, but just can't do it on your own; you are an ex-smoker but recently had a "slip."

The group meets every Tuesday evening, from 7:30 to 8:30 at the South Shore Boards of Health Collaborative Tobacco Control Program, 197 Rockland Street, Hanover.

Please call (617) 829-4301 for more information.

Susan Hollis Paintings at Library

A North Easton artist who works in textile design, print making and oils, Susan A. Hollis, currently has on exhibit at the Paul Pratt Library a group of her recent paintings. A graduate of the Rhode Island School of Design, Susan has also studied at Boston's Museum of Fine Arts.

This colorful selection of landscapes and still lifes illustrates the award-winning artist's creative purpose: "I find beauty in the landscapes I paint, in their lights and shadows. While my painting creates on one level, it also seeks to preserve on another; my painting represents what I saw and felt at a particular time and place. It is this dual interest in creation and preservation that give meaning to my work," Hollis said.

The exhibit, which is sponsored by the South Shore Art Center and the Friends of the Paul Pratt Library, will continue through March 8.

DEPARTMENT OF ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION
WATERWAYS REGULATION PROGRAM
Notice of License
Application pursuant to G. L. Chapter 91
Waterways Application Number W96-6066

Notification Date: February 7, 1997

Public notice is hereby given of the application of J. Nelson Beveridge to maintain an existing pier at 134 Border Street in the municipality of Cohasset in and over the waters of Bailey's Creek. The proposed use of the structures is noncommercial docking and boating access to navigable waters and is a water-dependent project.

The Department will consider all written comments submitted within 30 days subsequent to the "Notification Date" in order to decide whether to grant authorization for the proposed activity pursuant to G.L. Chapter 91. A public hearing may be held upon request by the municipal official. Furthermore, a municipality, ten citizen group or any aggrieved person that has submitted written comments may also petition to intervene to become a party before the close of the comment period. Failure to submit such petition will result in the waiver of any right to an adjudicatory hearing. Further information regarding this application may be obtained by contacting the Division at (617) 932-7600. Plans and documents for this application are on file with the Department for public viewing at the address below. Written comments should be addressed to: J. Sprague, DEP/DWW, 10 Commerce Way, Woburn, MA 01801.

THE TRIAL COURT
THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT
NORFOLK DIVISION
DOCKET NO. 96P2884E1

Estate of ZILLAH THOMPSON late of Cohasset In the County of NORFOLK

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that LESLIE GEORGE THOMPSON of COHASSET in the County of NORFOLK be appointed executor named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on February 26, 1997.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16A.

Witness, David H. Kopelman, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, this fourteenth day of January, one thousand nine hundred and ninety-seven.

New Number Goes into Effect in May 1998

South Shore Shaken by Area Code Change

By Alice C. Coyle
COHASSET MARINER

Get ready to change the numbers on your speed dialer and update your business cards — the South Shore is getting a new area code.

Starting in May of 1998, 22 communities from Braintree to Kingston will have to switch from the overcrowded 617 area code to the newly created 781 code.

The fax, modem, cellular phone and beeper boom is to blame for the change, said state Department of Public Utilities (DPU) officials, who approved the creation of two additional calling areas last week.

"Although nobody likes the inconvenience and cost associated with area code changes, the department's actions were necessary to avoid a situation in the near future when

Vets Memorial Names Dispute Halted

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

Arguments over when World War II actually ended may rage on but selectmen halted debate this week over the issue as far as the veterans memorial at the harbor is concerned.

Since phase one of the privately-funded Veterans Memorial went up several years ago without the names of Cohasset men who served in the occupational forces — local veterans have been at odds over who qualifies as a World War II veteran.

Some say only those who served during the actual conflict between Japan's bombing of Pearl Harbor on

Landbank Proposal: a Taxing Question

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

Selectmen are considering asking town meeting to approve setting up a municipal landbank to be used to accumulate money to purchase open space.

But Selectman Michael H. Sullivan said the proposal, which would assess property sellers a recording fee at the Registry of Deeds that would go into a fund controlled by the town, is nothing more than another tax.

Sullivan said he thought it was inappropriate to charge a surtax on the purchase price of a home. A two percent fee on a $300,000 home would be $6,000.

When it was suggested that the first $100,000 to $150,000 could be exempt, Sullivan said the plan would "hit the rich."

Now if the town wants to buy open space, it has to borrow the money.

Selectman Ronnie McMorris likened the fee to a "user fee" and said the Nomination Papers Ready Feb. 3

Nomination papers for the Annual Town Election will be available Monday, Feb. 3.

The following positions will be available: Selectmen — one for three years; School Committee — two for three years; Trustee Paul Pratt Memorial Library — three for three years; Assessor one for three years; Board of Health — one for three years; Cohasset Housing Authority — one for five years; Planning Board - one for five years; Recreation Commission — three for five years; Sewer Commission — one for three years; and Water Commission — one for three years.

Wednesday, March 19, is the last day to register for the Annual Town Meeting and Annual Town Election. Registration forms are available at the Town Clerk's Office, the Cohasset Post Office and the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. This form may be mailed or hand-delivered to the clerk's office but must be received or postmarked on or before the deadline.

Town Census Mailed

The Town Census for 1997 has been mailed to all Cohasset households, the town clerk said this week.

The local census is primarily used to maintain voting and jury lists but it is also used for school enrollment projections and public safety and senior center needs. The local census also establishes proof of residency which is often needed for certain privileges, such as transfer station stickers and cemetery rights, certain veterans benefits and reduced tuition rates at state colleges and universities.

Dog forms were enclosed with the census. The licenses are valid through Dec. 31, 1997. If you did not receive a census form, call 383-9900. The census must be returned by Feb. 21.

BYOB Permission Considered

Selectmen are considering allowing The Silver Spoon, owned by Denise and Gary Bismore, to host Friday and Saturday evening dinners from 6 to 8 p.m., at which customers can bring their own wine and beer. The village restaurant seats 20 people.

The Silver Spoon does not have an alcohol license. The Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission (ABCC) told selectmen it has no jurisdiction over this situation because there is no license. Selectmen can set the guidelines and say if beer or wine is allowed or both, Keith Bossung of the ABCC said.

After some discussion, selectmen asked town counsel Paul DeRensis to draft a proposed set of criteria.

DeRensis said the proposal could be a condition of the restaurant's common victualler (food) license. He said there could be no charge for the addition because the board would not be granting a license but would put the responsibility for customers' drinking onto the restaurant.

Overall, the board was favorable to the idea of allowing Silver Spoon dinner customers to bring their own beer or wine. Selectmen said they might allow it over a six-month trial period. They expect other local eateries may make the same request.

HVAC Garage Bid Awarded

Selectmen awarded the bid for heating, ventilation and air conditioning (HVAC) for the DPW garage to the sole bidder, Mechanical Advantage of Plymouth, contingent on the architect's approval. Selectmen also asked town counsel Paul DeRensis to look the bid over.

Mechanical bid $122,000 plus $6,400 bid bond.

This was the second bidding round for the project, selectmen said. The first time, there were protests because the town specifications did not include the bid bond requirement.

Handicapped Parking an Issue

Evelyn Carlson, 60 Elm St., wrote to selectmen Jan. 15 to lobby for additional parking for the handicapped near Dr. Ronald Goldenson's office on Stagecoach Way.

Dr. Goldenson wrote to the board last year to ask that a handicapped space be moved from the corner of S. Main and Depot Court to in front of Stagecoach Way to make it easier for handicapped patients to walk to his office.

Carlson, who is afflicted with multiple sclerosis, supports Goldenson's request. She said she finds regular sidewalk parking and the short walk down the long path to Dr. Goldenson's office exhausting.

"Other patients of Dr. Goldenson's who are handicapped find the same problem," she said.

"...Please do something to help us."

Flooding Concerns Noted

Joseph and Patricia Dockray, 375 N. Main St., wrote to Selectman Peter Pratt on Jan. 21 to express their concern about flooding which has existed at 371 and 375 North Main St. during rain storms prior to the Oct. 20, 1996 storm.

"The situation happens when water collects into the town-owned small pond between the former Easter Edison plant and the property at 371 North Main St. The collected water is trapped and does not flow its natural course into the Sanctuary Pond due to clogging and insufficient drainage.

"The results are that the collected water overflows and floods the property and comes several inches into the homes at (371 & 375 N. Main). This same water also overflows onto and covers N. Main Street at the site of the pond and has been responsible for several automobile accidents."

The Dockrays asked that selectmen assist in correcting the problems and are concerned that a proposed storm water detention area near Sanctuary Pond might exacerbate the problem.

Pay per Bag Needs Debate

Joan P. Busk, 20 Joy Place, wrote to selectmen Jan. 14 that the decision on the town's proposed "pay per bag" trash program be put before town meeting.

"In a sense, this is another form of taxation to the citizens of Cohasset and they deserve the opportunity to vote on it," Busk said.

"I have heard compelling arguments on both sides of the issue. The evidence exists, however, that leads me to believe that this program might not save the town the money that you have indicated it will. It is my understanding that frequently there is no market for some of our recyclables and we are forced to pay to have them hauled away," she said.

"I would like both sides of this issue debated in a public forum in order that an informed decision will be made."

Prudential Is Changing The Way America Buys And Sells Homes

Introducing Prudential® Value Range Marketing℠ only from Prudential Real Estate

Prudential Hunter Real Estate Brokerage

A win-win sales process for buyers and sellers. It's a simple idea, really. Give buyers and sellers a range of proven, carefully selected prices to work with — rather than the typical "fixed" price. Buyers benefit by seeing a wider selection of homes. And sellers benefit by attracting offers. Prudential VRM takes the anxiety out of moving for everyone.

Thinking of buying or selling? Find out more. Call PRUDENTIAL HUNTER REAL ESTATE today to learn how VRM℠ can work for you.

617-659-0433

Homes are selling up to 5 times faster. Prudential Value Range Marketing℠ is a quicker, simpler way to sell your home for the right price. With Prudential VRM℠, you can choose from dozens of price ranges to suit your sales objective, whether it's selling your property quickly or getting the best possible price. And by listing your house within a price range, you can attract more offers. Which is one reason why Prudential VRM℠ properties are selling up to 5 times faster than the market average — and at desirable prices.

Prudential Value Range Marketing℠ connects buyers to a wider selection of homes.

WHAT'S IN THE PRESS ABOUT PRUDENTIAL VALUE RANGE MARKETING℠

"The traditional way of pricing a house for sale is about to be challenged ..." — The New York Times

"Some of Prudential's rivals think value range is a good idea, too." — The Wall Street Journal

"... reduces the average time a home is on the market by up to 75 percent." — Austin American Statesman

"... In the test markets, most homes have sold just above the middle of the range, averaging 10% higher than the traditional fixed priced listings." — The Washington Post

Name: Ed McCann

Occupation: Interim town administrator.

Goal: To provide the temporary services to keep the progress and momentum that selectmen and the town administrator have been making and to make sure we continue to address the problems and issues facing the town.

Best vacation: A company paid trip to Hawaii.

Best day of your life: The three days my sons were born.

Biggest worry: The major societal issues that we see and read about.

Favorite holiday: Fourth of July.

Favorite season: Spring.

Favorite TV show: Anything on C-Span.

Favorite movie: 'Evita.'

Favorite book: 'The Power of Positive Thinking,' by Norman Vincent Peale.

Favorite junk food: Pretzels.

Most embarrassing moment: When I call someone by the wrong name.

Person you'd most like to meet: The producer of the Jerry Seinfeld show. That show always captures the essence of day to day situations.

Pet peeve: People that do not recognize and appreciate the many hard-working dedicated public servants.

Electrical Fire Damages Cohasset Home

Firefighter Injured at Scene

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

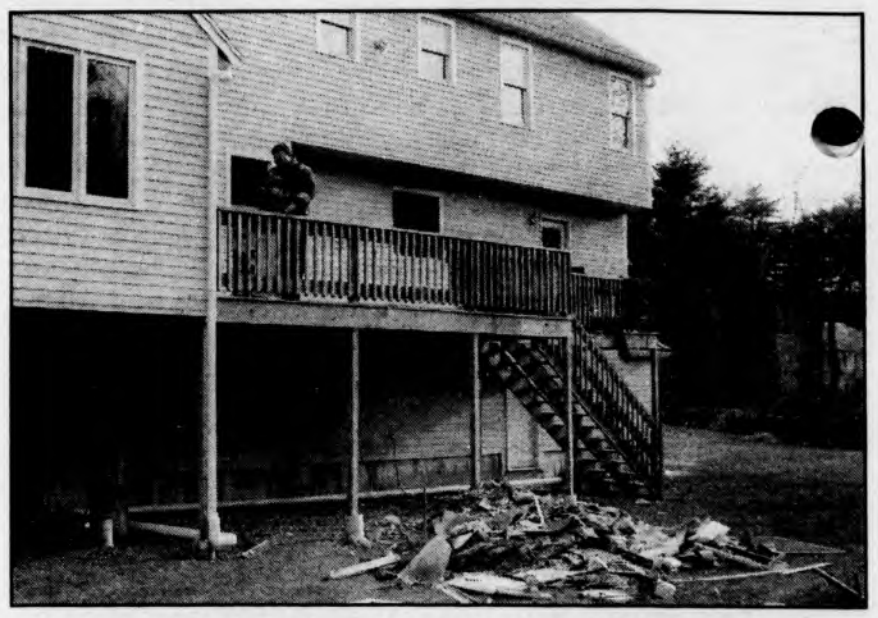
A local firefighter was injured while battling an electrical fire that put a local family out of their two-year-old house on Monday.

Fire Chief Roger Lincoln said the 9-1-1 call from Fred Higgins, a neighbor, who had gone home for lunch and saw smoke issuing from the eaves of the Whitney Road house, came into the station at 11:55 a.m.

"When we arrived, the fire was burning in the kitchen and the house was heavily charged with smoke and heat," Lincoln said.

He said the fire took 20 minutes to bring under control. Fire damage was limited to the kitchen but there was heat and smoke damage throughout the structure. Lincoln would not put a dollar figure on the damage.

"I leave that up to the insurance company," he said.



Firefighter John Dockray was injured when he slipped down the stairs which were iced over due to the cold temperature. Dockray was transported by Hingham ambulance to South Shore Hospital where he was treated and released. He will be out of work for about a week, Lincoln said.

The back deck was so icy that the highway department sanded for the firefighters, he said.

The homeowners, Michael and Michelle Sacks, and their two children are "doing okay," Mr. Sacks said. The children were in school and the Sackses were at work when the fire, which started in a kitchen wall, broke out. Mr. Sacks, who works for a telecommunications firm in Cambridge, said they are renting a house on their street temporarily but are looking for another Cohasset house to rent. Repairs to their house could take up to six months. Mrs. Sacks works at Talbots.

"It was one of those things no one expected," he said. "When the call came in we were in shock. Now we're through the shock and are getting about doing the things necessary to rebuild."

Lincoln said two Cohasset engines, the ambulance, and the ladder truck responded. A Scituate engine assisted at the scene and the Hull fire department covered Cohasset headquarters during the fire.

Firefighter Mark Trask walks on the deck behind the kitchen where the electrical fire started.

Fund Established for Sacks Family

The Sacks family of Whitney Woods Lane in Cohasset experienced a tragedy this week when their home and belongings were damaged by fire. Because of the overwhelming offers of support, a fund has been established in their name at the Pilgrim Cooperative Bank, South Main Street. Donations may be made to the Sacks Family Fund.

School Committee Deliberates on Budget Proposal

By Jason Bouffard
COHASSET MARINER

Despite a 35 percent increase in classroom hours for Cohasset students, salary increases will be held to about two percent in FY '98 if the proposed budget is met with a favorable town meeting vote.

These figures are part of the amended budget that Cohasset Public School Superintendent Stephen Hart presented the school committee last week. The $7,716,137 total reflects a 5.9 percent increase over the FY '97 budget.

Hart said that the figure was achieved by making some cuts in the original proposal. In some cases, the budget was tailored to accommodate programs that Hart felt were worth allocating funds to.

One such program is the reading specialist/special needs aide position at the Osgood School. Cutbacks in textbook requests and other resources were taken in order to offset the cost of the position.

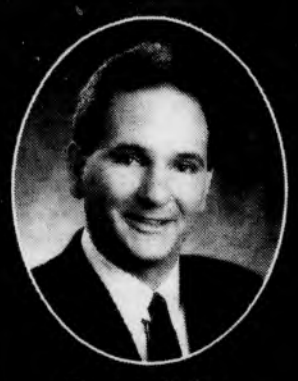
Hart reiterated his support for the position, which was first proposed by Osgood Principal Merilee Cantelmo. "We have to find resources to provide extra help to kids who need it," Hart said. Currently, reading help is provided by the special needs staff, but according to Hart, that staff is becoming overburdened.

However, members of the school committee did not appear ready to back the proposal. Vice-chairman Maureen Jerz said that the proposal might be one which the committee can look at in a later year.

Minor cuts were also made to make room for a health aide position at the Deer Hill School. The Deer Hill budget also included an increased request for funds for activity aides.

High school budget cuts will accommodate such positions as a full-time art teacher for the popular photography program, a student computer lab assistant and a half-time social studies teacher.

"This is a very tight budget," Hart said, adding that he would like to see the town receive more education reform funds than the $80,000 it will get. Although Cohasset will receive the minimum in education reform funds, the amount is enough to reduce the net budget increase to about 4.9 percent.



"We're at a point where we have to make a final decision on the budget for the public hearing and for presentation to the advisory board," Hart said.

The school committee will now have to take that next step.

Area Code Change

we would have run out of telephone numbers in Eastern Massachusetts," said DPU Chairman John Howe. Howe also maintained that the change will promote expanded competition in the state's telecommunication markets.

In addition to the South Shore, a swath of about 30 communities surrounding Boston to the west and and north will be included in the 781 code. Further north, up to the New Hampshire and Maine border and west to the 413 area code line in central Massachusetts, more than 50 towns will be assigned to the new 978 area code. The 617 code will continue to serve Boston and nine neighboring communities, including Milton and Quincy.

The "geographic splitting" of the state by area code has drawn heavy criticism from some members of the business community and local legislators, who are concerned about the inconvenience and expense of changing the area codes.

Both the South Shore Chamber of Commerce and the Neponset Valley Chamber of Commerce backed a Nynex proposal to "overlay" new area codes atop existing 617 and 508 area codes. According to Nynex's regional director of public relations Kenneth Horne, this would have allowed existing businesses and residents to keep their area codes and assigned the new codes only to new businesses and residents in the area.

Horne said the overlay proposal was made in response to the upheaval caused nine years ago, when the 508 area code was introduced. The big problem then, said Horne, was the expense incurred by businesses, who were faced with changing their letterhead, business cards, advertising and promotional materials, store signs, and in some cases car and truck lettering. The upcoming change will be no less costly to South Shore businesses, he said.

While the 508 area code was pitched as a 20 to 25-year solution to the telephone number shortage, state officials did not plan for the telecommunications explosion of the 1990's, and Horne said that adding two more area codes now is only a temporary fix.

"Within five years we will have to introduce more area codes and eventually 617 will be limited to Boston only," Horne said.

South Shore Chamber of Commerce Director of Government Affairs Steven Power agreed.

> 'It will be expensive for a large company to redo all their stationery but it is harder for a small company even to absorb a small amount.'
> — Domenic Micarelli, Cohasset Chamber of Commerce.

"This is a band-aid approach to a gaping wound, and it didn't work before," Power said. A strong supporter of the overlay option, Power said it is a better approach to the problem and would cause less confusion, inconvenience and disruption to residents and businesses. Power said the Chamber's board of directors took the issue up six months ago and a majority agreed that adding area codes was not the way to go.

"The DPU's decision in our opinion was very short sighted. It has already proven to be short sighted," Power said.

But some local businesses are taking the change in stride.

"It's a necessary evil," said Domenic Micarelli, owner of the Artist's Son Gallery, 130 King St., and president of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce. "I have an 800 line, two FAX lines and two cellular phones — they are running out of numbers.

"It will be expensive for a large company to redo all their stationery but it is harder for a small company even to absorb a small amount," he noted.

Ron Goodwin, owner of Goodwin Graphics, 164 CJC Highway, said the phone company is not trying to upset people.

"What's the alternative? The phone company is not doing it to aggravate people," he said.

Despite the inconvenience to many businesses, local printers and sign makers are likely to profit from the change. Patty and Jesse Allen of Scituate, who own and operate Harbor Signs Inc. in Hingham expect to have their hands full re-lettering trucks, vans and store signs when 781 comes to the South Shore.

Confusion and inconvenience will be the price residents will pay, but Horne said phone bills won't go up and callers will be given a three month grace period to adjust to the change after the new area codes go into effect.

State Rep. Frank Hynes, D-Marshfield, said South Shore legislators, including state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, R-Cohasset, will meet with DPU representatives this week to determine whether or not there is a less disruptive alternative to adding area-codes.

"It is certainly disappointing and discouraging that the DPU has chosen this alternative," Hynes said. "The overlay would be a more appropriate alternative and would be the least disruptive to existing usage and the least disruptive economically."

But state Senator Robert L. Hedlund, R-Weymouth, disagreed. Hedlund maintained that Nynex's overlay plan would have had a more adverse impact on his constituents than the plan the DPU approved.

"I think it would have created more problems. It would have been unfair to new businesses and a great inconvenience to residents who could have had to dial a different area code to reach their new next door neighbors," Hedlund said.

"With the exception of Quincy, the South Shore will remain as one code," said Hedlund, who opposes splitting by area codes the communities within his district.

Hedlund said the new area codes are a sign of the times.

"Everyone wants a fax machine. We all have cell phones and pagers and our kids are on-line on the computer all night. It's too bad, but we have to make the changes," he said.

ALL IN ALIGN(MENT)

▶ With both two- and four-wheel alignments available, how does a car owner know which to choose for his or her vehicle? In the event that a wheel alignment is indeed necessary, the type chosen should be made on the basis of the car's suspension. All-independent suspensions need a four-wheel alignment. As a rule, this includes many, but not all, front-wheel-drive cars. With a four-wheel alignment, all four wheels are adjusted relative to one another. Cars without independent rear suspensions, including many rear-wheel-drive cars, can often make do with a front-end alignment because there is nothing to adjust on the rear wheels. All that is needed is to set the adjustable angles of the front wheels with respect to one another. With properly aligned wheels, car owners can assure themselves that their wheels will not counteract with one another as they roll down the road.

▶ Alignments not only affect how well your car will steer, they also affect the wear and tear on your tires, so be sure to have them done regularly. At SOUTH SHORE CHEVROLET - GEO, we continually upgrade our automotive skills to keep pace with changing technologies. You'll find that the reason we stand out above the rest is because we dedicate ourselves to constantly improving the service we bring you -- and you won't find that just anywhere. A thrust-angle alignment not only sets the adjustable angles of all four wheels relative to one another, but to the centerline of the vehicle as well.

Vets Memorial

Dec. 7, 1941 and V-J Day, Sept. 2, 1945 when Japan surrendered, should be included on the wall.

Others say those who served in the occupational forces between Sept. 2 and Dec. 31, 1945 — when Congress declared the war officially over — should also be listed.

Austin Ahearn, a WWII combat veteran, who has led the effort to construct the memorial — which will eventually include the names of Cohasset veterans of all wars — proposed adding two plaques to the World War II Memorial. One would include the names of veterans who served in the actual conflict but were inadvertently left off the memorial and the other would have the names of the occupational forces under a heading indicating they'd served after V-J day.

Selectman Michael Sullivan reminded Ahearn that it had been agreed previously that the occupational forces would not be "singled out."

And Selectmen Chairman Merle Brown said the subcommittee appointed to resolve this issue had recommended the names not be segregated and be put in random order.

But Ahearn, who lives on Clay Spring Road, said that would contradict history.

"That's the way history shows it," he said about the end of the war, showing photocopies from the Encyclopedia Britannica substantiating when hostilities ceased.

"There was absolutely no more conflict after V-J Day. Those going in after were doing occupational work and not fighting a war."

Sullivan said that wasn't the point.

"We were still 'fighting a war' until Congress decided it," he said.

Ed Brennock, 136 Doane St., who has sat on two memorial committees trying to resolve the issue, said it was pointless to rehash old ground and it was time to get the project moving forward.

"Why argue over something we can't change," he said agreeing with selectmen over the names issue.

Selectman Peter Pratt said official dates declared by Congress should be used for all wars for the purpose of the memorial.

Pratt pointed to the Vietnam War which went on for ten or more years.

Ben Curley, 20A Norfolk Rd., said he was a marine in 1946 in Guam where he guarded prisoners. He noted that in the Pacific theater there was indeed conflict following V-J Day because many Japanese refused to surrender.

Steve Wigmore, commander of the local American Legion post, said Congress moved the official date of the end of the Korean War from 1953 to 1955.

Ahearn said he would comply with the selectmen's decision.

"Whatever you say, we'll have to do. But I am disappointed we are changing history," he said.

Selectmen estimated it will cost about $1,000 to sandblast wording on the memorial indicating the war ended on V-J day.

Ahearn said it will cost about $9,000 for the additional plaques to add names to the memorial and pointed out that the town had not contributed any money.

Selectmen said they may see if town meeting will approve contributing to the memorial effort.

Taxing Question

landbank would allow the town to build up funds so it wouldn't have to borrow.

Selectman Nan Roth said that open space is so valuable that the town should use every method it has to preserve it.

But Sullivan said the fee would be a hidden tax.

Town Counsel Paul DeRensis explained that the fee is not tax deductible and would serve as a deduction on whatever the homeowner realized from the sale of the house.

Selectman Peter Pratt said the fund would help offset the cost of development.

"At the end of the day, we are subsidizing development, which does not pay for itself out of the real estate tax," he said.

DeRensis said the only two landbanks in the state are on Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket. They have been very successful, he said. He said the Conservation Law Foundation, a private group, has guidelines for towns to form landbanks which other communities in the state are using. With the exception of the two existing landbanks, no others have been approved by the legislature.

DeRensis said the landbanks are opposed by real estate lobbyists who say the transfer fees will interfere with the sale of new homes.

In a related matter, Norfolk County is considering County Landbank legislation which would divert the $5.5 million — annually paid by property sellers in the county and which must be remitted from the Registry of Deeds to the Commonwealth — to the local level.

Fire Walls are Okay

Selectmen Chairman Merle Brown said this week that the state Automatic Sprinkler Appeals Board said the design of the DPW garage off Cedar Street is sufficient to make it two separate buildings.

Fire walls that divide the $1 million DPW garage are acceptable in place of a sprinkler system, which is required for buildings over 7,500 square feet, the state said. Use of the fire wall keeps each side of the garage under that figure.

The issue of whether or not sprinklers are required surfaced in December prompting selectmen to seek a clarification of the law.

AROUND TOWN/Sallyann Chatterton

Hat's Off to Christa Ansbergs on her Recent Accomplishments!

We begin this week by sending a rousing cheer to Christa Ansbergs, a junior at MIT who was recently inducted into Pi Tau Sigma, the honor society for students majoring in mechanical engineering. Christa is also the vice president of her dormitory, so you know she is a busy and popular person! Christa is a 1994 CHS grad.

Everyone sends best wishes to Ellen Winn — she works in the selectmen's office, as you know, and she fell and broke her arm recently! We hope that you mend quickly, Ellen!

Another worker at the Cohasset Town Hall, Sally Lincoln, our assistant treasurer/collector, is ill, and all of us send you our good wishes and hope that all is well with you.

Please be ready to meet Christopher James McDonald who was born Dec. 17. Christopher weighed 6 pounds 4 ounces, and was 19-1/2 inches long. His parents, John and Paulina McDonald (Paulina used to be a substitute teacher in Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and Weymouth, also was the summer recreation camp director two years ago — she attended school in Cohasset). Christopher's maternal grandparents are James V. Rosano (stone mason in Cohasset) and Mary Rosano; his paternal grandparents are James McDonald and Mary Ann McDonald. John and Hope are Christopher's sister and brother, they are 18-month-old twins! Mom sure must be busy, but oh — so happy! We cannot wait until next spring to see Christopher and the rest of his family when they come to Cohasset for their first walk (they are residents of Hingham).

Did you know that there are seven students from Argentina in Cohasset? They are here to attend CHS and to visit sites in the area; and they are staying with host families here in town. They arrived Jan. 6 and will leave Feb. 17 (that will be a sad time for many, what a wonderful bunch of kids! A great command of the English language, and lively and fun). This is all sponsored through World Learning, formerly the Experiment in International Living — also co-hosted by a group in Hull at the Charter School. Jill Suddath is the CHS coordinator, Marilyn Pratter is the South Shore Charter School coordinator, and Margot Cheel is the regional coordinator. This program has proven very successful, and there are to be more in the future — if you are interested in hosting a student, call Margot Cheel at 383-9184, she'll be happy to give you any information you need — you'll be glad you did!

Jessie Sandell, a senior at Noble and Greenough School, has been accepted to Trinity College under their Early Decision Program. After studying last summer at L'Etienne University in Nice, France, Jessie returned to the varsity soccer season, helping her team to advance to the semifinals of the New England Championship. Jessie is the daughter of James and Nancy Sandell. Congratulations, Jessie!

Morgan Sandell has been selected to the U 17 1996-97 Massachusetts State Soccer team. After a lengthy tryout schedule last fall, Morgan was notified that winter training begins on the weekends, with state games commencing in the spring. Morgan is a varsity soccer player, was a leading scorer in the Independent School League last fall, is a member of South Shore United premier team, and a varsity squash and lacrosse player. He is a sophomore at Noble and Greenough School and is the son of James and Nancy Sandell.

Let's all give a big Cohasset welcome to James Francis Hynes, the son of Cynthia A. Nickerson and James F. Hynes. James was born Dec. 22 at 3:37 a.m., and he weighed 6 pounds 2 ounces. His maternal grandparents are William and Barbara Nickerson of Cohasset, his paternal grandparents are James and Alice Hynes of Punta Gorda, Fla. Congratulations to all of you.

The University of Rhode Island sends us word that Lauren P. Almeida of 38 Surrey Dr. made the dean's list for the fall semester. To be eligible for the deans list she had to carry 12 or more credits for the semester and achieve a 3.3 quality point average, based on the letter grades received during the term. Congrats!

The following students have earned academic honors for the fall trimester at Northfield Mount Hermon School: Abigail Kornet, a junior and the daughter of Diana D. and John L. Kornet Jr. An assistant director in the 1996 Theatre Program One-Act Play Festival, Abigail has performed in the 1996 major production of the "Cinderella Waltz." She has participated in crew, the concert choir and the Select Women's Ensemble.

Brett MacQuarrie, a senior and the son of Jane and Chris Kyricos of Cohasset and Stephen MacQuarrie of Wellesley, a student leader, has served as co-captain of the varsity soccer team, participating in the 1996 New England Prep Schools Tournament. A member of the varsity lacrosse team, he was co-captain of the Southeast Team in the 1995 Bay State Games. A member of the NMH "As Schools Match Wits" academic quiz show team, he has studied advanced placement economics.

Congratulations go to both of you!

That's all for this week, folks, hope we will hear from you next time — please give me a call!

Georgine Butman, an activity aide at the Deer Hill School, supported the Patriots by wearing the cheese that Paul Callahan, the principal, could squeeze! This was all part of Patriots Day at the school, Friday, Jan. 24 when the staff and students wore their Patriots clothing and some painted their faces.

Warm Up at the CHS Valentine Cabaret

A festive evening awaits you Tuesday, Feb. 11, at Kimball's By The Sea at the annual Cohasset High School Cabaret.

From 6:45 to 7:30 p.m., a selection of snacks and sweets will be served and student designed artwork, coordinated by art teachers Tom Sippel and Eileen Rohrer, will be available for sale.

From 7:30 to 9 p.m., emcee and choral director Bryan Marks and band director Marcia Lajoie will present student singers, dancers, musicians and comedians in a variety of solo and ensemble performances. There is sure to be something to please everyone.

Tickets are $8. Space is limited and reservations are necessary, so do not delay. Make checks payable to the Cohasset Arts Boosters Club and send them c/o Susan Pile, 65 Elm Street, by Feb. 7. For further information call Susan Pile at 383-6088 or Therese D'Urso at 383-1143. Proceeds will benefit the music and art curriculum enrichment.

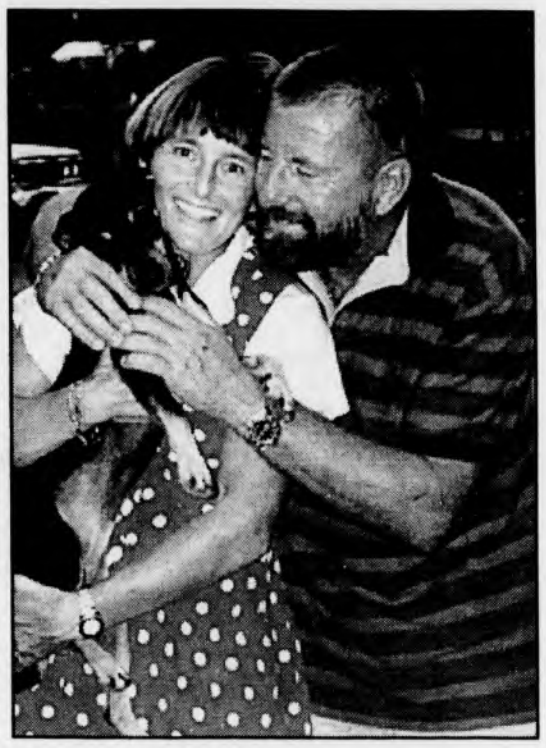
Weddings



Carrier/Thomas

Mrs. Jane White of Cohasset and Mr. William White of Culebra, Puerto Rico, announce with great pleasure the marriage of their daughter Abigail Carrier and Mr. Bill Thomas Dec. 30 in Souppes sur Loing, France.

Abbie taught swimming for many years in Cohasset and was head of the town pool for a number of summers. She and Bill eloped to France, to everyone's surprise, and were married by M. Victor Prudhomme, the Mayor of Souppes, Cohasset's sister city. During the second world war, Souppes was liberated by Tom Churchill, late of Cohasset.

M. Prudhomme and Violette Barret, who hosted both the wedding and reception, have visited here as have members of their families and friends. M. Prudhomme's son, Charles, and granddaughter, Cécile, were attendants for Abbie and Bill. Many people from Cohasset have been welcomed to Souppes by the Prudhommes.

Abbie and Bill live on the little island of Culebra where a reception is being planned in April by her parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Thomas

OBITUARIES

Elizabeth F. Oliver

Elizabeth F. (Jacobson) Oliver, 70, of Cohasset, a cook for 18 years at Jake's Lobster Pound Restaurant in Hull, died Jan. 11 in Massachusetts Respiratory Hospital, Braintree, after a brief illness.

Mrs. Oliver was the original cook at the restaurant and retired in 1966.

She also worked part time as a nanny for several families in the area.

Mrs. Oliver was born in Cohasset and attended Hingham schools.

Wife of the late Robert M. Oliver, she leaves a son, William R. Oliver of Cohasset; two daughters, Marie C. Condon of Kennebunkport, Me. and Catherine T. Lyons of Hull; four brothers, Walter F. Jacobson of Quincy, Martin E. Jacobson of Boynton Beach, Fla., William G. Jacobson of San Diego, Calif. and Robert A. Jacobson of Elizabeth, Colo.; and four grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated Jan. 14 in St. Anthony's Church.

The McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., Cohasset, handled the arrangements.

Donations may be made to Massachusetts Respiratory Hospital, 2001 Washington St., Braintree 02184.

James W. Anderson

James W. Anderson, 76, of Camarillo, Calif., formerly of Scituate, former owner of Anderson Fuel Co. in Scituate, died Dec. 13 at Pleasant Valley Hospital in Camarillo.

Mr. Anderson was a Navy veteran of World War II and served as a pilot in the Pacific Theater. After the war, he and his brother, Arthur Anderson of North Scituate, who survives him, started Anderson Fuel.

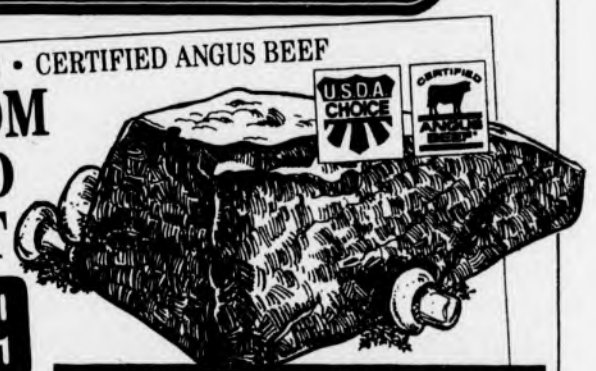
He was born in Cohasset, attended Scituate schools and was president of his high school senior class. He was a longtime resident of Scituate.

He also leaves a son, Brian Anderson of Oxnard, Calif.; two sisters, Doris Burney of Scituate and Catherine Brahce of Grand Blane, Mich.; and a grandson.

A graveside service was held Dec. 20 in Ivy Lawn Cemetery in Ventura, Calif.

Arrangements were made by Richardson-Gaffey Funeral Homes, Scituate.

Keep Well Clinic Slated



The Social Service League of Cohasset and the Board of Health will hold an Adult Keep Well Clinic Friday, Jan. 31, at 10 a.m. to noon, at Harborview Senior Housing, 60 Elm St.

EDITORIALS & OPINIONS

'Tis the Season

'I dip my pen in the blackest ink, because I am not afraid of falling into my inkpot.'

—Emerson.

The holly from the holidays has just come down from decking the halls.

Yet already we must start thinking about the town elections, which will be held Saturday, May 3.

It sounds like light years from now, doesn't it?

But papers to run for office are available Monday, Feb. 3 and must be turned in by 5 p.m., Monday, March 17. That's only six weeks away.

This is a big election year when all together we will be choosing 15 officials.

Voters will be selecting two school committee members, one selectman, one sewer commissioner, and one member of the health board, and housing authority.

Voters will also choose three library trustees, three recreation commissioners, an assessor, water commissioner, and planning board member.

Is this the year you run for office?

Is this the year you decide to give something back to your hometown—the town that educates your children, watches over your health, supplies you with electricity, oversees your parks, runs your libraries, plows your streets, takes care of your trash and monitors the quality of your water.

These are the officials who collect your taxes, decide how your money will be spent, assess your property and monitor the gentle balance between homes and businesses.

The Cohasset Mariner will help you get your message across.

Send us an announcement of candidacy as soon as you decide to run—a clear concise press release on your background and why you are running for office. Please include a photograph.

After the filing deadline we will carry candidates corner for the six weeks before the election. Candidates for contested office are invited to participate in Question of the Week.

The political clock is ticking. The countdown begins. There's just a few weeks left to decide.

Are you totally satisfied with the way your town is being run? You don't need the brains of Einstein, the cash of Donald Trump or the charisma of JFK.

You just need good old common sense, foresight, a balanced view and love of your town.

And, of course, courage. The kind of courage Ralph Waldo Emerson wrote about a century ago when he said—"I dip my pen in the blackest ink, because I am not afraid of falling into my inkpot."

So why don't you grab your pen and sign up as a candidate?

Health Curriculum Is Inappropriate

To the Editor:

I attended part of a meeting of the health advisory committee at Cohasset High School Tuesday, Jan. 21. Apparently the Cohasset school system will again inflict on its young people of grades 4, 5 and 6 what is euphemistically called "puberty education."

Actually, these courses are set up as detailed anatomy courses, that are totally inappropriate for such youngsters, especially in mixed classes.

This type of education, the school system not withstanding, is really the responsibility of parents, physicians and nurses, and the clergy. And even if the parents do not instruct their children in these matters, it is not the right of the public schools to usurp this function.

Across our nation these "puberty education" courses have been a total failure, and their purpose (whether intended or not) is to destroy the natural modesty of young people during the so-called "latency period." Such "education" also prepares the boys and girls for even more deleterious courses later on, which promote contraception, abortion, the gay life style, and euthanasia, the killing of the old.

Truly we are living in a "culture of death," and many of us seem to have no idea where we are going as a nation. May God help us.

'On-Site Septic Police Bureaucracy'

To the Editor:

This is a sad and difficult time for the citizens of Cohasset.

Currently, the Board of Health is trying to establish what must be called the "Septic Police." This program would cost the town $200,000 to administer annually, would establish a large town bureaucracy, require a nearly $4,000,000 override, and cause unimagined financial hardship to all its citizens. The arrogance of power of elected officials has once again reared its ugly head with the three members of the health board.

What is their legal authority to mandate the bureaucracy called the "Septic Police" which does not exist voluntarily in any town in Massachusetts?

Adding insult to injury, the chairman of the Sewer Commission, Mr. Ted Guild, announced to a stunned Cohasset Board of Selectmen Jan. 21 that he was single-handedly, on his own authority, negotiating a new Final Amended Judgment with the Attorney General's office, the language of which most probably will commit the town unequivocally to an on-site septic police bureaucracy. The arrogance of power here again is outrageous.

Who gave Ted Guild the authority to negotiate a plan for an on-site septic system?

Whatever credibility the chairman of the Sewer Commission had left is now gone and furthermore he had the audacity to say that no citizen has a right to be involved in these negotiations or even know what he is doing until he and the Board of Health chooses to announce the results just before the March 29 town meeting.

Even the Selectmen gulped on that line and persuaded Mr. Guild to appear in executive session at next week's meeting. But he insisted on keeping the citizens of Cohasset ignorant of what he is doing! WOW!

This attitude cannot and should not be tolerated! Therefore, the Chairman of the Sewer Commission, Mr. Ted Guild, should resign from the Sewer Commission immediately since he has lost the trust of the citizens of Cohasset. It would be a disgrace for him to continue in office.

This town needs an extensive period of healing and reconciliation and a total rethinking of its sewer and on-site septic problems without Mr. Guild shamelessly selling the citizens down the river. It's time for Cohasset collectively to say "Goodbye, Ted."

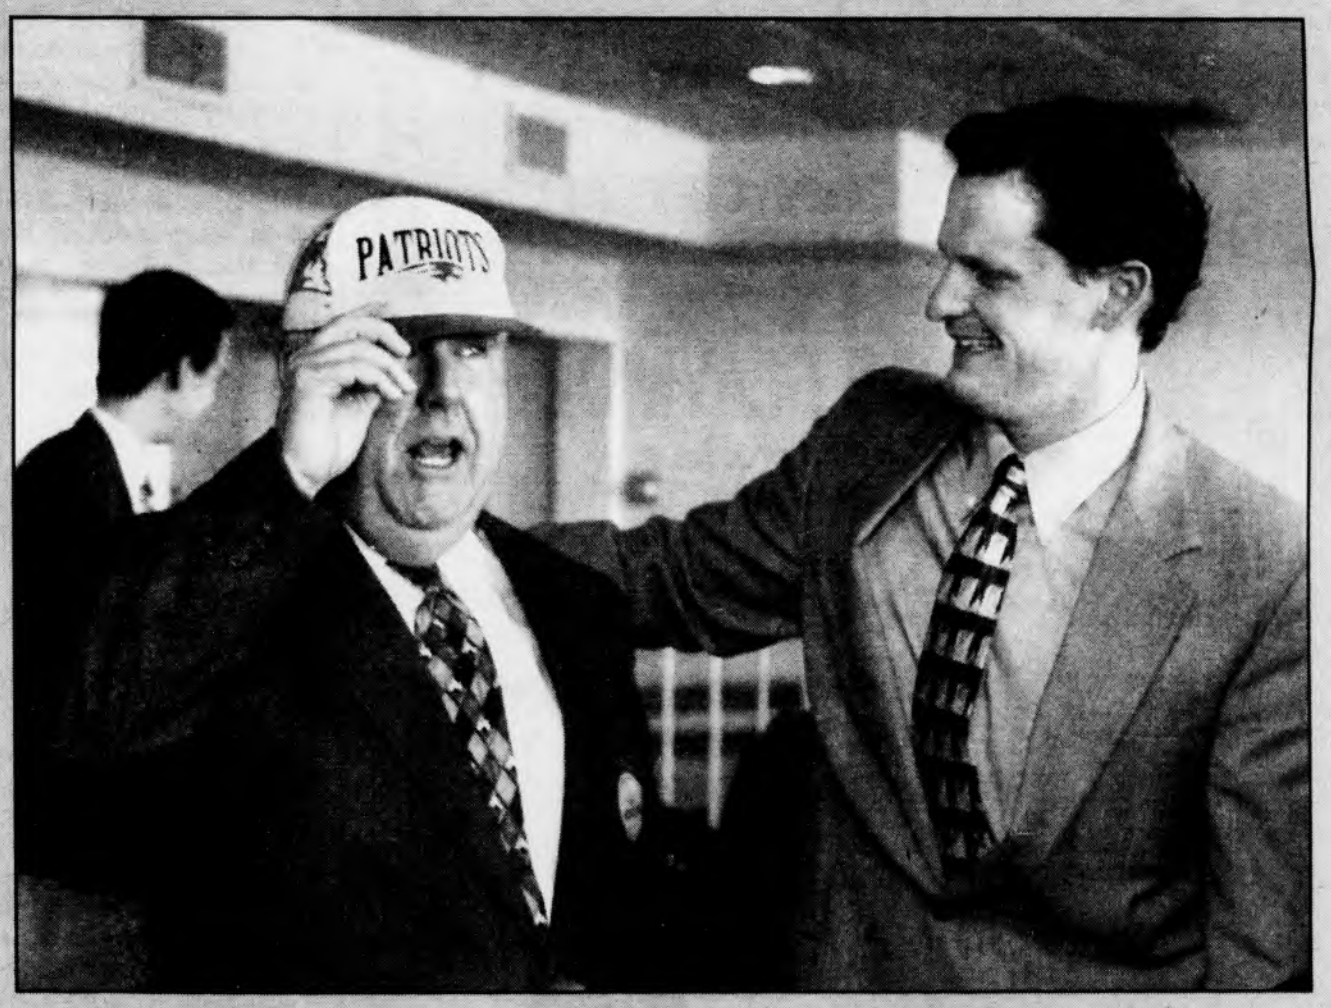
ASK THE SCHOOL COMMITTEE



Improved Communication is Goal

As you may know, the Cohasset School Committee has adopted "Improved Communications" as a major priority for the 1996-97 school year. This column is one result of those outreach efforts. Televising of all School Committee meetings (on Cable Channel 52) is another. In the coming months, we hope to sponsor one or more forums for the community; to hold a School Committee meeting in Boston to reach out to the parents of our Boston students; and to develop a system-wide newsletter to complement those already produced by each of the school principals and the adjustment and guidance counselors.

This column, which will appear in the last Cohasset Mariner issue of each month, is one of the many efforts we are making to increase the quality and quantity of information that flows from the School Department to the Town and vice versa. The purpose of this column is two-fold: to answer questions that arise from any member of the community on any aspect of the operation of our schools and to provide the town with a forum for discussion of important educational issues of the day, such as the Education Reform Act of 1993.

One topic we find to be of concern is maintenance of the physical facilities. In setting the overall maintenance budget each year, the School Committee reviews annual requests from each of the three school principals, as well as the longer-range maintenance plans for each school developed by consultants such as Knight, Bagge, Anderson and Earl Flansburgh. Requests are funded after a process of prioritizing and winnowing. For instance, we completed several projects at the High School last year, including renovation of eight bathrooms (replacing fixtures, painting and adding partitions) and increasing the number of bathrooms that are handicapped accessible; installing new carpets and window treatments, replacing furniture and painting the guidance suite; and a complete overhaul of the main office and front entry of the school. In addition to these projects funded by the School Department budget, the School Committee seeks separate Town Meeting and voter approval for larger capital projects. In the past few years, voters have approved $140,000 for renovation of the high school auditorium and gymnasium; $100,000 to replace glass window walls at the high school; and $75,000 for removal of oil tanks at all three schools. We also plan to submit a Warrant Article for the fall, 1997 Town Meeting seeking funds to replace the windows at the Deer Hill School.

We're very serious about improving communications with all Cohasset residents. We will dedicate the next "Ask the School Committee" column in February to the topic of the 1997-98 budget for the Cohasset Public Schools. We invite your questions, comments and suggestions on this topic — or on any other you would like to see addressed. You may drop your questions into the box provided in each of the schools and the Town Library, or you may mail your questions to any member of the School Committee. We look forward to hearing from you.

'Paris Par Deux'

Le Raffle Tres Formidable!

By Jim Kinch
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Cohasset Education Foundation (CEF) announces the opportunity of the season. A weekend in Paris. Take a chance on a round trip to the French capital from Boston and a four-day weekend in the city. Imagine a promenade down the Champs-Elysees, climb the Eiffel Tower and see the city from a 90-story vista, admire the masterpieces of the Louvre, dine in a café on the left bank, sample the night life on the Moulon Rouge or just drink in the atmosphere of the most romantic and colorful city of the world. This will be a weekend to remember for a lucky couple.

Through the generosity of Pam and Malcolm Speed, the CEF is sponsoring the Raffle L'extraordinarie, a trip to the French capital for two with round-trip airfare from Boston and three nights in a first-class Paris hotel. A chance you can't pass over for a $20 ticket.

Ticket sales will be capped at 500, further enhancing this exciting opportunity for each ticket buyer. With a ticket for $20, take several chances while helping the CEF meet a worthy goal. If you've ever considered a trip to France this is the opportunity you can't miss.

But of course, all the proceeds from the sale of the tickets will go to support the CEF language lab project. So c'mon, take a chance! Help a great cause! And give yourself the weekend of a lifetime. The drawing will be held at the spelling bee March 5. Le winner does not have to be present to win. Tickets will be on sale throughout the month of Fevirer (February). See any CEF member or call our ticket hotline at 383-2833 and leave your name. Bonne Chance!

COUNCIL CORNER/Pat Baird

The Junior/Senior High School Council met Jan. 8. Renovations to the auditorium began Jan. 7. Repairing and painting the windows and doors and refinishing and painting the stage are being done by Mr. Jacobucci. Bids are being solicited for the rest of the repairs and the whole project should be completed in the spring.

The Middle School Committee reports that the scheduling and the athletic programs for next year are being formulated. The committee is also discussing the issue of "school life" which includes such things as activities and celebrations.

Dr. Angelo, the high school librarian and technology coordinator reports that the library reorganization is under way and the library is open daily.

The next meeting will be held in the A.V. room, Feb. 12, at 7 p.m. Everyone is welcome.

The Osgood School Council met Jan. 14. A coffee will be held from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. in the school library Feb. 4. Marilee Cantelmo will discuss homework and the parents' role in assisting their child.

The council has placed notebooks containing the minutes of their meetings in the Paul Pratt Library and the South Shore Community Center. There is a comment sheet in each notebook and citizens are encouraged to offer suggestions and comments. The next meeting will be held Feb. 11, in the Osgood Library from 3 to 5 p.m.

Council meetings are open to the public and everyone is invited to attend.

Sell the Hagerty House

To the Editor:

It's time to reconsider: to reconsider selling the house on the Hagerty property as a residence. Remember when the town bought the Hagerty property?

Remember the brochure sent to every household that swayed you to buy it?

Remember how the brochure said there was a house on the property that could be sold for $200,000?

Remember the implication that that would reduce the outrageous price for the property down to an affordable, reasonable sum?

Well, the house is still there and the town still owns it. Just because the advisory board torpedoed its sale last year doesn't mean we can't bring it back up. We need the money!

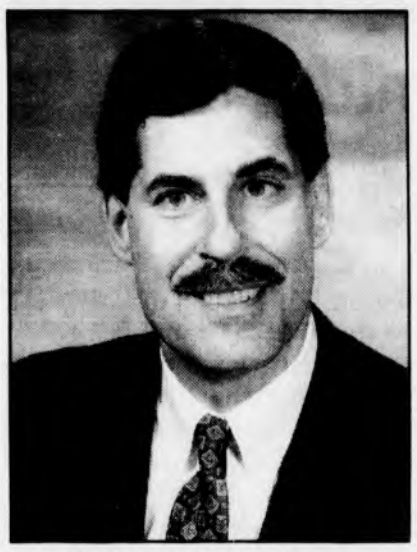
Please Support Wrestling Tourney Sponsors



To the Editor:

Saturday, Jan. 18, the sixth annual Cohasset Wrestling Tournament was held in the high school gym. Nine area schools participated in the tournament which was won by Cohasset. During the day-long tournament the wrestling boosters sell items donated by the local business community to raise funds for the wrestling team. These funds are used for the year-end banquet, trophies for the athletes, state meet expenses, new equipment, and if we continue to have support from the community, to establish a scholarship fund. Please support the following businesses who donated their products to sponsor the tournament: Atlantic Bagel, The Chart House, Cohasset House of Pizza, Curtis Liquors, Dunkin Donuts, Papa Gino's, Quikava, Thomas E. Sears, Inc., Stop & Stop, Verc Mobil, Victorias and the many parents who donated their time and excellent homemade food.

If you have never seen a wrestling meet or tournament please join us next year for the tournament as I'm sure you will enjoy the action, and the food is the best on the South Shore. Anyone wishing to make a donation to the Wrestling Boosters may send it to Cohasset Wrestling Boosters, 29 Hillside Drive, Cohasset 02025.

Douglas A. Catalano

Cohasset Man Promoted at Peritus

Peritus Software Services, Inc., a leader in software maintenance outsourcing and mass change technologies and services including Year 2000 renovations, announced that it has expanded its management team by naming Douglas A. Catalano president and chief operating officer.

Catalano will leverage Peritus' new and existing products and services to increase the company's market visibility and capture greater market share.

"As we move into a new phase of growth for Peritus in 1997, we're excited to have a strong leader like Doug join us," said Peritus founder, Chairman and CEO Dominic Chan. "His proven sales, marketing and operational skills will help Peritus continue as a leader in the outsourcing and software mass change market, leveraging our Year 2000 products and solutions for continued success."

Year 2000 refers to a serious problem many large computer users will face at the turn of the century when millions of lines of software code that run the world's most mission-critical systems are unable to handle dates beyond 1999. Peritus helps companies cope with massive software changes such as solving their Year 2000 problem.

"Peritus is in a great market at a great time," said Catalano. "Its technology is solid, yet rapidly evolving, and its culture is based on teamwork and partnering. I'm looking forward to being a part of the team here that will capitalize on Peritus' inherent strengths and lead its growth in the future."

It is generally accepted in the industry that between 60 and 80 percent of all I.T. expenditures are spent on maintaining previously written software. And according to the Gartner Group (Stamford, Conn.) solving the Year 2000 problem alone will cost organizations between $300 billion and $600 billion.

Catalano joins Peritus from Computer Sciences Corp. where he was president of CSC Consulting, a $380 million division employing more than 2,800 people.

During his 15 years at CSC Consulting, Catalano helped grow the company from $7 million to $380 million. He served as CSC Consulting's president for the last seven years. Prior to that, he was vice president of operations for the company and headed the Boston operation. Computer Sciences Corp. is one of the world's largest information technology consulting and systems integration companies with annual revenues of $5 billion.

Catalano, 46, lives in Cohasset with his wife Judith and two daughters. He has a bachelor of science degree in finance from Northeastern University.

Local Author Signing

Marshfield children's author L. A. Murphy will sign copies of her first book, "Heavensbee," Saturday, Feb. 8, from 10 to 11:30 a.m. at Buttonwood Books & Toys in Cohasset.

Looking at the world through the eyes of her children, Murphy has created a world in "Heavensbee," where "many things can be if you imagine them to be." This amusing collection of verses, accompanied by vibrantly painted illustrations by artist Ronnie Rooney, will delight both children and adults as they travel to wonderful places and meet fabulous friends that exist only in the imagination.

Children will also be able to make a bee puppet the central character in "Heavensbee," as well as meet the author that day.

Call 383-2665 for more information or to reserve your signed copy.

Sale at Consignment Shop

If your New Year's resolutions included saving money and volunteering for good causes, then plan to attend the famous annual sale of the Social Service League's Cohasset Consignment Shop, Saturday, Feb. 8. The shop is open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily.

The many treasures that will be offered at half price or less are designer dresses, sweaters, colorful vests, including a brown fox run suede vest. Other special values include a beige poplin opossum-lined coat, as well as cloth and fur coats. Shoppers will even find computers, computer stands, ice skates, champagne coolers, ice buckets and choice jewelry for your favorite valentine. Don't miss the children's and men's bargains.

Manager Andy Merrill said the shop will be closed Friday, Feb. 7 to prepare for the sale, and urged both men and women to volunteer.

The South Shore Social Service League provides money for Meals on Wheels, get-well clinics, and counseling for the towns of Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Scituate and Cohasset.

PERSONAL FINANCE

Mutual funds: Blinded by success

Edited by Amy K. Barrett
WORTH MAGAZINE

Doesn't it pain you when some superstar mutual fund ended the year up 50 percent, while your fund returned half that? It's enough to make many of you dump the funds you own and buy those that made it into the spotlight. But resist temptation.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

A study done by Worth Magazine shows that buying one year's high flyers doesn't help you outperform the overall market the next year. In fact, more often than not, it puts you behind the Standard & Poor's 500 Index, which is used as a broad market gauge. What's more, last year's funds are often more volatile, hence riskier, investments — not the kind of odds a gambler should embrace.

Investors who would never dream of buying individual stocks at high prices may be drawn to the best-performing mutual funds because they believe the fund manager is blessed with financial genius. They want to join in while he's on a roll. "Individuals for the most part buy on past performance. They see what has done well lately and flock to that," says Jeffrey Mortimer, a money manger at Higgins Associates in Cambridge, Mass. But then, "Sometimes (the fund) does not reap the same amount, and you are caught holding a very expensive bag," he says.

'You can predict the skill of the manager, but it's harder to predict which sectors are going to do well.'

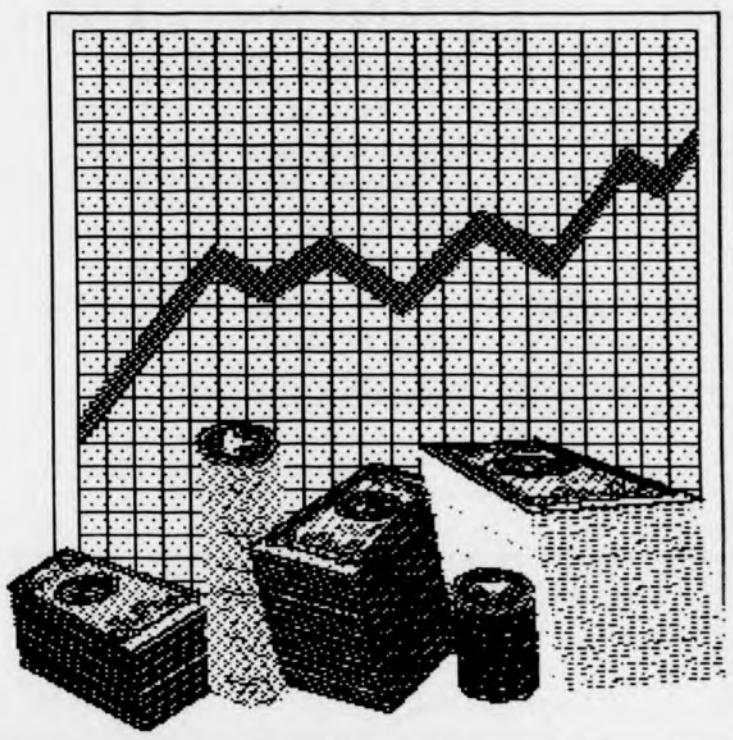
Roger Ibbotson
Ibbotson Associates, Chicago

A money manager's past performance can be a good indicator of his ability to pick promising companies and predict economic trends. One way to judge a manager's skill is to compare the performance of his fund with the S&P/BARRA index that matches the fund's focus, or "style." The style is stated in the prospectus (e.g., large-cap growth, small-cap value stocks, etc.).

However, the caliber of the fund manager doesn't ensure fat returns. That's the rub. A fund's stellar performance has as much to do with the success of the portfolio's style as it does with the fund manager's skill and foresight in executing it. "It's a style bet more than a manager bet," said Mortimer. And investors shouldn't bank on the hope that the investment style most favored by the market in the previous year will continue to lead in the current year.

Industries such as technology or health care, for instance, can have a good year, catapulting growth-style funds to the top — only to languish the next. In another year industrial companies and cyclicals might do well, bolstering value-style funds. "You can predict the skill of the manager, but it's harder to predict which sectors are going to do well," says Roger Ibbotson, a Yale University professor and founder of the consulting firm Ibbotson Associates in Chicago.

And much depends on the larger picture of how economists and investors view interest rates and economic growth. At the beginning of 1996, for instance, steady economic growth and low interest rates caused investors to favor small companies who had the flexibility to expand faster than some of the corporate behemoths. A look at the Morningstar Mutual Funds list of best performing diversified equity funds as of Dec. 31, 1996 shows that many of the best had invested in small companies with no more than $1 billion in equity capitalization. Among these, Warburg Pincus Small Company Value soared 56.2 percent, Needham Growth jumped 51.6 percent, Fremont United States Micro Cap gained 48.7 percent, and Robertson Stephens Partners added 43.2 percent.



More often, it happens that one year's fund winner is the next year's loser, or at least mediocre performer, according to the Worth study that tracked how top 10 funds of a given year perform the year after stardom. Morningstar ranked diversified, equity funds; including only no-load funds, and excluding sector and international funds. Creating a mock portfolio, Worth bought the top performers of 1985 — and so on until 1995. Then it calculated the 10-year return.

The outcome wasn't a disaster: the portfolio grew 277 percent cumulatively, while the S&P 500 gained 300 percent. But the lower return came with higher risk. As measured by standard deviation, the S&P 500 had an annual risk of 14.6 percent, compared with 15.9 percent for the funds in the top-10 portfolio. In other words, you would have done better parking your money in the Vanguard Index 500 fund, which mirrors the performance of the S&P 500. Besides, you would have slept better.

High flyers tended to have roller coaster runs, since they tend to practice an extreme style. While they get lucky when that style dominates the year, they are likely to under perform when their style loses favor. Take the top 10 funds of 1991. They returned an average of 84.3 percent, nearly tripling the S&P 500's gain. In 1992, those same funds lagged the market, bringing in an anemic 3.74 percent versus 7.62 percent from the S&P 500.

Instead of last year's top 10 funds, investors might do better to buy funds in the 90th percentile (the top 10 percent of funds), because they are often less volatile, and they tend to feature skillful money managers, says Ibbotson. "Definitely do not buy the top of the list. Usually the ones at the top are more unusual," he said.

So, when you are shopping around for new mutual funds, remember there are more ingredients for long-term success than one great year. Think about how a particular investing approach might play itself out this year if, say, the Federal Reserve raises interest rates, or if Intel introduces a new computer chip. In other words, look at the big picture and don't expect simple answers. Who knows? You may find a winner.

The fund has a twofold strategy: it focuses on income-producing stocks to pursue stability and looks for long-term growth from stocks that are believed to be undervalued.

As you can see, the approach has worked. But keep in mind that the past is no predictor of future performance. And you could have a loss or a gain when you sell your shares.

South Shore Conservatory Arts-Integrated Preschool Accepting Names for Fall '97

South Shore Conservatory in Hingham and at the Ellison Center For The Arts in Duxbury, is currently accepting names for Fall '97 for their one, two, and three-day preschool programs.

The conservatory's arts-integrated preschool program is a unique educational experience, combining all aspects of traditional preschool programs with considerable exposure to music and the arts.

Under the direction of Carol Forbes Scheig, the program emphasizes "learning by doing," or hands-on experiencing. The preschool encourages individual growth and works toward building self confidence, independence and problem solving skills.

First Time Playschool is a one-day program for children three and older who have yet to attend nursery school but are ready to start making the transition from home to school. It is a two-hour program, combining arts-related activities with music.

The conservatory's two- and three-day preschool program provides freedom within structure, so that children may choose from a number of teacher initiated arts activities or developmentally appropriate learning activities. Each child works at their own pace.

For more information about South Shore Conservatory's Preschool Program, please call (617) 749-7565 (in Hingham) or (617) 934-2731 (in Duxbury).

Artist Displays 40 Years of Growth

By Doreen Leggett
COHASSET MARINER

A day before her show was to open, Virginia Avery let her eyes travel over her 60 or so watercolor paintings hung in Cohasset's South Shore Art Center.

Her eyes first focused on her early landscape scenes, painted in traditional colors, of her childhood home on a farm in Manomet, or the farm in Framingham where she lived with her husband. They then glanced to the brighter landscape scenes of the marshes of Scituate or an old green truck at Dwyer Farm.

As her eyes continued around the room, they were met with the still lifes and floral paintings of the 1970s and 1980s. Her later paintings, abstracts, grids, a watercolor of sound, and series on water and emotions completed the circle of paintings, which were culled from over 3,000 paintings and 40 years of work.

"I've never had my own show, so it is very scary. All you've done is right there staring at you," said Avery, a resident of Furnace Road.

Her show, "40 Years with Watercolor: A Virginia Avery Retrospective," opened on Jan. 10 and will continue through Feb. 16.

Although this is her first time as a sole exhibitor, Avery's work has been on display before. She is a gallery artist at the center and a member of the American Watercolor Society in New York, the New England Watercolor Society and the Copley Society of Boston.

Unlike the work of some artists, who concentrate on one style, Avery's work depicts growth and change over the years.

"I can paint still lifes. I can paint landscapes. I want to paint something different," she said.

Although she works completely with watercolor, it hasn't always been that way. When she graduated from Boston University with a degree in art education, she had painted in oils and various other mediums, but not watercolor.

Soon after her graduation, in the mid-'50s, she stumbled upon a watercolor show.

"I really liked the look of it. It just drew me in. I was hooked," Avery, 65, said.

Because watercolor is a mixture of paint and water, the artist can achieve a transparency and fluidity.

She added that because watercolor is so fluid, it is also difficult to control, a fact she tells her students.

"To control the wash is what you are striving for," she explains.

Avery has been teaching for many years and considers it a large part of her art. For 10 years she took her students on trips to the Caribbean, Europe and Portugal, to name a few.

Encouraging her students is a large part of her success.

"Who's to be the judge if (the work) is good or bad? Art is expression. It is letting your soul out. Everybody has something to say,"Avery said.

She added she is more interested in expressing herself than the "prettiness" of the art.

"There was a metamorphosis to painting my feelings, instead of painting what I saw and being objective," Avery explained.

A series of four of her paintings, done in the '90s, exemplify this.

A bluesy "Clouds of Doubt" depicts Avery's questions in life, while a more orange "Threads of Time" says, "I'm getting older. I better get painting," said Avery.

Avery's grid, or "born again" paintings, are watercolors that didn't quite work on their own. She has torn up several different paintings and pieced them together to make compositions. Sometimes, she'll even paint over them.

Some grid paintings will take an hour. Others will take days, weeks or even months, said Avery.

Finished with her grid stage, at least for the moment, Avery has strived to capture sounds in her painting.

In "Night Sounds," one of her last paintings on display, one can almost feel the cold wind blowing and hear the sound of icicles melting.

Avery said she tried to arrange her work chronologically and by subject matter, so viewers can see a personal growth, even in the size of paper.

"When I first started I used small paper. As I became more confident I began working with larger sheets of paper," Avery said with a smile. "As we go around (the room), I'm getting more daring."

Avery, who was interested in art from a very early age, never had a time where she didn't paint.

Even when she got married and had three children, she kept painting.

"I gave them paper and we all painted together," she said.

Not surprisingly, two of her three children went into the art field. The other is an art lover.

Even her husband gets into the act. He creates the frames, and Avery confides, when they were courting, he painted two watercolors for her. He hasn't painted since.

Although spanning 40 years, the exhibit is by no means the end of the line for Avery. She is already thinking ahead to new projects, perhaps watercolors in a collage motif.

"I think I enjoy the journey. The experimentation for me is the challenge," said Avery.

"40 Years with Watercolor: A Virginia Avery Retrospective," is on display Friday, 10 to Feb. 16. The hours are Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday noon to 4 p.m. Call (617) 383-ARTS. Avery will also host a watercolor workshop, Feb. 1 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. The cost is $50 for non-members and $40 members. The docent gallery tour is Feb. 2 at 2 p.m.

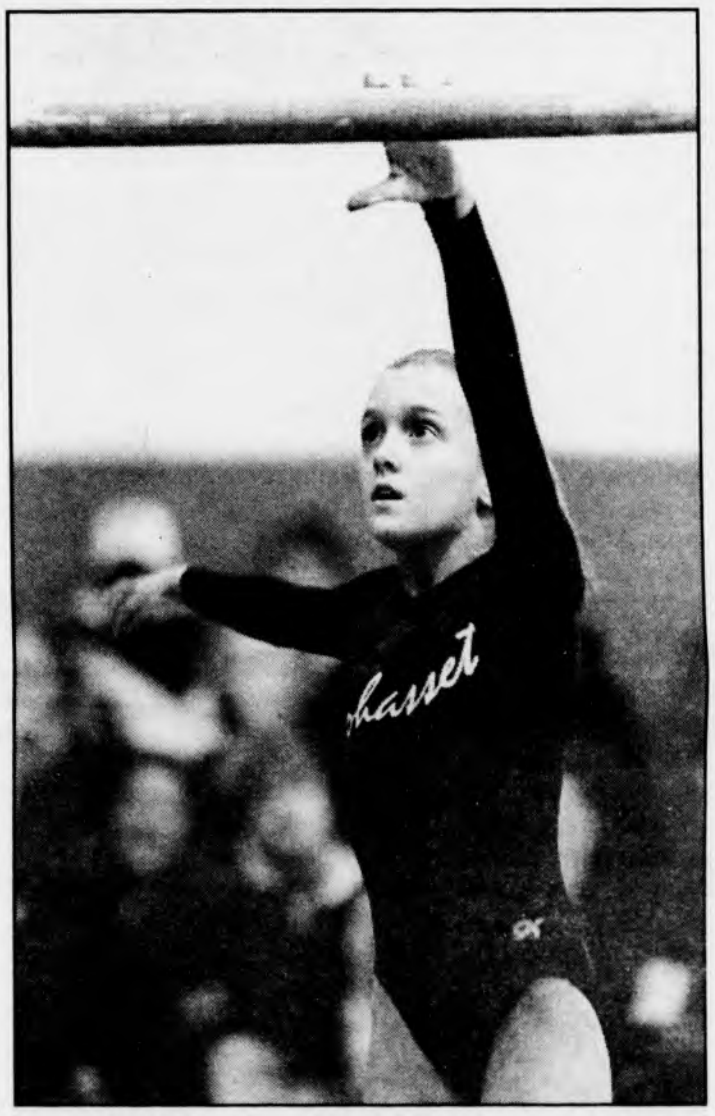
Gymnasts Throw Scare at Scituate



Lady Skippers Keep Champs in Check

By Joe Reardon
COHASSET MARINER

There will be no fourth consecutive league championship for the Cohasset High gymnastics team.

But for a while, it looked as though the Lady Skippers might share the honor with undefeated Scituate this year.

Cohasset, who tied Scituate for the title in 1994 before winning it outright in '95 and '96, trailed Scituate by just over one point halfway through Monday's meet in its home gym. The Lady Sailors, however, put together a tremendous floor routine to all but clinch the league championship with a 127.8-125.8 win.

Barring major upsets in the two remaining meets, the Lady Skippers could have clinched a tie for first with a victory over Scituate. Despite the loss, though, Cohasset practically guaranteed itself a rock-solid lock on second place with its 6-2 record. The Lady Skippers easily defeated their two remaining opponents, Carver and Norwell, the first time the teams met this season.

Cohasset head coach Erin Sutherland said she was pleased with the way her squad held tough with the Lady Sailors and likes the prospects for her team to possibly earn a South Sectional berth.

"I was really proud of them," Sutherland said. "We thought they could have been four points ahead. Scituate is a better team as far as scores go. They've scored a 130. We were really neck and neck going into the floor routine and they nailed their routine."

To no one's surprise, Scituate freshman star Gina Verge made a clean sweep of first place and further reaffirmed her position as the best gymnast in the conference. Verge finished with a 35.0 in the all-around. She was in complete control in every event, taking the bars (8.55), beam (9.0), vault (8.55) and floor (8.9).

The Lady Skippers, however, had several quality performances to stay well within striking distance of Scituate.

Erica and Tara Hettstrom finished second and third on the bars with scores of 7.55 and 7.45, respectively. Caitlin Flint took fourth with a 7.25. Scituate's Ginny Stone was second to Verge on the beam (8.15), but the Lady Skippers had a great night on the event, sweeping third through fifth. Jodi Colwill hit an 8.1, followed by Kristen Reynolds' 8.05 and Kristin Sheerin's 8.0 mark.

Colwill also took a second on the vault at 8.0. Tara Hettstrom was just behind, finishing third in 7.9. Sheerin and Reynolds recorded identical 7.8 scores for Cohasset.

Stone was runner-up to Verge on the floor routine (8.45) to help clinch the meet. Cohasset, however, had a strong night with Tara Hettstrom taking third in 8.35. Erica Hettstrom (8.2) Flint (8.1) and Meghan Pratt (7.6) hit strong scores as well.

Tara Hettstrom wound up in a tie for second with Stone on the all-around (31.05) and Sheerin took third (31.0).

"Our girls really pulled together and did well," Sutherland said.

Cohasset Skippers Rout East Bridgewater Vikings

By Jim O'Sullivan
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

In a game that was over midway through the first half, the Cohasset Skippers thrashed the East Bridgewater Vikings 73-54. Aided again by the scoring of Paul-Michael Quintin (15) and Ryan Bishop (14), this time it was J.L. Williams' 18 points, 12 of those from three-point land, which led the visitors.

But it was rock-solid Burke Davis who started the fire burning as he put the Skippers on the board with a three-pointer. Williams found Bishop down low for a couple and then stretched out the defense with a three-pointer. Davis found Jamie Buick for two points, then nailed the technical free throw, the result of a frustrated Viking slamming the ball to the floor. Williams' second trey pushed the Skippers out in front 14-2. Quintin made a nifty dribble move and found himself with an easy lefty lay-up, then nailed his first three of the game. Williams responded with one of his own. Quintin stepped into the passing lane to make a steal, hit the lay-up, got fouled, and hit the freebie to score three the old-fashioned way.

Quintin then knocked down two more technicals, these the results of the opinions being animatedly expressed from the sideline by EB's coach. Williams found Brian Kilroy underneath the hoop for two and Bishop stuck a turnaround. Buick sank a free throw and Williams' two from the line gave CHS a bulging lead of 35-12. Davis stuck a pair from the charity stripe and Buick tossed in one. Quintin and Williams both hit pull-up jumpers and the Skippers finished the half when sophomore Raheem Shepard found Davis for the lay-up.

Cohasset came out just as quickly in the second half, scoring eight straight points. Bishop took an inbounds pass from Williams to the hole for an easy deuce and Williams hit his fourth and final trey of the night. Quintin answered with one from beyond the arc himself. Bishop scored eight straight points with an eye-popping arsenal of lay-ups, turnarounds, and offensive tip-ins. Sophomore Jamie DeMichele fed Pat Hurley for two points, putting Cohasset ahead 62-35. Williams drove to the hole for a pair and DeMichele scored his first varsity points, much to the delight of the Cohasset JV squad, by icing a pair of free throws. Hurley drove baseline for a bucket and Buick did the same. Hurley picked up two more and John Kasameyer capped off the scoring for the Skippers with a free throw, bringing the final tally to 73-54.

The Skippers play host to the Abington Green Waves this Friday at 6:30 and will battle Hanover next Tuesday for first place in the South Shore League, a game which also will be played in the SkipperDome.

CHS Grapplers Pin 10-3 Record

The Cohasset High wrestling team rolled to three big wins this week in a four-team meet with North Quincy (38-14), Marshfield (45-27) and Braintree (50-16).

The three wins move the Skippers to a 10-3 record on the season.

Standout grapplers at the meet included:

Craig Sheerin at 103 pounds. He ended up with two wins.

Mike Baird at 119 pounds. He won two matches by pin.

Ben Littauer at 125 pounds. He won two matches by pin.

Kevin Duffy at 135 pounds. He won three matches by pin.

Doug Sheerin at 140 pounds. He won two matches.

Mike Rossi at 145 pounds. He won three matches.

Luke Caldwell at 152 pounds. He won two matches.

And Justin Buckley. He won two matches by pin.

Pilgrim Conference Plan May Be History

Waiver Denial Could be Mortal Blow for Four League Format

By David McKee
COHASSET MARINER

Just as everybody was finally getting used to the new four-league Pilgrim Conference realignment for '97, a monkey wrench was thrown into the mix that could lead to a continuation of the old three-league format.

Last week the District C committee of the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association (MIAA) refused to grant a needed waiver to the Pilgrim Conference realignment plan by a 3-2 vote. Now only the MIAA board of directors (scheduled to meet in early February) can save the re-alignment plan for '97 by granting a waiver.

The District C denial caught more than a few Pilgrim Conference school administrators off guard. (Under MIAA rules, any re-alignment plans require a two-year waiting period unless a waiver is granted.)

"I was totally stunned when I heard the news," said Duxbury High athletic director Debbie Brooks. Duxbury was slated to join the new Patriot League after competing the last few years in the Atlantic Coast League. "Unfortunately, it seems to me that this denial was another example of individual personalities and petty politics getting in the way of what is good for everyone. The four-league plan wasn't perfect but it was good for us and good for the majority of the schools in the Pilgrim Conference. Now I have no idea what is going on."

According to several South Shore school officials, three school administrators on the District C committee from the towns of North Attleboro, Walpole and Millis voted to deny the Pilgrim Conference waiver.

A Plymouth North administrator voted in favor of the waiver while a Weymouth High school administrator (athletic director Bob Donovan) didn't even attend the meeting.

The other favorable vote came from the committee chairman, a Hanover High administrator.

"I think more than a few phone calls were made to members of the District C committee to lobby for votes," Brooks said. "But all I know is all our re-alignment work was undone by three votes from schools that aren't even in our region. But that's the MIAA for you."

Given her choice, Brooks would disband the entire Pilgrim Conference and have the current Atlantic Coast League schools break off on their own. "But that's not going to happen," she said. "So my second choice would be to stay with the four-league plan. That's what we voted on and that's what appears best for everyone."

Donovan, who was reached at his office at Weymouth High school on Monday, said he could not attend the meeting last week because of a back injury.

"I would have supported the move but my vote didn't matter anyway because there wasn't enough support," Donovan said.

Pilgrim Conference member schools have a meeting scheduled for Jan. 30. At that meeting, the schools will decide whether to proceed with their waiver request to the MIAA board of directors. They will also decide whether Dennis-Yarmouth will move up to Old Colony League and whether Scituate and Rockland will trade places in the Atlantic Coast League and the South Shore League due to changing enrollment figures.

Scituate High athletic director and high school principal Leo Liatsos was extremely disappointed the waiver was denied.

"I was disappointed but it didn't catch me by surprise because there were a lot of contentious issues involved," he said. "But I've been around a long time and whenever you're dealing with the M.I.A.A., you can expect the unexpected. It is my view that logic did not prevail"

Liatsos also shared the opinion that the District C committee may have been swayed by politics and personalities.

"Let's just say I think the process was flawed," he said.

As for what this means for Scituate, Liatsos in uncertain.

"The Pilgrim Conference has some issues that really need to be worked out now that the waiver was turned down," he said. "We have to decide if we're going to go forward to the board of directors or take another course. Our view is that the four-league format was the way to go. We presented the four-league idea originally three years ago and it seemed that it was the best course for everyone involved."

Scituate High is scheduled to switch leagues with Rockland next year due to changing enrollment figures. However, that could change due to the District C vote.

Hingham High athletic director Bill Barges said the denial was a surprise.

"I thought the waiver would go through," he said. "I really didn't expect this. I think it's unfortunate that only five people can stop the work that all the Pilgrim Conference schools put in. If anything, maybe they could have given a conditional approval if they had some concerns. Instead they just shot it down."

Barges would like to see the four-league format in place.

"I would like to see the appeal pursued at the board of directors and the four-league format put into place," he said. "I liked the looks of the Patriot League and the flexibility it gave us for non-league games."

Norwell athletic director Bill Gerety said he was surprised as well by the waiver denial.

"This was just the second bite in the apple," Gerety said. "Things are kind of up in the air now, but a decision will have to be made soon because we have a lot of work to do on the schedules and the more we wait, the worse it will get."

Marshfield athletic director Ed Miller, who did not support the Pilgrim re-alignment plan, said staying with the three-league format next year would be fine with him.

He said any conference re-alignment should take more than just school enrollment into consideration. (The four-league Pilgrim plan was based totally on enrollment.)

"There are still too many problems with this move," he said. "One of the biggest would be the Super Bowl situation in football. Under the new plan, there would be four leagues and only three guaranteed Super Bowl slots. That is a big concern for a lot of people."

However, this Super Bowl football view is not shared by Brooks.

"To me that's the tail wagging the dog," she said of the football concerns about the new conference plan. "The Bay State League has two divisions and only one Super Bowl representative. Maybe something could be worked out to create another Super Bowl match-up with them."

Brooks also pointed out that two of the voters on District C committee are John Lee of Walpole (current athletic director and former Super Bowl winning football coach) and Ray Beaupre (current athletic director and also Super Bowl winning football coach at North Attleboro.)

"You have to think of the big picture and think of the kids," she said. "That's what I believe, at least. I'm certainly not in this for the money or the glory."

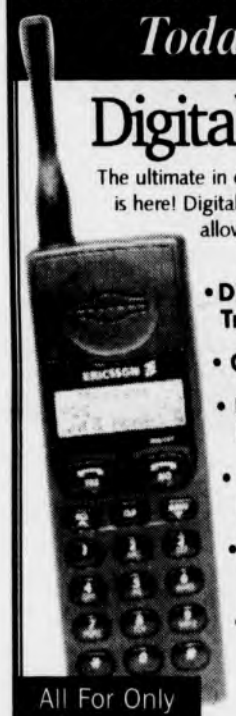
Cohasset Skippers Drop Norwell Clippers

Cohasset hosted a tough Norwell team last Tuesday and beat the Clippers, winning a 69-59 decision. Led by Paul-Michael Quintin's 17 points and Ryan Bishop's 16 and the good all-around play of Jamie Buick, the Skippers overcame a Norwell run late in the game.

Bishop started the game with an offensive putback and J.L. Williams popped a deep three-pointer. Buick grabbed an offensive board and laid it in for two more, and Quintin's jumper made it 9-2 in favor of the Skippers. Senior point guard and captain Burke Davis hit a trey and Quintin got two more with a lay-up. Buick's free throw and Bishop's tip-in put the Skippers ahead 17-4, but Norwell fought back. Despite a bucket by Pat Hurley and a free throw by Quintin, the Clippers went on a 14-3 run, stopped only when Jamie Buick made a nice move to the hoop for a pair. Quintin stuck one from beyond the arc and Bishop took a nice pass from Buick to the rack for a basket. Cohasset finished the half when Buick made a nice steal and laid it in and when Davis found Hurley for two, making the halftime score 31-25.



Davis led off the second half kissing the ball in off the glass and then knocking down a three pointer. Bishop muscled his way under the hoop for a reverse lay-up and Buick nailed two free throws. Bishop took an offensive charge which gave CHS the ball back and led to Buick's free throw. However, Norwell showed their heart by coming back and actually taking the lead, 45-43 with six minutes to go. But Bishop tied it up and Buick pushed Cohasset ahead with a free throw. Hurley drove for a nice hoop and Quintin nailed another three. Bishop hit a freebie and Williams knocked down a three, his second of the night. Davis drove to the hole for two more and backcourt mate Quintin hit a runner in the paint. Bishop's turnaround over 6'9" Norwell center Matt Lewis was the clincher for Cohasset and Quintin followed that with a lay-up. Williams nailed his third and final trey of the game and the Skippers finished off with free throws from Hurley and Bishop, making the final score of the game 69-59, in Cohasset's favor.

Federal Grant Pays for Computers

Thanks to a $27,500 federal grant, the police department has been outfitted with a new state-of-the-art computer system that includes digital imaging cameras and a lap-top computer.

Police Chief Brian Noonan explained that the purpose of the COPS MORE grant is to get more police out on the street. He said the computer system drastically reduces the paperwork for officers. An arrest for "operating under the influence," for example required that nine or ten forms be filled out. Now that task is all computerized.

The digital camera does not use film and therefore eliminates the use of a photo lab. The image is imported right into the computer and can be pulled up on the screen.

The computer center at the police station includes two work stations, a scanner and color printer.

Officer Rick Yocum helped write the grant application.

Theft at Sunoco Station

Police say a theft at the Sunoco Station across from Stop & Shop on Route 3A may be related to similar incidents in Scituate and Hingham because the perpetrators used the same modus operandi.

The Cohasset incident was reported at 6:10 a.m., Monday when the business owner discovered the break.

Police Sgt. Robert Jackson said the thieves smashed the glass on the door to gain entry and made off with an undetermined amount of cash and cigarettes. The burglary occurred between 2 and 6 a.m., Jackson said.

Hingham officers responded to an alarm at the Hingham Harbor Sunoco at 2 a.m. Monday. A window had been smashed, but no entry was gained. The owner was able to determine that nothing was missing.

Jackson said there were two similar incidents in Scituate.

Faith Classes Offered

The Rev. Jenny Rankin, interim minister at First Parish in Cohasset, who is devoting a significant portion of her church year in Cohasset to adult education, will be offering two new classes. Her "Spiritual Autobiography" course, which attracted participants both from the parish and from the wider community during the fall, will be repeated Wednesday mornings commencing Feb. 5. It will meet for six consecutive Wednesdays, 9 to 10 a.m., concluding March 12. Registration is required. Please call the First Parish office at 383-1100, Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Enrollment has also begun for a new class on Unitarian Universalism, which will commence on Sunday, March 9. The book study course, meeting on three consecutive Sunday mornings, 9 to 10 a.m., is also open to both parishioners and the community. The book to be studied is "Our Chosen Faith," by the Rev. John A. Beuhrens and the Rev. F. Forrester Church, written when they were co-ministers at the Unitarian Universalist All Souls Church in New York City. The Rev. Buehrens is currently president of the Unitarian Universalist Association. The books will be available before the course starts Sunday, March 9. It will meet again at the same time March 16 and 23 in the Unitarian Parish House at 23 N. Main St. To register and order a copy of the book, call the parish office at 383-1100 during office hours.

The "Rev. Jenny" says that she is offering the course for those who seek enlightenment "perhaps to better understand a religion that has been hailed as one that challenges the mind, touches the heart and awakens the soul, or perhaps to reexamine their own responses to the only two basic facts that all humanity knows for certain — that each of us exists and that each of us will die."

Encore! Concert Feb. 8

It's ENCORE! time again! The pops-style choral concert is being presented by the Unicorn Singers and Broad Cove Chorale Feb. 8 at Congregation Sha'aray Shalom in So. Hingham.

ENCORE! has sold out for the past three years on Saturday evening; patrons are urged to get their tables for six together immediately! Highlights of this year's concert will be staged and costumed medleys from "A Chorus Line" and "Kismet", and a Valentine sing-along of Gershwin classics with orchestra.

ENCORE! reprises many of the two choral groups' best-loved selections from their popular fall galas, and combines a great variety of music (spirituals, folksongs, close harmony, madrigals, jazz, barbershop, opera and Broadway) with humorous, original segments written especially for the group.

Patrons are encouraged to purchase reserved tables for 6 for $72, and to bring a festive picnic to enjoy during the concert. A portion of the big social hall's 250 seats will be saved for those who prefer to buy single seats for $12, also at tables for 6 in a special section. Tickets will probably not be available at the door; they should be bought at Noble's Camera in Hingham Square, or from members of either chorus, or by mail. For tables of 6 or for single tickets, send a check and self-addressed stamped envelope to Broad Cove Chorale, 66 Lincoln Street, Hingham 02043. After Feb. 3, call first for availability: 749-6561.

ENCORE! will also be performed on Sunday, Feb. 9, at the Cushing Center in Norwell, as a benefit for the South Shore Natural Science Center. Tickets for the 8 p.m. concert can be obtained by calling 659-2559.

Help With Health Insurance

Do you need information on health insurance? Come to a SHINE.

(Serving Health Information Needs of the Elderly) counselor. It's free and confidential. Health benefits for older persons can be very puzzling. Information on the various health insurances, Medicare, Medigap, S.S.I. and HMOs can be very confusing and are constantly subject to change.

There is a solution! SHINE counselors are available to help. SHINE is a program developed, funded and managed by the Executive Office of Elder Affairs at the state level and administered through local Councils on Aging. They provide a network of volunteer health benefit counselors. These volunteers are happy to review present coverage, help process claims, inform you of your rights, and refer you to appropriate agencies.

If you need assistance in understanding your health insurance needs, call th SHINE counselor at Cohasset Senior Center for appointment. The phone .. 383-9112.

Self-esteem Is Topic

Please tune in to channels 3 and 53 Wednesday night, Feb. 5, at 8 p.m., when "On the Mark with Ilana Marks" will feature two therapists, who will discuss "The Mother Daughter Connection." We will explore raising girls in the '90s, including female self-esteem issues. Please call in with your questions, or if you'd prefer to mail questions or comments, do so to "On the Mark with Ilana Marks," P.O. Box 717, Scituate, MA 02066. Our E-mail address i s ILANAMARKS@AOL.COM. Also, please tune in this Friday at 8 p.m. for a rebroadcast show featuring European interns, who will discuss life in America compared to other countries.

Gary Ritts is Citizen of the Year

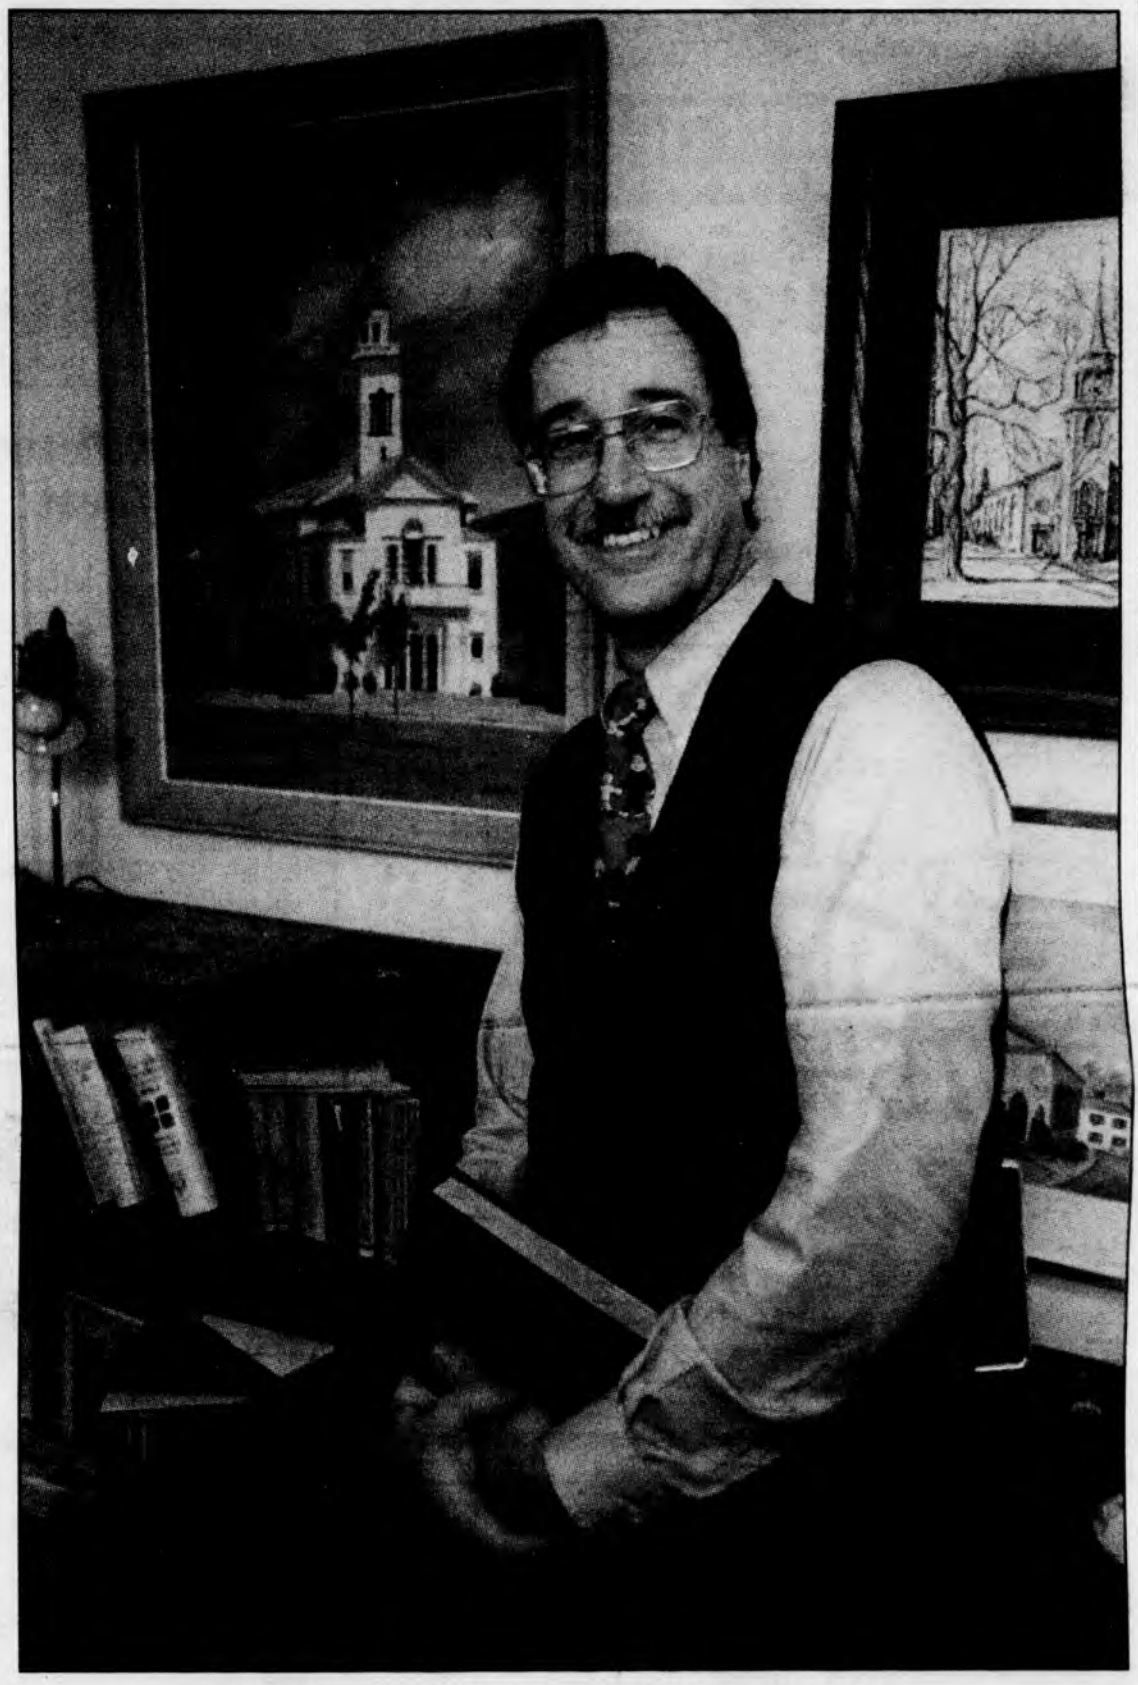
By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

This has been a big week for the Rev. Gary Ritts.

He celebrated his 10th anniversary as minister of the Second Congregational Church and was selected as the Cohasset Mariner 1996 Citizen of the Year.

And although after many years in the pulpit, Ritts is used to the limelight, he is humble about all this attention.

"It is embarrassing and certainly flattering," he said. "I don't think I deserve it alone. So many people have been a part of what people say is my success."



It is Ritts' work with the Appalachia Service Project (ASP) — an ecumenical volunteer effort involving Cohasset teenagers — that led to his selection as the Citizen of the Year.

The five-member selection committee, consisting of residents Martha Gjesteby, Marion Douglas, Clark Chatterton, Osborne Ingram and Cohasset Mariner editor, Mary Ford selected Ritts from 14 nominees submitted by 33 local citizens and families.

In their nomination of Ritts, Bob and Jean Thompson of Reservoir Road said Ritts has made a difference.

"He instituted the involvement of Cohasset young people from all churches in the Appalachia Service Project. We feel that in addition to helping people in need, these young people

Merchants Penalized for Tobacco Sales to Minors

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

The health board handed out warnings to four businesses caught selling cigarettes to minors in a compliance check conducted by the South Shore Tobacco Collaborative Jan. 24, and imposed a fine and a license suspension on one business that committed its second violation in the last 12 months.

Susan Cronin of the Tobacco Collaborative said four businesses committed first -time violations: CVS in Tedeschi Plaza, Verc Mobil station on Route 3A at Sohier Street, Walgreen's in the former Cushing Plaza and Tedeschi's Market on South Main Street in Cohasset Village.

Cronin said Cohasset Sunoco station on Route 3A at King Street committed its second offense in the last 12 months.

'I'm very disheartened by this. It's not only against the law; it's just not right. But I can't be there 24 hours a day.'
—Jerry Freeman, who runs Cohasset Sunoco

The collaborative conducts three compliance checks per year to ensure that businesses are not selling cigarettes to minors.

In the latest compliance check, two 16-year-old girls tried to buy cigarettes at the 14 Cohasset stores that sell tobacco products. The collaborative's under-age confederates are instructed to give an ID to merchants if asked to provide proof of age. Both girls carried IDs that showed they were born in 1980.

"I'm very disappointed that these stores sold cigarettes to minors," said Health Agent Joseph Godzik. "When we started the program, nobody sold the first time. The next time, two stores sold to minors and now it's up to five. There is a merchant education program; they're not in a vacuum. I don't know what more we can do."

Town Census Mailed

The Town Census for 1997 has been mailed to all Cohasset households, the town clerk said this week.

The local census is primarily used to maintain voting and jury lists but it is also used for school enrollment projections and public safety and senior center needs. The local census also establishes proof of residency which is often needed for certain privileges, such as transfer station stickers and cemetery rights, certain veterans benefits and reduced tuition rates at state colleges and universities.

Dog forms were enclosed with the census. The licenses are valid through Dec. 31, 1997. If you did not receive a census form, call 383-9900. The census must be returned by Feb. 21.

Town Won't Buy Pompeo Property

Selectmen agreed with the Open Space Committee and will not recommend the town buy the Pompeo property off Forest Avenue.

In a memo to selectmen, Susan Cope of the Open Space Committee said the committee recommends the town exercise its right of first refusal.

"The committee is involved with the current acquisition of the Turkey Hill property which requires the expenditure of both town and state monies, and is unable to determine a source for the money that would be needed for this second acquisition project."

Sidewalk Looks Great

In a Jan. 20 letter to selectmen, Ham Tewksbury, 81 Elm St., praised the job that's been done on the small section of sidewalk on South Main Street below St. Stephen's Church.

"Just clearing the brush, leaves, stones and some small saplings has done wonders. It makes the sidewalk more of a sidewalk without even touching the ledge.

"So — good job!!!" he said.

Upcoming Meetings are Noted

The following meetings have been posted outside the town clerk's office at town hall:

- Advisory Committee, 8 p.m., Feb. 11.
- Board of Health, 7:30 p.m., Feb. 11.
- Conservation Commission, 7:30 p.m., Feb. 20.
- Greenbush Meeting, 7:30 p.m., Feb. 11 & 27.
- Historical Commission, 7:30 p.m., Feb. 10
- Library Trustees, 8 p.m., Feb. 12.
- Planning Board, 8 p.m., Jan. 29.
- School Committee, 7:30 p.m., Feb. 6, AV room at the high school.
- School Facilities Committee, 7 p.m., Feb. 12.
- Selectmen, 7:30 p.m., Feb. 10..
- Sewer Commission, 6:30 p.m. & 7:30 p.m. March 12.
- Water Commission, 7:30 p.m. Feb. 6.
- Water Resources Protection Committee, 8 p.m., Feb. 26.

All meetings are at town hall unless otherwise noted. Room locations are posted on the bulletin board in the vestibule at town hall on the day of the meeting. Check with the town clerk or the particular board's office at town hall (383-9900) for any cancellations.

Nomination Papers are Ready

Nomination papers for the Annual Town Election are available at the town clerk's office and must be turned in by March 17.

The following positions will be available: Selectmen — one for three years; School Committee — two for three years; Trustee Paul Pratt Memorial Library — three for three years; Assessor one for three years; Board of Health — one for three years; Cohasset Housing Authority — one for five years; Planning Board - one for five years; Recreation Commission — three for five years; Sewer Commission — one for three years; and Water Commission — one for three years.

Wednesday, March 19, is the last day to register for the Annual Town Meeting and Annual Town Election. Registration forms are available at the Town Clerk's Office, the Cohasset Post Office and the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. This form may be mailed or hand-delivered to the clerk's office but must be received or postmarked on or before the deadline.

Osgood Committee has Vacancies

The Osgood School Reuse Committee has been expanded to nine members and needs some recruits, Selectman Peter Pratt said Monday. The charge town meeting gave to the committee is to maximize the sale value of the property and to bring it onto the tax rolls, Pratt pointed out. Up to three more members are needed. Interested citizens should contact the selectmen's office at 383-9900.

Jerusalem Road Project Put On Ice

By Jason Bouffard
COHASSET MARINER

Neighbors, who oppose, the proposed Jerusalem Road development can rest easy – for now.

The plan, which calls for the construction of a 45-acre, 28-lot housing complex in the existing Curtis Estate woods and wetlands, was "withdrawn without prejudice," according to Planning Board Chairman Al Moore. He said that developer Steve Corey is not ready to present a definitive plan to the board.

Moore supported the move as the right thing to do for the sake of the community.

"It isn't fair to those people coming to town hall and waiting to hear of the fate of their neighborhood," he said.

A public hearing planned in December to discuss the proposal had been cancelled at the request of the developer, who has reported needing more time to comprise an adequate plan.

"We'll talk about setting a date in the future (to resume discussions)," Moore said. "They'll come back when they're ready."

The news should bring temporary relief to the neighbors of the proposed complex, most of whom came out in opposition to the development at both public hearings held in the fall.

Residents near or abutting the proposed site expressed concerns about the increase in traffic that would result from an additional 28 families.

Others have talked about inadequate sidewalks along the streets that surround the site, and, should the development proceed, the compounded safety concerns for children who wait along area roads for school buses.

Still others have expressed concerns regarding flooding and the potential displacement of wildlife, including deer, foxes and coyotes. During the September public hearing, one man pointed out that the current plans would leave a 12-foot cliff along his driveway, due to alterations in terrain necessary for proper drainage.

At that hearing, the planning board first took notice that the presented plan appeared incomplete, lacking the definitive figures which would allow the board to make a judgment. At a later hearing held in November, Moore suggested that the plan had not progressed enough since September to move the project along.

After extension requests by the developer forced the postponement of any further hearings, Corey decided to go back to the drawing board to iron out the issues that are holding up the process.

"There are serious issues with regard to the proposed access road," Moore said, offering a brief explanation of the nature of the delays.

It is unclear as to when the talks can be expected to resume.

Private Trust Lends Money for Land Purchase

Directors of the Cohasset Conservation Trust, a private nonprofit environmental group, last week (Jan. 28) voted to lend the Town of Cohasset $174,960 toward the purchase of Turkey Hill. The loan bridges a gap that remains in funding joint acquisition of the property by the towns of Cohasset and Hingham pending release of money from State "Self-Help" grants to both towns. The Trustees of Reservations, which will manage the open-space property, has loaned the Town of Hingham $262,440 for the same purpose.

State grant money is expected before the end of the state's fiscal year, June 30. Closing on the purchase of the Turkey Hill property from the Saponaro family is scheduled for late March.

In other actions, the Cohasset Conservation Trust Board elected three new director/trustees and made two grants for environmental education programs to Cohasset public schools.

The newly-elected directors are Richard J. Avery, Ellen M. Freda and Jeffrey C. Waal, all Cohasset residents.

The trust board voted an $8,000 grant to allow naturalist Ellyn Einhorn of Massachusetts Audubon's Marshfield Sanctuary staff to continue working this year with students and teachers of the Osgood and Deer Hill Schools, utilizing classrooms and nature trails between the two schools, as she did last year, also on a Conservation Trust grant.

In addition, the trust voted $500 to fund a Cohasset High School program enabling David Clapp, Mass. Audubon's Marshfield Sanctuary Director, to lecture and lead student field trips through local conservation properties to observe birds and other wildlife in natural habitats.

Non-Compliance

Merchants that commit first-time violations are subject to up to a $100 fine, a warning, and participation in a mandatory merchant education program for all employees. Merchants that commit a second violation are subject to a $200 fine, a suspension of their license to sell tobacco products for up to seven days, and participation in the education program.

Each merchant was asked to send a representative to the health board to explain the reasons for the violation.

Members of the health board voted unanimously to impose the maximum penalty on Cohasset Sunoco for its second violation.

"I'm very disheartened by this," said Jerry Freeman, who runs Cohasset Sunoco. "It's not only against the law; it's just not right. But I can't be there 24 hours a day."

Freeman said the employee who sold the cigarettes no longer works at the station. He also asked the health board to reduce the fine to $100, but members felt the wording of the regulation would not allow a reduction.

"This is very difficult for us," Freeman said.

The board also suspended Cohasset Sunoco's license to sell tobacco products for seven days. Freeman must remove all tobacco products from his station Feb. 10 through Feb. 16.

Members of the health board waived the $100 fine for the other four businesses, issued verbal warnings, and ordered them to participate in the collaborative's merchant education program for employees.

Paul Vercollone, the owner of Verc Mobil, said his employee asked the girl for her ID., but miscalculated her age. Vercollone added that he admires the work the collaborative performs.

"They keep businesses on their toes," Vercollone said.

Bob Mahoney, a field representative for Tedeschi, said he was disheartened by the violation.

"We work hard as far as sales of cigarettes to minors," Mahoney said. "None of us at Tedeschi are proud of this; there's no excuse."

Cronin said the clerk at Tedeschi's looked at the girl's ID, but still sold her the cigarettes.

"The person who sold the cigarettes told the girl 'I don't know where to find the birth date', and when the girl pointed out the birth date, still sold her the cigarettes," Cronin said.

"The troubling thing about this case is the clerk actually looked at the ID," said health board member Alix White.

Mahoney said all Tedeschi employees are educated about tobacco laws, and the worker who sold the cigarettes had been reprimanded.

Cronin said a CVS employee also sold cigarettes to one of the girls after looking at her ID. CVS Manager Brian Foley said the employee who sold the cigarettes had been suspended for two weeks.

"We have a lot of built-in systems to defend against this," Cronin said. "The register alerts employees to check IDs on all cigarette sales if the customer appears younger than 25. The employee must perform a key sequence to complete all tobacco sales."

Cronin said the Walgreen's employee who sold the cigarettes also looked at the girl's ID, but still sold her the cigarettes.

Collaborative member Dawn Sibor also warned merchants that teenagers have been stealing nicotine gum and patches from drug stores. Nicotine patches have recently been made available without a prescription, Sibor said.

Sibor said teens like to combine patches, gum and cigarettes for a more intense, and potentially lethal, effect. She advised managers from both CVS and Walgreen's to move patches and nicotine gum from shelves to glass cases.

Despite the increased number of violations, Godzik said the town would continue the merchant education program.

The collaborative is funded by a 25-cent per pack cigarette tax and offers an on-going program of education. Merchant training sessions have been held throughout the South Shore to update retailers on the law and how to comply with it. Correct signage and information about methods to identify teens are also provided.

The organization shares a state-wide tobacco control goal of decreasing tobacco use 50 percent by 1999.

Carol Meyer contributed material to this story.

Public Forum on Lobster Lab Tomorrow

Educators, parents, grandparents, students, friends of students and concerned citizens are invited to a public information forum to discuss the proposed Learning Laboratory for Marine Biology and Genetic Research, to be held in the cafeteria of the Cohasset High School at 7:30 p.m. Feb. 7.

Questions raised by the selectmen and attendees will be addressed. The potential benefits of encouraging student interest in science and research, and the considerable impact that genetics will have on world food supply and on medical diagnosis and treatment, are strong arguments against letting the proposal expire. Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation therefore has voted to adopt and implement the Learning Lab project, which was conceived by Dr. Kevin Ulmer, a scientist well versed in genetics and biology. It is proposed to lease the former Cohasset Colonials showroom on Parker Avenue (the Hagerty Building) from the town at $1 per year on a 10 year renewable lease. Cost of establishing and operating the lab would be borne by donations and grants from educational and scientific foundations, not from town revenues.

Other forums will be provided at the same place on Feb. 25 and March 5, so that voters should be well prepared to vote on issuing a Request for Proposal (RFP) to lease the building at the Special Town Meeting March 29.

Future Sewer Users Want Fairness

How Projects Will Be Paid For Explained

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

Fairness seemed to be the recurring theme at a public forum on the proposed Central Cohasset sewer project Tuesday.

About 70 residents attended the two-plus hour meeting to air their concerns mostly about how deep they'll have to reach into their pockets to pay for the $13.4 million sewer expansion.

Plans are to ask town meeting to approve the Central Cohasset project with an opportunity for a 50 percent subsidy from the town contingent on a successful debt exclusion Proposition 2-1/2 override ballot question that would be put before voters sometime after town meeting.

An override is needed because half the cost of the project cannot be absorbed within the tax limits set by Proposition 2-1/2, a state law limiting the amount a town can raise its tax levy without an override.

If the project is approved at town meeting, but the override fails, sewer users would be assessed 100 percent of the project's costs.

With the 50 percent subsidy, all taxpayers would pay about $117 a year over 20 years based on a mean home assessment of $308,000. Existing users would pay an additional $88 and new users would pay an additional $431. Users would also pay operating and maintenance fees of about $400 a year.

Without the subsidy, existing users would pay $175 a year for 20 years and new users would pay $863 in addition to the $400 estimated in annual operating and maintenance fees.

Last March, the north Cohasset project was approved with the 50 percent shared town/user payment plan contingent on an override vote. That override narrowly failed at the ballot box leaving the 345 homeowners in north Cohasset with the prospect of paying 100 percent of the $6.6 million project which hooks them up to the sewer treatment plant in Hull. The central Cohasset project upgrades Cohasset's wastewater treatment plant and extends service to about 600 homes not currently on the sewer.

The town is under a court order to solve its sewer and septic problems and will face fines of as much as $10,000 a day if it doesn't comply, Sewer Commission Chairman Ted Guild said.

With the 50 percent subsidy, all taxpayers would pay about $117 a year over 20 years based on a mean home assessment of $308,000. Existing users would pay an additional $88 and new users would pay an additional $431. Users would also pay operating and maintenance fees of about $400 a

Officials say they will ask next month's annual town meeting in a joint "catch-all" warrant article to approve shared town/user funding, contingent on an override, for both the central and north Cohasset projects and to replace some on-site septic systems in critical environmental areas.

This would give north Cohasset another bite of the apple, so to speak, and provide the homeowners in central Cohasset with the opportunity to seek a 50 percent town subsidy for the project. Selectmen and sewer commissioners say they are optimistic that a joint override would pass because it would benefit both areas.

Guild said he is virtually certain town meeting will approve the projects but if it shouldn't, a special town meeting would be scheduled to address the issue again because of the specter of the steep fines.

Diane Sullivan, 708 Jerusalem Rd,; Maria Plante, 798 Jerusalem Rd.; and James "Russ" Lennon, 20 Tad Lane have appeared before innumerable selectmen's and sewer meetings to keep the issue of north Cohasset, being saddled with the entire cost of the sewer project in their part of town, before the public.

They were on hand again Tuesday to talk about fairness and to urge their counterparts in central Cohasset to get educated on the sewer issue.

"When you support the town meeting article, it is incumbent that you remember to support the Prop. 2-1/2 override," Sullivan said or the 50/50 shared payment plan will not go through.

If approved at town meeting, design specifications can be ready by June 30, the contract awarded by Nov 30, 1998 and the system operational by June 30, 2000, town engineers said Tuesday.

Arne Gjesteby, 81 Old Pasture Rd., pointed out that it is not fair for central Cohasset residents to have to pay for adding sewer service to the new Osgood School and Deer Hill School which should be paid for by all taxpayers. Ed Goff, 4 Ledgewood Drive, said it is unfair that existing users have been heavily subsidized by the town for nearly three decades. He suggested they be charged more to make up for it but was told that was impossible for legal reasons.

Guild explained that the pipes already run by those houses and homeowners cannot be assessed betterments for something they already have. Existing sewer users, however, will pay for the upgrades to the treatment plant.

A special public forum on the north/central Cohasset sewer warrant article and other sewer articles is slated for 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, March 12 at the town hall auditorium. Other articles include approving an inter-municipal agreement with Hingham to share their pumping station and force main at West Corner which is part of the north Cohasset project; taking of easements on private ways; and appropriating money for legal expenses, water proofing of man holes, and rewriting the sewer rules and regulations.

Many Fine Citizens Nominated for Annual Award

The Cohasset Mariner received 14 nominees for its annual Citizen of the Year Award from 33 individuals and families.

The Rev. Gary Ritts minister of the Second Congregational Church was selected by a committee of five consisting of Martha Gjesteby, 81 Old Pasture Rd.; Town Clerk Marion Douglas, 404 Beechwood St.; Clark Chatterton, 9 Red Gate Lane; Osborne Ingram, 274 Beechwood St.; and Mary Ford — editor of the Cohasset Mariner.

The other nominees were:

• Anna Abbruzzese, for giving so much of herself to the senior citizens, the Farmer's Market, church, the revitalization and beautification of the village, and other civic and community endeavors.

• Tom Cook & Alix White, for voting to deny the proposed expansion of Cohasset Heights Landfill after sitting through three months of site assignment hearings.

• Herb Jason, for working diligently in many projects for the citizens of Cohasset including the Minot Ledge Light Replica and for collecting for the Toys for Tots, which helps needy children.

• Rose Kierce, for her overall commitment to both the community and her family, including driving the bus for senior citizens, helping out at senior citizen lunches, working with the S.H.A.R.E. program, and her work at the Pine Street Inn, all while raising eight children and helping out with six grandchildren.

• Bob Martin, a fine, helpful gentleman, who is one of many wonderful people who give of themselves whole heartedly.

• John K. McNabb, Jr., and the volunteers of SAFE, including Kevin O'Donnell, Jim Kinch, and Linda Keller, for their outstanding work on behalf of protecting Cohasset's watershed and environment.

• Marjorie Murphy, Deer Hill School librarian, for her love and concern for every child passing through the doors of the school and that they will all leave with a love of reading.

• Kevin O'Keeffe, for working harder and longer than anyone to dig up facts regarding air quality issues surrounding restoration of the train.

• Glenn Pratt, for his devotion to veterans with the Vietnam war memorial, renaming the town squares for these same veterans, his work on the cemetery committee, and his invaluable assistance to the Community Center.

• Ralph Peroncello, a member of the Housing Authority and retired fire-fighter, for organizing the Cohasset chapter of the VFW and for his many hours behind the scenes getting ready for Memorial Day, and as caretaker of Central Cemetery.

• John Small, for his 10-year involvement with the Toys for Tots which provides toys to needy children, for delivering Santa by boat for the Jingle Bell Walk, his work on the Minot Light Replica and bell restoration, and for the benefit auto show for the family of a Scituate accident victim.

• Marjorie Steele, for her cheerful and unflagging leadership of the Cohasset Food Pantry.

• David H. Wadsworth, for translating his enthusiasm for the history of Cohasset into engrossing accounts of our town's beginnings and its journey to the present and for being ever ready to discuss these events.

Citizen of the Year

have undergone significant personal growth.

"In many obvious ways, and some that are not well known, Gary is a positive force for good in this town," they wrote.

Ritts, a native of Ohio, explained that he and his wife, Judy, "brought" ASP with them from Connecticut, where Ritts had served as youth minister for 4-1/2 years before coming to Cohasset.

ASP, a non-profit organization founded in 1969, is a home repair and home building ministry serving central Appalachia that annually attracts 7,000 volunteers from across the country.

In 1988, the Rittses took seven Cohasset teens to Presque Isle, Maine to work with two native American families.

This year 84 volunteers have signed up and there's a waiting list for the week-long trip to Campbell County, Tennessee.

The program has become so well known that it has "sold itself," Ritts said, noting ASP has 180 alumni in town.

"All we did was introduce it. The power of the experience itself has touched a lot of people," he said.

Ritts said he finds the success of ASP in Cohasset to be very rewarding. He points out that in an affluent town, the experience can have a profound effect on its volunteers, who sleep on the floors in the school gym during the project.

"I think if nothing else, it gives them a picture of whom many think are ignorant and have nothing. They go down and meet these people and find they are intelligent in a different way.

"They know how to put roofs on houses, and they are not poor in relationships. Some of the families are much richer in their support of each other and their caring," Ritts said.

Ritts is also well-known around town for his involvement with Harborfest, which is part of the annual Festival on the Common in June. Ritts presides over the Blessing of the Fleet, marches with a glockenspiel in the Harborfest parade, and organizes the acts for Center Stage. And the church courtyard becomes a wonderful retreat from all the excitement where the public can enjoy fresh strawberry shortcake smothered with whipped cream.

Making the church available to all is important, Ritts said. The church hall has been used for debates, as a voting site, and for meetings when the town hall is unavailable.

"I see this as an open place," said Ritts, adding that maybe someone who comes for a non-church activity will come another time for worship.

His ministry style is one of inclusion and sharing.

"I've added committees," he said about the administrative structure of the church, "to help build the church to where it is today.

"I've tried to build a structure so that tasks are shared by all. I pride myself on being an enabler."

But most of all, Ritts is proud of ASP and he shares that pride with everyone.

"Of all the things we've done here, the thing Judy and I are most proud of is the way the community embraced ASP and lifted it up.

"I hope Cohasset is proud of ASP, our humble attempt at a youth program in town."

Gary and Judy, who is a special needs teacher at Deer Hill School, live on Red Gate Lane and have two children: Steven, 25, and Alli, 18.

GOING PLACES

THE ROMANTIC CALL OF THE SEA

The idea that romance and the open ocean go together like, well, love and marriage, didn't originate with TV's The Love Boat. Throughout time, the soft sea air and gentle rhythms of a leisurely cruise have been a setting of choice for love. There's something about being totally afloat, far from familiar earth-bound concerns, that opens the way to spending satisfying time together. In a recent survey, just being together was the reason for choosing a cruise among more than 90 percent of respondents. Once on board, the most often-cited romantic attraction was the moonlit stroll around the deck. Other popular activities included sharing romantic dinners, breakfast in bed, and watching sunsets and sunrises hand-in-hand. It's probably no accident that cruise cuisine often features plenty of fabled aphrodisiacs such as chocolate and artichokes!

Cruise ships today are very accommodating to a variety of travelers. They may visit exotic locations, feature special activities, offer almost non-stop dining, and generally provide a vacation unlike any other. If your future vacation includes a cruise, we'd love to talk to you. Come visit SCITUATE HARBOR TRAVEL and start your vacation early by making plans with us. We're easy to work with, easy to find at 53 Cole Parkway, Scituate Harbor, and our services are free of charge. PH: 545-4281 or 800-354-2720.

HINT: What a romantic Valentine's Day gift! Cruise aboard Norwegian Cruise Line on The Norway or The Crown. Outside Cabin $849 per person, cruise only, includes all meals and on board entertainment.

Winter hours: Mon-Fri., 8:30-5:30, Sat., 9-2. 24 hour answering, free ticket delivery, senior discounts.

AROUND TOWN/Sallyann Chatterton

Happy Birthday Wishes to Bob Leonard, Sr.!

Hip Hip Hooray, that good old groundhog saved our day! Weren't you just thrilled when he didn't see his shadow? That means spring is right around the corner! Yes! Because the years that he does see his shadow, we make sure that it doesn't count — this year it does!

Feb. 8 is a big day for Bob Leonard Sr. (Bing) he will be 81 years young! Lots remember him as the former plumbing and gas inspector for Cohasset, or as a plumber extraordinaire! In any case, be sure to give him a big birthday hug when you see him! Oh, guess how he spent his pre-birthday time? He went to Marco Island with his son, Bob, and daughter-in-law, Mary — we'll bet that the sun and warmth felt sooo good! Hope you loved your trip, and that your birthday was the best one yet!

Ran into (Captain) Hugh Morgan the other day; he is still overwhelmed at the kind folks who remembered him at Christmas. Hugh drives Bus Two, and lots of appreciative students and their parents wanted him to be sure that he knew how much he meant to them — thus the presents! Anyway, Captain Morgan extends a huge thanks to you all!

Linc Bloomfield will be a regular panelist on the EcoForum, a new national TV program featuring a weekly discussion of a wide range of environment-related issues. It will be carried on the new Outdoor Life Network (locally cable channel 40) starting Sunday, Feb. 2, at both 10 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. Linc's latest book, entitled "Managing International Conflict" (including his CASCON computer program) has just been published by St. Martin's Press in New York.

Ira and Peg Stoughton sure are happy, and here is the reason for the huge grins — their daughter, Jeannie, along with her husband, Drew, and daughters, Caitlin and Rachel, have moved back to Cohasset from Connecticut! Drew grew up here too, so they are both thrilled to be back — surely their daughters will feel the same (Caitlin is 14, Rachel is 12-1/2). Please be sure to give the Quigley family a giant Cohasset welcome when you see them!

The Second Congregational Church held a surprise celebration for the Rev. Gary Ritts last Sunday, to honor his 10 years of being their minister. What a wonderful man, and how lucky the church, and the town, are that we have him! Hope your surprise party was a great one, Gary, and here's to the next 10 (or 20) years!

Tom and Barbara Piepenbrink have marvelous news to share with all of us, they are brand new parents! They are in China, getting their wonderful little girl, Taylor Shirley Piepenbrink, who is 15 months old! Isn't that just so exciting? They will be back Feb. 8; and you had better believe that Fred Piepenbrink and Dianne and John Mello, Taylor's grandparents, cannot wait to see her! And, isn't it nice that she will carry her late grandmother, Shirley Piepenbrink's, name — such a fine lady, such an honor! Tom and Barbara and Taylor will live in Hull, but you know that they will spend lots of time with all of their relatives here, so yes, we will get to see lots of Taylor!

The reviews are in, and from all accounts it is a hit! The new England Premier of London's #l comedy hit, "Funny Money," put on by Darling Productions in Association with Rural Lodge AF/ AM. The Quincy Center Dinner Theatre is located in the Masonic Building on 1170 Hancock St. in Quincy. Why am I telling you all of this? Cohasset's own Molly Hochkeppel is one of the stars! And does a wonderful job at it!! There are two performances left, Feb. 8 and 9. Saturday the doors open at 6:30 p.m., dinner starts at 7 p.m., and the show begins at 8:30; Sunday, Feb. 9, the doors open at 4:30 p.m., dinner starts at 5 p.m., and the show begins at 6:30 p.m. The cost is $29.95 which includes dinner, show, tax and tip! Call 843-5862 for reservations and info. And, go see Molly perform! Have fun!

Polly Doggett has news of two former Cohasset families, the Turners who lived off Forest Avenue, and the Woodburys who lived on a new lane off of King Street. Beau and Kathy Woodbury have been chosen to serve as Mission President in Tacoma, Washington, for the next three years. They love the area, and enjoy overseeing the work of some 200 missionaries. Kathy sends a recipe that they use on many occasions, called POSSE STEW. She says you can have a party, ask everyone to bring the beans, you do the rest! Brown 1 lb. hamburger in large pan, add chopped onion and one can drained chopped chilies. Add large can crushed tomatoes and four cups water, one tsp. salt and one tbsp. Worcestershire sauce. Add one can white shoe peg corn, drained, and one can yellow corn, drained. Now add beans, any and all kinds. The only can of beans you don't drain are pork and beans. The more beans, the larger group you serve. Ready in 15 minutes, serve with bread.

The other family, Tom and Zella Turner, are living in Roy, Utah. Their daughter, Cheryl, was active at CHS. Now Cheryl has graduated from BYU, served a mission (1-1/2 yrs.) in Anaheim, Calif., married, and is the mother of three beautiful children. She is a ward leader and loves being a wife and mom. She adds that she misses Cohasset, its beauty and especially "the little white lights at Christmas. I think that a part of my heart will always be there."

That's it for this week, hope to hear from you with your news!

OBITUARIES

Alexander Fulton

Alexander MacFarlane Fulton, 72, of Cohasset, a regional sales manager for the Millipore Corp. of Bedford and an Army veteran of World War II, died at New England Medical Center after a brief illness.

Mr. Fulton worked at the high-tech Millipore Corp. for many years before retiring in 1987. He was a pure water specialist and spent much of his time working in laboratories.

He later became regional sales manager for the company, a position that required extensive travel. He earned a regional manager of the year award and was named to the company's Golden Circle club.

During World War II, Mr. Fulton served as a paratrooper in the 11th Airborne Division. He was badly wounded in the Philippines and spent two years in a military hospital while doctors worked to mend his leg and foot.

He was an avid jazz fan and played jazz piano at his home almost every day.

Mr. Fulton sang for several years in the Canton Baystate Men's Barbershop Quartet, mostly in the 1970s. He was a longtime member of the Hatherly Country Club.

He graduated from Boston University's School of Business in 1950.

He was a member of the Disabled American Veterans and the Boston University Alumni Association.

Born in Ansonia, Conn., Mr. Fulton lived in Canton and New Seabury before moving to Cohasset 17 years ago.

He leaves his wife, Donna; two sons, Bruce A. Fulton of Cape Cod and Kenneth E. Fulton of Sandwich; one daughter, Debra Zildjian of Duxbury; four grandchildren; and several nieces and nephews.

A funeral service was conducted Feb. 3 at St. Luke's Episcopal Church, 465 First Parish Road, Scituate. The Rev. Raymond A. Low officiated.

Burial was in Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset.

The Richardson-Gaffey Funeral Home, 382 First Parish Road, Scituate, handled the arrangements.

William E. Haynes

William E. Haynes, 64, of Cohasset, a certified public accountant and a partner in Livingstone & Haynes, died Jan. 22 at home following an illness of several months.

Mr. Haynes, a 1954 graduate of Notre Dame University, earned a master's degree in 1958 from Babson College.

He was a member of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants and the Massachusetts Society of Certified Public Accountants.

A Cohasset resident for 25 years, Mr. Haynes was a member of the Cohasset Yacht Club and the Cohasset Golf Club. He was also a member of the World Affairs Council and of the Algonquin Club of Boston.

He served as a lieutenant in the Navy.

He was born in Boston, raised in West Roxbury and lived in Westwood before moving to Cohasset.

Mr. Haynes leaves his wife, JoAnn (Lane) Haynes; three daughters, Hilary Haynes and Robin Haynes, both of Cohasset, and Lauren Concannon of Hingham; two brothers, James M. Haynes of New Hampshire and Frederick D. Haynes of Wellesley; a sister, Ann Hennessey of Boston; two granddaughters and several nephews and nieces. He was also the father of the late Leslie A. Haynes.

A funeral Mass was celebrated Jan. 25 in St. Anthony's Church. Burial will be in Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset.

McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., Cohasset, handled the arrangements.

Donations may be made to Hospice of the South Shore, 100 Bay State Drive, Braintree, 02184.

Hortense S. Janitschke

Hortense S. Janitschke, 88, of Cohasset, died Jan. 31 at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth.

Miss Janitschke was born in Norfolk and had lived in Hyde Park and Norwell before moving to Cohasset 12 years ago.

She leaves a sister, Christine Janitschke of Cohasset. She was also the sister of the late Mina Lache, formerly of Norwell.

A funeral service was conducted Feb. 4 at the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St. Burial was in Blue Hill Cemetery in Braintree.

Donations may be made to the Park Street Church in Boston.

Audrey M. Shaw

Audrey M. (Klepper) Shaw, 87, formerly of Boxford, Mass., and Sarasota, Florida, died Jan. 30 at the Life Care Center in Scituate after a long illness.

Mrs. Shaw was born and raised in Bronx, New York, and graduated from Mount Holyoke College in South Hadley at the age of 20 with a degree in zoology. In 1942, she gained her pilot's license and radio telephone operator permit, becoming part of the Civil Air Patrol in the office of Civilian Defense during World War II. In addition, Mrs. Shaw tracked tornadoes and weather conditions for a weather service. She was very active also in the St. Joseph Valley Rifle Association of Bristol, Indiana, earning numerous Sharp Shooters Medals.

After moving to Boxford, Mass., Mrs. Shaw became active in the Boxford Historical Society and the Community Garden Club. She volunteered her time to her church where she was a deaconess. Mrs. Shaw served as a substitute teacher in the Boxford and Topsfield school systems and also worked for the U.S. Postal Service in Boxford from 1954 to 1968.

When it became evident that her elderly parents needed her care, she, and they, moved to Florida where, again, she volunteered her services to her church. She returned to Massachusetts in the 1980s to be closer to her family.

Mrs. Shaw leaves her children, Gordon D. Shaw of Ballwin, Missouri, Ronald K. Shaw of Peak's Island, Maine, and Valerie A. Lipsett of Cohasset, eight grandchildren, and 12 great-grandchildren.

A memorial service will be conducted in Valhalla, NY, at a later date. Arrangements were made by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., Cohasset.

Contributions in her memory may be made to Mount Holyoke College, 50 College St., South Hadley, MA 01075-1486.

EDITORIALS & OPINIONS

Citizen of the Year

As editor of the Cohasset Mariner, it is my pleasure to extend our heartfelt congratulations to Gary Ritts on his selection as the 1996 Citizen of the Year.

The Rev. Ritts, minister of the Second Congregational Church, brought the Appalachia Service Project to Cohasset. The ecumenical program has grown and enriched many young lives.

In their nomination of the Rev. Ritts, Bob and Jean Thompson of Reservoir Road said it best.

"He instituted the involvement of Cohasset young people from all churches in the Appalachia Service Project. We feel that in addition to helping people in need, these young people have undergone significant personal growth.

"In many obvious ways, and some that are not well known, Gary is a positive force for good in this town," they wrote.

As Kim Maynard of King Street said in her nomination:

"You can always count on Gary when you need him. He gives without expecting anything in return."

While nominations were open, nearly three dozen citizens and families took the time to nominate someone, detailing his or her contributions to help make this town one we all love.

Our thanks to residents Martha Gjesteby, Marion Douglas, Clark Chatterton, and Osborne Ingram for joining me at the Cohasset Mariner office in Hingham for the challenging and pleasurable task of poring over the nominations.

Regrettably, we can't recognize each of the 14 nominees with the Citizen of the Year Award. And we thank all those who wrote such thoughtful letters and notes nominating their fellow citizens.

The selection committee narrowed the field to six, then four and finally to two. The final decision — although not reached without considerable discussion — was unanimous.

With this award, we offer recognition for making a difference. In our society too many role models go unrecognized. Too often people today look to the sports, rock or movie star with envy when the real hero is the local police officer, firefighter, parent, teacher, church leader or government official.

The annual Citizen of the Year award is our way of taking our hats off to a person among us who goes that extra mile without asking for anything but the intrinsic reward of helping to make Cohasset a better place.

— Mary Ford

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Guild Responds to Pierson's Letter

To the Editor:

In response to Wigmore Pierson's factually inaccurate and highly pejorative letter in last week's Mariner, his call for my resignation and his implication that he speaks for all Cohasset citizens would seem ill advised from someone who was soundly defeated in the last election.

Now to the various points in his letter:

• The sewer commission is charged with the sewering program in the Town of Cohasset. At the insistence of the Attorney General's office, one person was to negotiate the 1994 agreement, and I, as chairman of the commission, was that person (aided, of course, by Special Town Counsel and the town's engineer). The resulting agreement was adopted by a unanimous vote of the Special Town Meeting on October 24, 1994. The sewer commissioners believe that the new agreement is in the town's best interest, and we shall recommend it to the Special Town Meeting on March 29, 1997.

• I expect that copies of the new agreement will be available within a few days for examination and study by anyone at the office of the Town Clerk and at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

• In response to Mr. Pierson's primary concern, namely the Title V requirement in the new agreement, the sewer commissioners submitted a proposed plan based upon a town-wide "needs analysis," to the Commonwealth in June 1996 (several months before Mr. Pierson commenced his holy war against the town's on-site wastewater management program). We have had verbal approval of this very limited Title V program from the Commonwealth which requires the plan to be implemented in only two priority areas: namely an area north of Lily Pond and an area adjacent to Nichols Road on Little Harbor, a total of about 150 homes. These areas are summarized in that June 1996 Report and in the recently completed "Draft Evaluation of the Alternatives." Copies of the latter will be available to anyone for study at the office of the Town Clerk and at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library within a few days, not "just before the March 29 Town Meeting" as Mr. Pierson assumed.

People should understand that the position of sewer commissioner is "pro bono." I have never received any compensation whatsoever from it. My objective has been and continues to be to work in the best interests of our beautiful town.

Finally, I agree with Mr. Pierson's call for "an extensive period of healing and reconciliation" and suggest that we all resolve to address one another in a civil manner when expressing our differences on the many important issues facing our town.

Edward M. Guild, Chairman
Cohasset Sewer Commission

Guild's Efforts Praised

To the Editor:

One of our usually generous, talented and public-minded citizens of the South Shore, Mr. Wigmore Pearson, has apparently seen fit, in a Cohasset Mariner letter to the editor to acerbically censure another of our highly contributive gentlemen, the Chairman of the Sewer Commission, Mr. Edward Guild.

On the subject of Mr. Pearson's contretemps, I know nothing. However, I do know that since 1983 — for 13 years, Ted Guild has labored in Cohasset's behalf, with unusual dedication and professional expertise on a highly technical subject. His career specialty and experience has not only been with water constituents, but also with an interface of town, state and governmental authorities — varying from our Statehouse in Boston to the royalty of Saudi Arabia.

While Mr. Guild may not be as close to God as his wife suggests, he should be applauded for years and years of conscientious, aggressive, often unheralded care, skill and judgment dealing with one of our main town concerns, while shepherding the interests, environmentally and financially, of Cohasset citizens.

Second-Graders Thank Firefighters

To the Editor:
The fire at the Sacks' home affected us deeply. Megan Sacks is a student in our second-grade class, at the Osgood School.
The following letters were written by the children, in appreciation of the efforts of the Cohasset Fire Department.

Mrs. Lauren Cook

Dear Fire Fighters,
We're sorry that a fire fighter got hurt. I hope no one will get hurt next time. I am in second grade and Megan Sacks is in my class. Thank you for saving Megan's house.

Your friend,
Christopher Ackley

Dear Fire Fighters,
Thank you for saving Megan Sacks' house. I am in second grade and in Megan's class. We are all thankful for the good work you do.

From,
Justin Alexander

Dear Fire Fighters,
I like you and thank you for saving Megan's house. I am happy. Be careful because I like you. I am in Mrs. Cook's class, in Osgood School. Megan is in my class. I hope you will come back to our class. You are nice people. I hope you don't jump out of the window. I really like you. I hope your friend is O.K. in the hospital. Will you tell me what his name is? Thank you.

From,
Davis Brown

Dear Fire Fighters,
Thank you for saving Megan's house. I am sorry one of your men got hurt.

Love,
Taylor Bukowski

P.S. Be careful!

Dear Fire Fighters,
Thank you for saving my friend Megan Sacks' house. I am very thankful to you. I am in her class. We are very sorry one of your men got hurt. I hope he feels better. You're nice.

Your Friend,
Alyssa Campbell

Dear Fire Fighters,
Thank you for saving Megan Sacks' house. You're very nice to save her house. Come and visit some time. I am sorry one of your men got hurt. You did your best! Tell the fire fighter who hurt his back that he did his best, too.

Your Friend,
Laura Campedelli

Dear Fire Fighters,
Thank you for saving Megan's house. I hope the one who got hurt is getting better and better. You are really nice for saving her house. I hope you have a nice day. Goodbye.

From,
Corey Chase

Dear Fire Fighters,
I am in second grade in Mrs. Cook's class, at Osgood School. Megan Sacks is in my class. Thank you for saving Megan's house.

Your Friend,
Andrew Clark

Dear Fire Fighters,
Thank you for saving my friend Megan's house. I am sorry one of your men got hurt. It is a very dangerous job for brave people. Thanks to you she still has a house! She is in my class. Please visit our class.

Your Friend,
Michael Corry

P.S. Mr. Silvia is my soccer coach.
Question: What happened when the fire fighter went down the pole? Answer: He got a rash.

Dear Fire Fighters,
I am in second grade and my teacher's name is Mrs. Cook. Thank you for saving Megan Sacks' house. I'm sorry one of your men got hurt. How is he doing? I hope he is better soon.

From,
Kristen Dooley

Dear Fire Fighters,
Thank you for saving Megan Sacks' house. You're very nice. Thank you for putting the fire out.

Your Friend,
Aisling Guinee

Dear Fire Fighters,
Thank you for saving Megan Sacks' house. Megan is in my class. She is a very nice girl. I am sorry for the fire fighter who got hurt. You guys are very, very nice to do that.

From,
John Harrington

Dear Fire Fighters,
I have an uncle who is a fire fighter. I am a friend of Megan Sacks. I am in her class. Thank you for helping her house. I think putting out fires is better than arresting people. We're lucky to have you protect our town from fires.

Sincerely,
Jared Kinch

Dear Fire Fighters,
Thank you for saving Megan's house. I am sorry for the fire fighter whoever got hurt. I liked you for saving Megan's house. She is in my class. She is a good friend. You are nice. You do a lot for our town.

Your Friend,
Kevin Lewis

Dear Fire Fighters,
Thank you for saving my friend, Megan Sacks', house. I'm in second grade. My name is Sarah A. Malone. Megan is my best friend.

Your Friend,
Sarah Malone

Dear Fire Fighters,
I am a student in Megan's class. Thank you for putting out the fire. Here is a joke . . . Why did the fire fighter wear suspenders? To keep up his pants!

Your Friend,
Michael McCue

Hagerty Boat Launch Space Needed

To the board of selectmen:
A good many years ago I was asked by the Recreation Commission to compile a report on the status of Cohasset Harbor in terms of identifying any possible ways to allow more access to our waterways by residents. It may have been that the Commissioners, at that time were looking for input from someone relatively new to town, who might view the problems of limited access to our waterways from a different perspective.
Fundamentally, it was concluded and reaffirmed by the Recreation Commission that there was really only one viable and pragmatically affordable way to increase access to residents to our harbor and waterways. Blasting and dredging to increase harbor size did not appear either practical or affordable in relation to what area more might be gained. Rather, it was suggested that residents could be afforded more access only if they restricted themselves to craft that were easy enough to launch and haul each time the craft were used.
Both then and now, our launch and parking facilities are extremely limited. It is recognized that launch facilities require parking facilities and both launch and parking facilities need both improvement and expansion to offer greater use by residents.
Ideally, a launch facility needs to be of dimensions capable of handling all sized craft, lighted for night use and kept in repair. Parking facilities for both vehicles and trailers are necessary and restroom facilities, along with access to running water would be of general benefit to all.
With the recent purchase of the Hagerty property, all of the above could be realized at relatively low cost to taxpayers, or users as the case might be.
The Recreation Commissioner's proposal for uses of the Hagerty property as an improved boat launch, waterfront park, etc., was not made simply as an alternative to other proposed uses, but rather as a solution to a problem of long-standing recognition. That is, improving accessibility to our waterways for the advantage to all residents, the only pragmatic, possible way.
Coexistence with other uses is, of course, another question and one that needs to be examined in more detail. However, the Commission feels that improved and expanded water access is of primary importance to the greatest number of residents and should be viewed from that perspective relative to any and/or other uses of this area.

Jack Worley
Recreation Director

Lobster Lab Is Worthy Project

To the Editor:
At the tender age of 5, our eldest daughter announced to us that she'd like to be President of the United States. As she grew older her ability to be a shrewd negotiator began to show itself with a vengeance and we all decided that she had litigator written all over her. While some people live by the motto, "Seize the day," hers was "Seize the gray." She would be dangerous as a defense attorney.
In reality, it takes time for talent and true interests to emerge and over time she has developed a passion for the sciences. As a high school junior and studying both marine biology and anatomy and physiology she has discovered a deep interest in science at the molecular level.
As a parent watching a child grow up, I have rejoiced when she has connected with a true mentor. Whether it is a coach who helped her develop skills, or a teacher with a particular love for a subject which is transferred to her students, or a community activist who stands up and gets involved when they believe that things can be better. We as a community are looking at such a mentor in Kevin Ulmer. This brilliant man is offering to be a resource to our community to enrich the lives of our youth in the context of the Lobster Lab project. This experience for children could be a catapult into the world of science and biology.
My child probably will not get to benefit from this opportunity, but I know that what she could learn with Kevin Ulmer is not in any high school science book. Parents, grandparents, please listen. Today your child may want to be a pro basketball player or a movie star or even President but tomorrow there might be a spark of interest in science. You can trust this interest to fate or you can provide these children with the chance to ignite their interests by participating in the Lobster Lab project.
We have been blessed with this opportunity. It is not hard to say yes. There are no costs to the town, and the alternative is six parking spaces. I urge you to support this worthy project.

A NEEDED LIFTER

▶When a clicking or ticking noise coming from the engine gradually goes away as the engine warms up, the problem is likely a noisy hydraulic lifter. A valve lifter is pushed upward by the camshaft lobe which, in turn, forces the pushrod in the same direction. The pushrod rotates the rocker arm, which forces the valve downward against its spring, thereby opening the valve. In an engine equipped with solid mechanical lifters, a small amount of clearance is required between the valve stem and the rocker arm. In engines equipped with hydraulic lifters, there should be no clearance. Oil inside the lifter acts as a cushion to gently force the pushrod upward and open the valve. If the lifter leaks oil, clearance can develop between the valve stem and the rocker arm, and a ticking noise will develop. When no adjustment is possible, replacement of the lifter(s) may be required.

▶Bringing your car in regularly according to the manufacturer's recommendations can mean that you'll prevent a lot of problems before they occur. At SOUTH SHORE CHEVROLET - GEO (383-9090), we stand out among automotive shops because of our efficiency, accurate diagnoses, and first-quality work. We're folks who deliver top quality work with top quality products every time you bring your car to us. We welcome your questions--we're here to answer them. We're at 828 C.J. Cushing Highway, Route 3A (open Thursday evenings).

HINT

Typically, a defective hydraulic lifter leaks oil when the engine is turned off. As the engine warms, the lifter fills with motor oil and gradually reduces the stem-to-rocker clearance, and the noise abates.

School Notebook

STUDENT OF THE MONTH/Nicole Santoro

Nicole Santoro is, as everyone at CHS knows, the most positive student in the school. She demonstrated this attitude in helping the Social Studies department successfully carry out its student election on Nov. 6.

Due to Nicole's pre-planning, working with members of the Student Council, and her work on the actual day of the voting, generously giving nearly her whole day to assisting the Social Studies teachers, the student election went off without a hitch.

During the day of voting, Nicole made sure that all periods requiring help got Student Council assistance or help from Nicole herself.

In true Nicole fashion she has down played her very vital role played in the student election, giving credit to others whom she feels deserve as much credit as she does. Everyone on the Student Council including the advisor, Mrs. Duffy, deserve a great deal of thanks. Without Nicole Santoro playing her key role in Student Election Day, however Student Election Day 1996 probably would have been less than the success it was.

Social Studies Chairman

Support Deer Hill Band

Please come to the Deer Hill band's Papa Gino's night Monday, Feb. 10, between 4 and 9 p.m. Papa Gino's has agreed to donate 15 percent of its sales to the Deer Hill School band T-shirt fund. Please don't miss this fun opportunity to get together!

Established in 1994, the Friends of Deer Hill Music would like to thank Papa Gino's for its generosity and for becoming a Deer Hill School band sponsor this year.

Scholarship Applications at Credit Union

Applications for Hingham Federal Credit Union 1997 Scholarships are now available for graduating high school senior members. Four $500 scholarships will be awarded based on need and merit.

To be considered a candidate, student or parent must be current credit union member; student must be in graduating class of 1997; and student must plan on attending an accredited college.

For complete information, call or visit Hingham Federal Credit Union, 19 Fort Hill St., Hingham, (617) 749-2026; 788 Country Way, No. Scituate, (617) 545-2344; or at either Hingham or Scituate High School branch.

Conservatory Arts-Integrated Preschool

South Shore Conservatory in Hingham and at the Ellison Center For The Arts in Duxbury, is currently accepting names for Fall '97 for their one, two, and three-day preschool programs.

The conservatory's arts-integrated preschool program is a unique educational experience, combining all aspects of traditional preschool programs with considerable exposure to music and the arts.

Under the direction of Carol Forbes Scheig, the program emphasizes "learning by doing," or hands-on experiencing. The preschool encourages individual growth and works toward building self confidence, independence and problem solving skills.

First Time Playschool is a one-day program for children three and older who have yet to attend nursery school but are ready to start making the transition from home to school. It is a two-hour program, combining arts-related activities with music.

The conservatory's two- and three-day preschool program provides freedom within structure, so that children may choose from a number of teacher initiated arts activities or developmentally appropriate learning activities. Each child works at their own pace.

For more information about South Shore Conservatory's Preschool Program, please call (617) 749-7565 (in Hingham) or (617) 934-2731 (in Duxbury).

Summer Arts at Derby

Registration is now open for "Summer Arts at Derby 1997" at Derby Academy in Hingham. "Summer Arts at Derby" is a comprehensive arts program for ages eight to 15, that offers classes in drama, music, visual arts, dance, writing, gymnastics, martial arts, photography, and sports. Students choose their own schedules for the five-week program. Dates are June 30 to Aug. 1; hours are 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday. The program culminates in an arts festival Friday, Aug. 1. For more information, call Thalia McMillion, director, at (617) 740-4766.

Annual Cohasset Spelling Bee March 5

A Call for Teams

The annual CEF Spelling Bee will be held in the Cohasset High School cafeteria Wednesday evening, March 5, from 7 to 9 p.m. Curt Collins, Cohasset's High School principal will be the moderator for the event.

The format will be round-robin, single elimination style. Every team will have a chance during each round until the field is narrowed to a grand prize winner. Teams will consist of three members. Team sponsorship is set at $150. All proceeds will go to the projects fund of the CEF. This competition is limited to adult team members. Refreshments will be provided by local business sponsors. This year we hope to have live cable TV coverage.

Last year's event was a raucous and freewheeling affair that was highlighted by costumes and a spontaneous audience. This year for added excitement, the Paris raffle winner will be drawn at the close of the bee. So bee prepared, get involved, buy some raffle tickets, support your team and help raise money for a great cause: Cohasset's school children. All contributions and fees are tax deductible. For all interested, the form below covers all the facts. Completed forms can be sent to Jack McCarthy at Cohasset Education Foundation, Box 224, Cohasset, MA 02025. Questions can be directed to Pam Speed at 383-2572 or the CEF Hotline 383-2833.

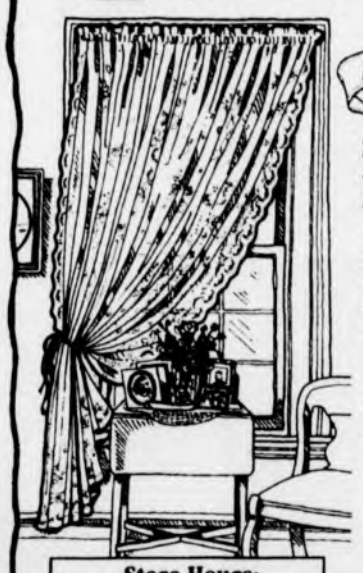
HOME SELLING QUIZ

QUESTION: Why does it make more sense to sell my home through a Realtor than on my own?



ANSWER: Do you have sufficient data to price your property realistically? Can you draw proper contracts, recognize insincere offers, inadequate deposits, unreasonable contingencies? Do you have expert knowledge of the current mortgage situation and secondary financing? Are you willing to have your family exposed to any stranger who knocks?

If your answer to any ONE of these questions is NO, then I suggest you drop into our office. You'll end up with the best possible price plus peace of mind.

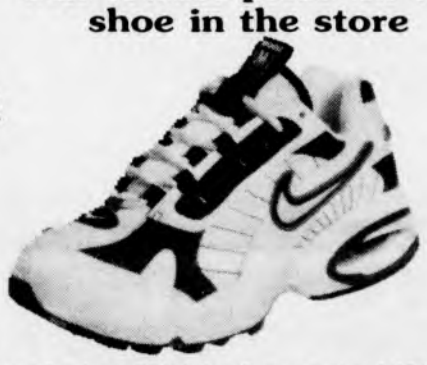
Cohasset's Early Homes — Part of Our Unique Heritage

By David H. Wadsworth
COHASSET MARINER

Cohasset's earliest homes were built shortly after the 1670 Land Division of the Conahasset Uplands. In that year, the vacant pastureland of Hingham's eastern part had been surveyed and parceled out to qualified Hingham property owners. Previously uninhabited land became the site of the first farms and homesteads for second-generation Hingham families.

Of the very first homes in Cohasset, today none remain extant. Clement Bates' small-house of about 1676 near Lily Pond has vanished, as has Cornelius Canterbury's. Of Daniel Lincoln's 1685 home near the "Plain," or Common, no trace remains, nor is there any remaining of Israel Nichols' near Strait's Pond — the one moved across the ice of Strait's Pond from Green Hill, Nantasket, in the 1690s. Likewise, John Jacob's first house near the meadow named for him has long since disappeared, as also have those of Aaron Pratt and Hezekiah Tower near Lily Pond. The old well of Hezekiah's father, Ibrook Tower, lies beneath a paved parking area near the junction of Sohier Street and old King Street, and the foundation stones of this home have long since been dispersed.

Cohasset houses dating from 1700 or earlier today number but two. The earliest extant, and best documented, is the one built by Joshua Bates in 1695 on South Main Street. From the same period, at least within a few years, is the Richard Tower House, originally located at the west side of the Common but moved to Elm Street in the mid-1800s. Both of these early dwellings are Cape Cod Cottages, a low and compact style that evolved early in areas often buffeted by severe ocean storms. By the second decade of the 1700s, larger and more elaborate homes were being constructed in the Georgian style, perhaps inspired by the numerous architectural plan books of the day.



Thomas James' 1704 farmhouse "near the brook" may have been the first substantial structure at the site of today's village center. That early farmhouse remains as a part of the large inn first operated on the stagecoach line by Thomas' grandson Christopher. In 1712, Hezekiah Lincoln Jr. built a home on the highway leading from Hingham to Scituate west of the Common, just across the street from today's Little League baseball field. In the following year, Joseph Bates constructed a Georgian mansion house at the north end of the Common, where Deer Hill Land (today's Sohier Street) joined that early highway. Within the next 15 years, homesteads were seen along the several original highways in Conahasset, from Israel Nichols' on the north to Rev. Nehemiah Hobart's 1722 house at the Common, to those lining King Street, and Prince Joy's house near the distant part of the road leading to the Beech Woods.

Conahasset's earliest highways were those planned by Lieut. Joshua Fisher in the survey of the uplands made in 1670, plus several preexisting cart paths that became traveled ways. Fisher's proposed highways included today's King Street, intended to be the main thoroughfare, and today's Sohier, Pond and the east part of Beechwood Street, called "Wood Street."

Conahasset's earliest highways were those planned by Lieut. Joshua Fisher in the survey of the uplands made in 1670, plus several preexisting cart paths that became traveled ways. Fisher's proposed highways included today's King Street, intended to be the main thoroughfare, and today's Sohier, Pond and the east part of Beechwood Street, called "Wood Street." These highways linked together the farms and homesteads of Conahasset, and led to the Paris and Precinct Meetinghouse at the Common. Before 1730, Joshua Burr, Samuel Cushing, John Burbank and Thomas James Jr. had built houses on King Street; Elisha Lincoln midway at Deer Hill Lane, Capt. John Jacob near Jacob's Meadow and John Stephenson and Samuel Orcutt on South Main Street near the beginning of Wood Street. With the exception of the house built by Cushing, all these early homes still exist.

By the mid-1700s, a number of newer connecting roads of the town had become populated with the same types of sturdy, functional but aesthetically pleasing houses, as could be found on the earlier ways. The strong post and beam frames of these early homes were destined to last for centuries, barring accident or purposeful destruction. The earliest homes of Cohasset form a unique and valuable part of the historical heritage of our town. They deserve our continued efforts to preserve them.

Keep Well Clinics Slated

The Social Service League of Cohasset and the Board of Health will hold two Adult Keep Well clinics this month, Tuesday, Feb. 11, at 11 a.m. at the Senior Luncheon at the Cohasset Community Center, 3 North Main St., and Friday, Feb. 28, 10 a.m. to noon, at Harborview Senior Housing, 60 Elm St.

Both clinics are free of charge to all Cohasset residents. No appointments are necessary. For more information, call the Social Service League office at 383-0771 or 383-0821, Monday to Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Exploring the Local UU Tradition

During early February, Unitarian Universalists and others of whatever outlook, belief or background, will have opportunities for enlightenment about how this free and inclusive movement, which planted early roots in New England and in Cohasset, came to be. This Sunday, Feb. 9, the Rev. Jenny Rankin, interim minister at First Parish, will preach on "The Origins of Unitarianism." Music by the senior choir, under the direction of Carolyn Curtis, will include Barnby's "Holy Lord," first performed in 1892 on the 50th anniversary of Rev. Joseph Osgood's ministry at First Parish. Sunday, Feb. 23, the Rev. Jenny Rankin's sermon topic will be "The Origins of Universalism." Services commence at 10:30 a.m. in the meeting house on Cohasset Common.

Child care is available in the parish house across the street. After the worship services, members and visitors are invited for refreshments and fellowship in the parish house.

Folk Music at Old Ship

Coffee House Off the Square presents Steve Schuch, guitar, fiddle and singer; and Scott Alarik, folksinger and songwriter, Saturday, Feb. 15, from 8 to 10:30 p.m., at Old Ship Parish Hall, 107 Main St., Hingham.

Tickets are $10 at the door, to benefit Central-American Medical Relief.

There also will be open microphone and refreshments.

Artist Call for Entries

The South Shore Art Center has announced a Call for Entries for the Annual "Black, White and Shades of Gray," the All New England Black and White Juried Show. Entries will be received Saturday, Feb. 8, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Tuesday, Feb. 11, from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. in the gallery at 119 Ripley Rd., Cohasset. The exhibition is open to all media in black and white and will run from Feb. 21 to March 29.

Work must be original and not previously exhibited at the South Shore Art Center or its June Festival on the Common. Artwork must be securely framed and wired, ready for hanging. Sculpture and 3-D entries must be accompanied by their own pedestal. No clamped glass will be accepted. Please bring your artist's resume or statement, neatly typed or printed and ready to insert into a biographical notebook that will be part of the accepted work at the exhibit. For further information call the center at (617) 383-ARTS (2787).

Winter Wildlife Camp Offered

The New England Wildlife Center is holding a four-day winter vacation camp entitled "To Fly," Feb. 18-21, for children ages 7 to 12. The camp, which will be held at the center in Bare Cove Park, focuses on all aspects of flying. Students will hold and fly hawks and owls and other birds, examine feathers and insect wings under a high-powered microscope, learn how to make the best paper airplanes and set off model rockets. Students will also visit Harvard University's Museum of Comparative Zoology to examine flying dinosaur and bird skeletons. Participants will also visit the Norwood Community Airport, where they will examine airplanes up close and see how airfoils work.

The cost of the camp is $50 and includes transportation, admissions and supplies. To register, please call the center at 749-1248 and speak to Elaine Mahoney or Greg Merts.

New Musicians Are Welcome

The Hingham Civic Orchestra rehearses every Tuesday evening from 7:30 to 9:45 p.m. in the music room of the Hingham Middle School, Main St., Hingham. New musicians welcome. For information, call 925-1311.

Help With Health Insurance

Do you need information on health insurance? Come to a SHINE.

(Serving Health Information Needs of the Elderly) counselor. It's free and confidential. Health benefits for older persons can be very puzzling. Information on the various health insurances, Medicare, Medigap, S.S.I. and HMOs can be very confusing and are constantly subject to change.

There is a solution! SHINE counselors are available to help. SHINE is a program developed, funded and managed by the Executive Office of Elder Affairs at the state level and administered through local Councils on Aging. They provide a network of volunteer health benefit counselors. These volunteers are happy to review present coverage, help process claims, inform you of your rights, and refer you to appropriate agencies.

If you need assistance in understanding your health insurance needs, call the SHINE counselor at the Cohasset Senior Center for an appointment. The phone is 383-9112.

J.L. Sparks Hoopsters Over Abington

Williams' Offense Does the Trick

SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Skippers avenged one of their four losses of the season with a 61-54 home victory over Abington High. Led by J.L. Williams' 22 points, Cohasset posted the win despite playing without center Ryan Bishop.

Fittingly, Williams started the game by hitting a jump shot for his first score of the night. After the Green Wave put together an 8-0 run, Williams nailed a jumper and then stuck a pull-up jumper. Sophomore Raheem Shepard netted a free throw then banked a basket off the glass after making a steal. Burke Davis sank a free throw, but Abington still led by 10, 20-10. Paul-Michael Quintin hit a three pointer and Shepard stepped in for another steal and the easy layup. Williams tossed in his first three-point shot of the game to bring the Skippers within two points, 20-18. Davis proceeded to reel off three quick points with a free throw then another hoop. Quintin threw a vicious upfake then took it from the baseline for two more. Davis hit two free throws to tie the score 25-25 at the half.

Davis opened the second half with a three pointer, which was then matched by Pat Hurley. Hurley stuck a runner and Williams put home a layup. Quintin knocked down a three pointer and Cohasset led 38-30. Brian Kilroy ripped down an offensive rebound, muscled it back in for two. He drew the foul on the play and made the free throw. Quintin pumped in a pull-up jumper and Williams pulled a nifty reverse move that earned him a bucket. Davis' drive and layup, and Williams' pull-up jumper gave the home team a 49-43

Lady Hoopsters Show Hanover Different Side

By Joe Reardon
COHASSET MARINER

A team can be the most dangerous when it has absolutely nothing to lose.

When you've won only two games with two to play, there's really no reason to hold anything back from playing all-out basketball for as long as possible.

The Cohasset High girls basketball team battled second-place Hanover shot for shot through an entire half and trailed by just seven points.

But the Lady Indians' overall depth proved to be too much for the Lady Skippers in Tuesday's 71-42 South Shore League loss.

"We really played well," said Cohasset head coach Cori Hughes, "but we couldn't handle their pressure in the second half. Hanover's a bigger teams and they really pressed us."

The loss, however, was hardly a disappointment for Hughes and her young squad. Cohasset played its most physical game of the season against a tournament-bound team known for its physical play. The Lady Skippers weren't intimidated by Hanover the way they were in the first meeting of the two teams and it showed.

"They played tough the whole game," Hughes said. "This was a big turning point for us. Hanover did become frustrated. They're physical, but we were physical right back."

Cohasset appeared to gain confidence against the Lady Indians through the opening half. The Lady Skippers' defense played particularly well with several players picking up key steals and holding their opponents in check.

Catie Campbell, who led Cohasset with 14 points, was equally effective, defensively. Campbell held Hanover's top scorer, Jessica Sylvia, to just four first-half points. Sylvia's size began to wear Campbell down in the second, but she did the job in limiting her to 14 overall points.

Campbell, who Hughes considers to be the heart and soul of the team, showed just how important she is to the Lady Skippers' success. She missed five games because of sickness and Cohasset suffered

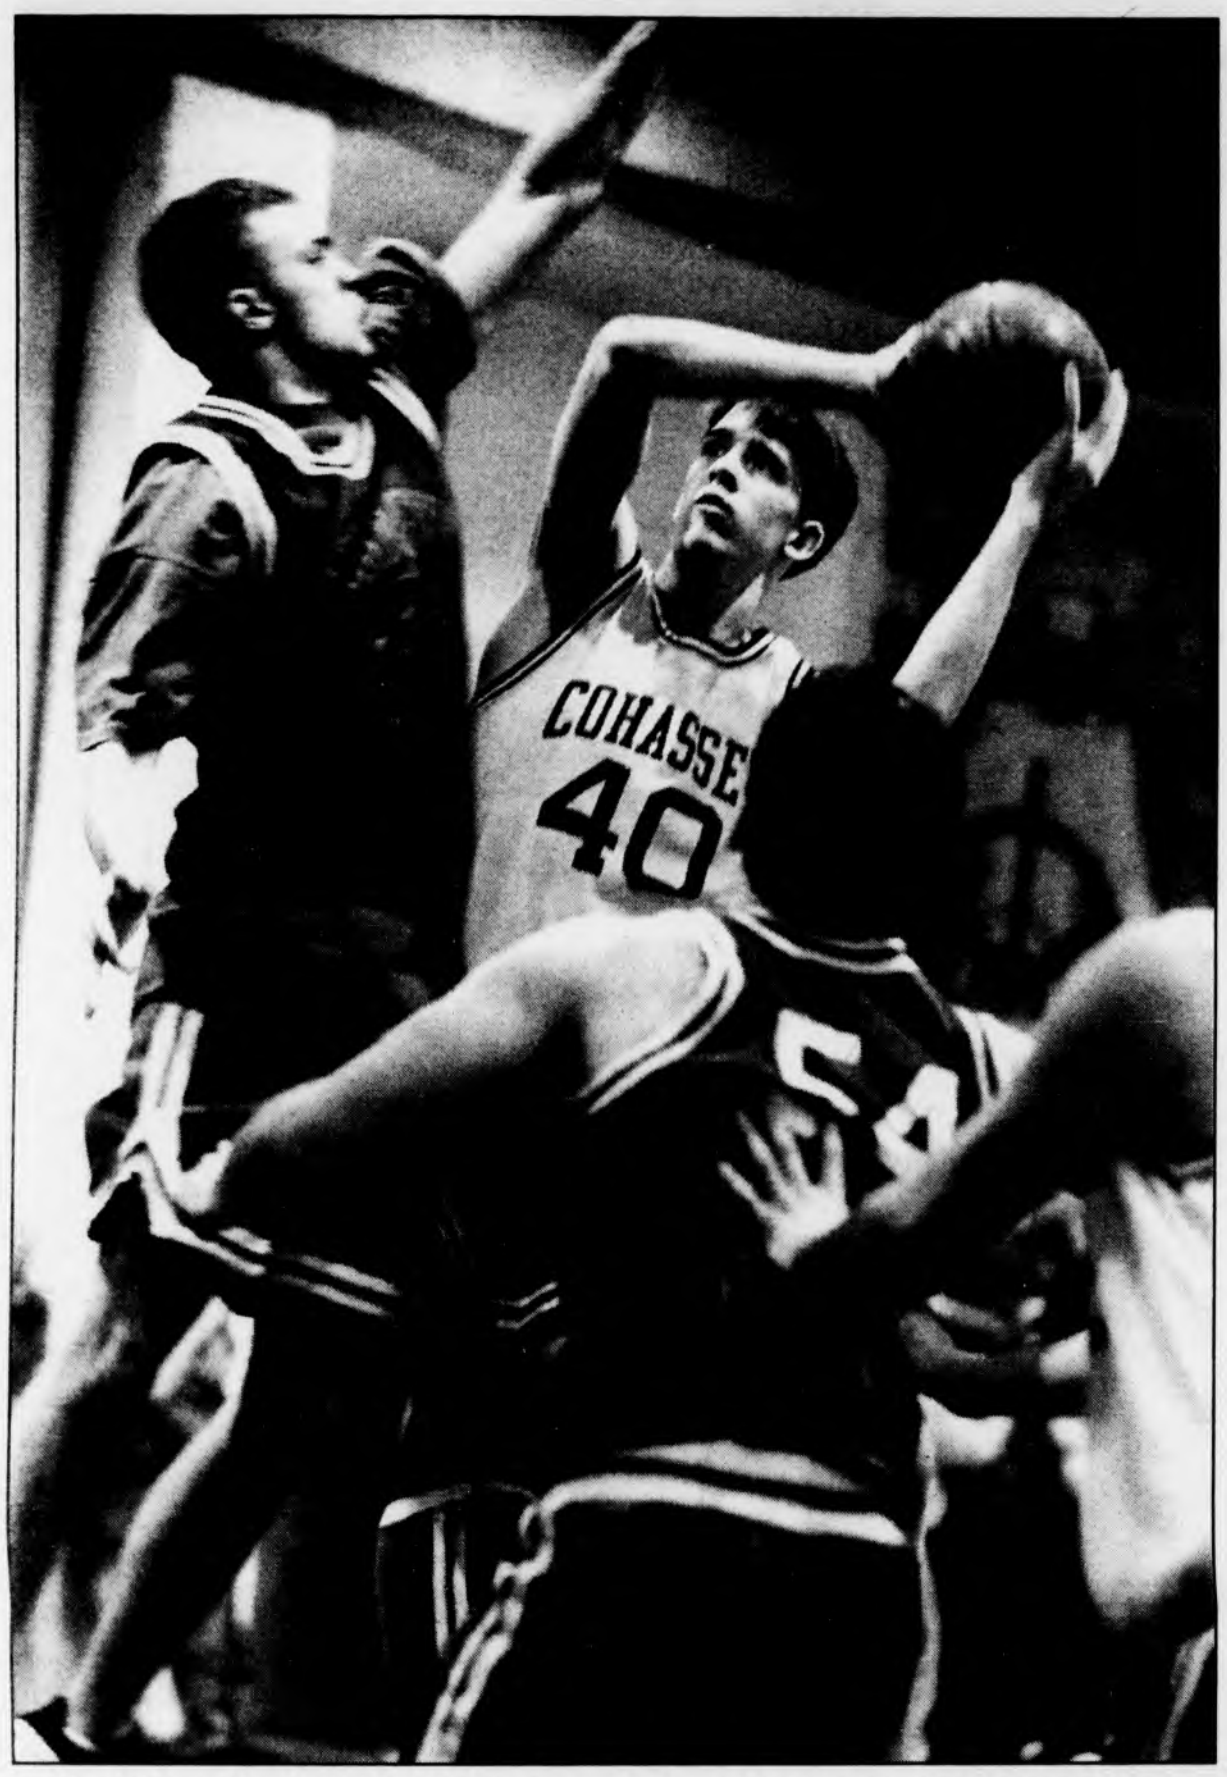
Expert Tells Parents, Coaches: Youth Sports Are For Kids

By Jim O'Sullivan
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Bob Bigelow, former NBA player, father of two and youth sports expert, addressed the parents of Cohasset last Tuesday night. In an event sponsored by the Cohasset Parent School Organization, Bigelow discussed the issue of "putting the youth back in youth sports" for nearly four hours with an audience of 200 parents.

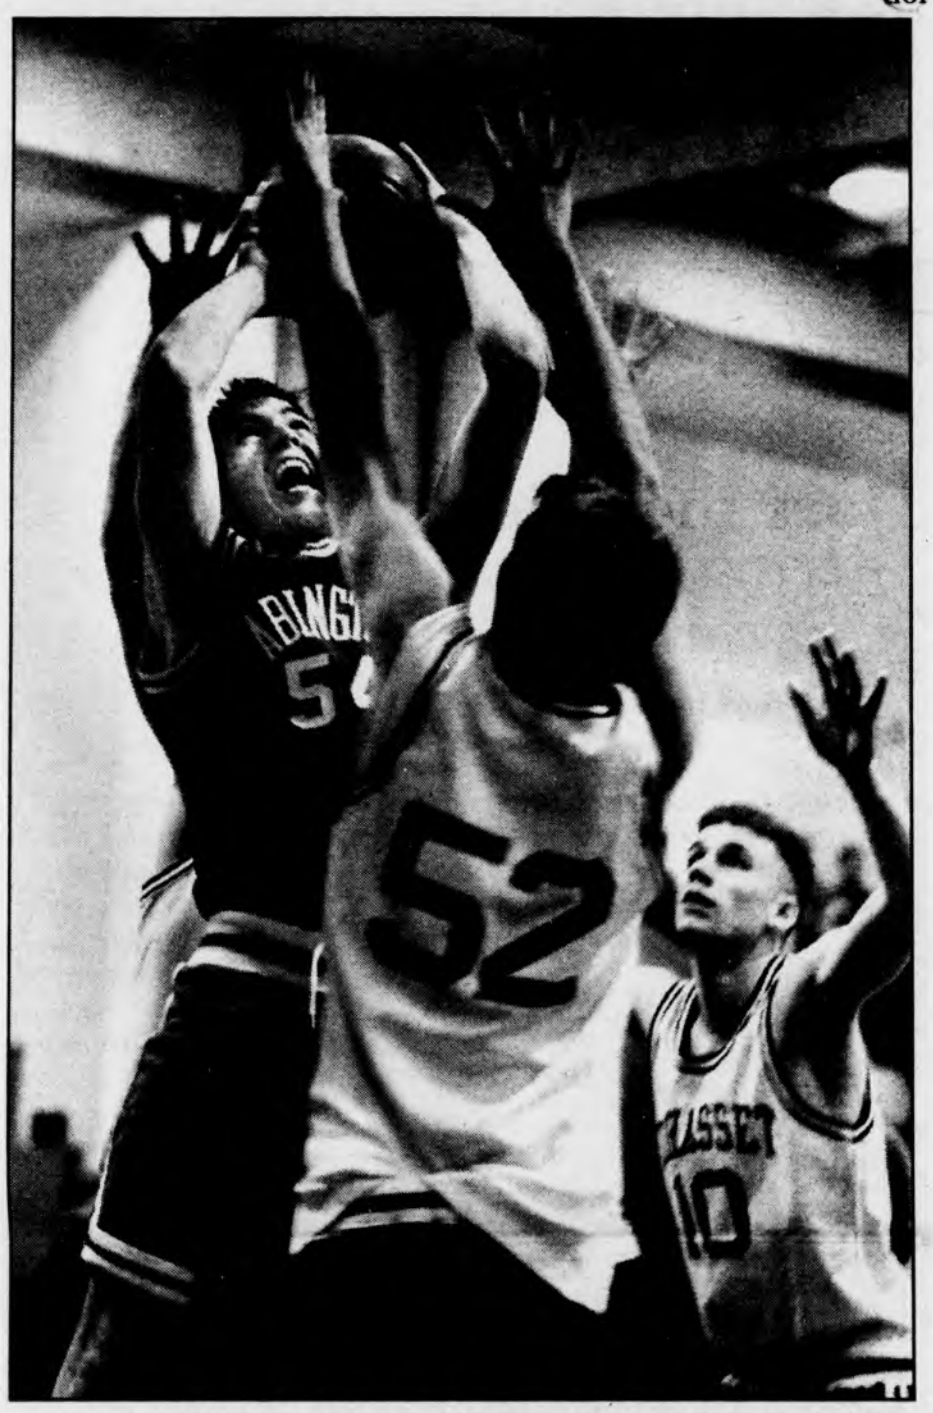
Bigelow's message was about restructuring youth sports organizations around the children instead of the parents. Armed with loads of statistics and a few wisecracks, Bigelow promised to "slay a few sacred cows," and did. He compared youth sports 30 years ago with those of today. He pointed to his son, David, as an example. When David reaches freshman year in high school, Bigelow estimates 95 percent of the sports he has played will have been organized. That estimation is in sharp contrast to Bigelow's sporting experience until that point, which he estimates had been 99 percent organized. While conceding that organized sports do indeed have their strong points, Bigelow fingered traveling "all-star" teams, playoffs and overzealous coaches and parents as detractors.

In an unscientific poll of 40 to 50 Massachusetts elementary school physical education teachers, Bigelow found that not one suggested that traveling "all-star" teams should start before the players reach 12 or 13 years old.



Then, Bigelow talked of these "all-star" teams, comprised of 10, 8 and even 6 year olds. When the idea of traveling soccer started about 15 years ago, these traveling squads were for 12 and 14 year olds.

"If this keeps up," Bigelow said, "within 10 years we'll have pre-natal traveling soccer."



The former first-round draft pick cited evidence which proved that a child's future athletic ability could not be measured until after puberty, sometimes even later. He used Michael Jordan and Scottie Pippen as examples.

Does the Trick

lead and Cohasset began to pull away.

Williams' hard work under the boards paid off as he got the putback and later hit a foul shot. Quintin's three pointer proved to be the winning bucket, though Williams put it safely out of reach by making all four of his free throws in the closing minute.

The Skippers also squeezed past an overachieving Scituate team, 53-52. In their second meeting of the season, the two teams staged a near carbon copy performance of the first game. Quintin headed the Skippers with 23 points, including 15 from three-point land.

Bishop put Cohasset on the board with a layup after the Sailors jumped out to a 7-0 lead. Quintin followed with a three pointer and Williams' yeoman service underneath the offensive boards finally earned him a basket. Quintin popped in another three, embarking on a run in which he would outscore the entire Scituate team, 13-2.

Two layups and a pair of three pointers later, Quintin staked the Skippers to a 20-11 lead. Brian Kilroy took a pass from Bishop and hit the eight-foot jumper. Bishop's block set up Davis' layup on the other end and Davis duplicated his efforts on the next possession. Quintin closed out the Skippers' first-half of scoring with a three pointer and Cohasset headed to the visitors' locker room clutching a 29-19 edge.

Davis opened the second frame with a three and then fed Jamie Buick, a junior forward, for two points. Bishop tossed in a layup and Cohasset's crisp ball movement around the perimeter resulted in a Williams bucket. Davis' length-of-the-court pass set up Quintin for the easy layup. Davis' passing put the ball into Williams' hands again, and the senior forward put it through hoop. Bishop dished to Hurley for a pair and then knocked down a pair of free throws, giving Cohasset a 10-point lead, 46-36.

Quintin's upfake helped him score and he then pulled up and punched in a jumper. Scituate, though, wouldn't die and came back. A technical foul after a backboard tap sent Davis to the foul line, where he proceeded to calmly sink three shots. They proved to be the winning points as Quintin's defense was tight enough to stop a last-second Scituate effort and secure the win.

Cohasset plays at Hull on Friday and hosts Carver on Monday.

Grapplers Outlast Hingham as Record Grows Closer

By Joe Reardon
COHASSET MARINER

They were two contrasting wrestling meets. In the first, Cohasset High was able to coast to a business-as-usual 44-18 victory over Hanover. But Skipper head coach Torin Sweeney used some of his wrestling prowess to lead Cohasset to a 42-30 win over Hingham.

The victory ran the Skippers' overall record to 12-3 on the season with a Saturday meet against Rockland next on the agenda.

Cohasset looked to be in trouble early against a tough Hingham team last Saturday as the Harbormen ran out to a quick 18-0 lead. Sweeney then moved Sophomores Mike Baird and Ben Littauer to different weight classes and hoped for the best.

The strategy paid off. Baird improved his season record to 11-6 with a win and Littauer pinned his opponent, running his mark to 16-6.

"He's getting to be a kid who can cover two weights," said Sweeney of the much-improved Littauer.

Cohasset gained momentum from the move and began to close in on the Harbormen. Kevin Duffy, who is closing in on his 100th career win, wrestled at 135 pounds and took a 19-10 decision. The win was Duffy's 24th of the season against one loss. Doug Sheerin (140) battled his way to a 10-6 win in a tough weight class, bring his individual record to .500 (11-11).

Cohasset forfeited the 145-pound match, but Mike Rossi (152) and Justin Golden (162) registered consecutive pins to cut Hingham's lead to four, 28-24.

Justin Buckley improved his mark to 21-2 by winning on a technical at 171 pounds and Adam Sasso won what Sweeney called the "pivotal match" with a pin at 189 pounds in the second period. Sasso's win gave the Skippers a 39-30 lead to clinch the win. J.P. Laugelle won a 9-2 decision at 215 pounds to finish out the meet.

"I couldn't be happier," Sweeney said. "The fact we could beat Hingham without (Jordan) Fiore was a big plus. It's hard to make up for a kid who you know is going to win."

Fiore, the squad's dependable 130-pound grappler, has been battling a shoulder injury for most of the season. He recently learned it won't be healed in time for the Feb. 15 South Sectional meet at Carver.

An undermanned Hanover squad was no match for Cohasset's horses as Littauer (125), Rossi (145) and Luke Caldwell (152) all took pin victories. Duffy beat previously undefeated Scott Pettit, 15-7, for a huge win in the 135-pound division.

Sweeney is looking for his squad to continue building on its victories and peak at the All-State meet. Cohasset also has the chance to break its all-time mark of 12 wins, set in 1992. The squad has never won 13, but has an excellent chance at establishing the new standard this winter, either on Saturday or Monday night when Cohasset goes up against Duxbury at home.

through their five worst contests of the season. Campbell showed no signs of her illness as she put up the scoring numbers and played solid defense.

"She just refuses to give up," Hughes said of Campbell.

Freshman Alex DeRosa, the team's leading scorer with a 12-point average, equaled that amount with 12 for the game, while sophomore Caitlin O'Neil started her first varsity game and contributed in the paint with nine rebounds. Junior center Whitney Cook showed she wasn't afraid to battle the Lady Indians on defense, coming down with seven rebounds of her own.

Sophomore Megan Connolly only played for a half, but she made the most of her time on the court with four rebounds and a pair of steals.

As pleased as Hughes was with the Lady Skippers' effort against Hanover, she was realistic enough to know that the Lady Indians' lineup was far too deep to expect Cohasset to pull out an upset victory.

Hughes has seen the improvement in her squad since the beginning of the season and believes the aggressiveness in which the Lady Skippers went at Hanover did affect the team's game plan.

Hughes wants to see the same type of physical play from Cohasset in the two remaining games against Hull and Carver, but has pinpointed areas where the team must improve. The Lady Skippers have to cut down on their turnovers and learn to use what height they have effectively under the basket.

"I knew we were going to take our lumps this year," said Hughes, who has just two seniors on the team. "We have a goal of reaching .500 and qualifying for the tournament next year. There are some really good sophomores and a few more on this year's JV team."

With the experience the young players have gotten this season, the Lady Skippers just may be the up-and-coming SSL squad next winter. They'll be easy to find with their physical play and go-for-broke abandon on the court.

Expert Tells Parents

Jordan was cut from his varsity team as a sophomore, but six years later, not only led North Carolina to a national championship, but embarked on a hall of fame career with the Chicago Bulls.

Pippen was recruited by the University of Central Arkansas as team manager. By his senior year he was 6' 7" and also on his way to a career which will eventually land him in the hall of fame. The Chicago White Sox' Jason Bere was the third-best pitcher on Wilmington High School's baseball team, went to Middlesex Community College, where he grew three inches and added 30 pounds.

"The best athletes are late athletic bloomers," Bigelow said. "The best youth athletes are early athletic bloomers."

He warned that there was no such thing as a child prodigy in sports. Instead of calling one child "better" than another, he has settled on the terms "least worst" and "less-than-least worst."

Bigelow also discussed the culprits of all that's wrong in youth sports.

"Youth sports' dirty dark secret is that it's run by frustrated men, trying to live their second childhood at the expense of their child's first," he said. "While this is a sweeping generalization, it does hold more than a grain of truth. As a veteran of approximately 35 to 40 seasons in youth sports, this reporter has seen a large number of coaches and parents whose sense of perspective has been warped beyond belief. It is far better, and more enjoyable, for everyone concerned, if the players and coaches all work for the same goal, to win. But also if they remember that having a good time is the reason they're there."

Bigelow did not come merely to criticize, however, he also had several suggestions for improving youth sports. In his fantasy, Bigelow would be America's Czar of Youth Sports and his first two acts would be to "first eliminate all traveling teams until the seventh grade, then make a rule that all coaches and parents, before going to a youth sports event, must volunteer at a Special Olympics sporting event.

"They have a wonderful motto. 'Let me try to win, but if I cannot, let me be brave in the attempt.' "

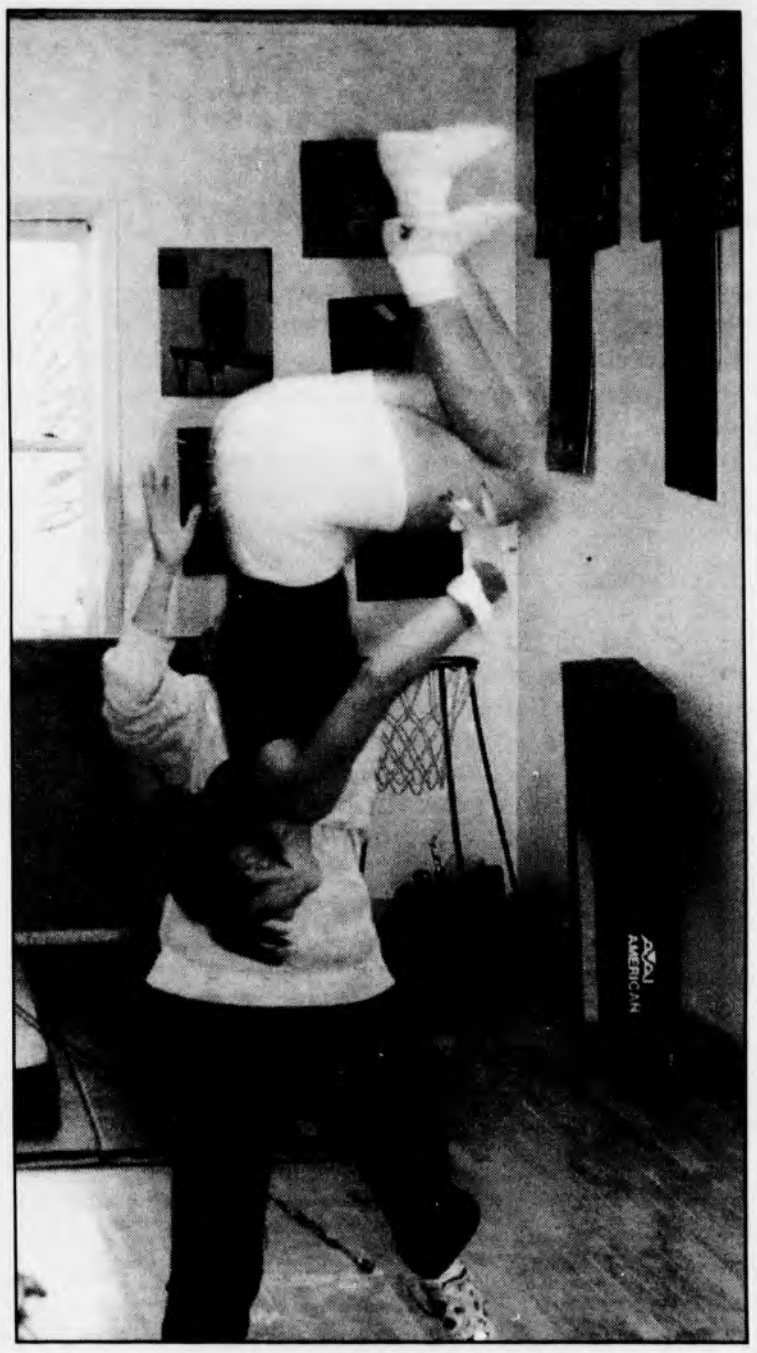
Bigelow suggested that, midway through each game, the coaches should switch teams. "That way," he said, "the competitive egos will still be stroked. You can't lose. You'll be .500."

Bigelow also recommended that all adults play their own games before coming to their kids. This would help them recognize the children's games for just that, children's games. He issued a challenge to all youth coaches.

"Recognize tangible athletic progress in your player and reward it," Bigelow said. "Identify at least one good thing in every kid you coach. If you really want to become a great youth coach, watch recess. This is how kids play. It's pure, unfettered play. It's how they learn how to play sports."

Bigelow advises coaches to, instead of providing structured games, "encourage the kids to play, then get lost." Supply the equipment, the playing space and the time and let the kids organize their own games. He also has invented "The Bob Bigelow Smile Index," a device which provides guidelines for youth coaches.

"If you're not smiling 90 percent of the game, then you don't belong there," he said. "Find a new coach."



Throughout his speech, Bigelow was met with nods of agreement and murmurs of approval. Afterwards, he opened it to a question and answer session and the Cohasset parents tried to apply his words to their programs. Cohasset soccer monarch and sixth-grade teacher Larry Shultz has lived in Cohasset for 30 years and supported Bigelow's ideas.

"I think he was right on the nose," Shultz said. "Too many adults in youth sports are doing it with the wrong intentions. They're much too focused on putting their kid into a Division 1 school, instead of letting the kids have fun."

Shultz also recommended that leagues do away with playoffs and trophies. "Coaches lose perspective when there is a championship on the line," he said.

Indeed, Cohasset's fall soccer league, with Shultz as its driving force, has eliminated playoffs from its structure.

Bigelow's words fell on a community with a great number of youth sports programs, with active kids, and enthusiastic, well-meaning parents. A few adjustments, toning down the acts of coaches, eliminating playoffs, and "all-star" teams, could help turn a good sports community into a great one.

Sale at Consignment Shop

If your New Year's resolutions included saving money and volunteering for good causes, then plan to attend the famous annual sale of the Social Service League's Cohasset Consignment Shop, Saturday, Feb. 8. The shop is open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily.

The many treasures that will be offered at half price or less are designer dresses, sweaters, colorful vests, including a brown fox run suede vest. Other special values include a beige poplin opossum-lined coat, as well as cloth and fur coats. Shoppers will even find computers, computer stands, ice skates, champagne coolers, ice buckets and choice jewelry for your favorite valentine. Don't miss the children's and men's bargains.

Manager Andy Merrill said the shop will be closed Friday, Feb. 7 to prepare for the sale, and urged both men and women to volunteer.

The South Shore Social Service League provides money for Meals on Wheels, get-well clinics, and counseling for the towns of Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Scituate and Cohasset.

Lois Griffel recently demonstrated painting from life at The Artist's Son Gallery, 130 King St., Route 3A. Patrons were invited to meet the artist and see how she works. The day was capped off with a wine and cheese reception.

For inexpensive travel, don't discount consolidators

Edited by Amy K. Barrett
WORTH MAGAZINE

Have you ever wanted to take a spontaneous vacation — call your travel agent a few days before departure and go where the spirit moves you?

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

That's typically a pricey way to travel. Most major airlines require that you book tickets some 14 to 21 days ahead of time to qualify for their cheaper advanced-purchase fares. But last-minute travel doesn't have to be more expensive — it sometimes can be cheaper — if you buy your tickets from consolidators.

Who are they? The companies that plaster ads on lampposts in major cities or newspapers that read 24 HR. DISCOUNT AIRFARES and that offer to fly you from, say, the East Coast to Paris round-trip for $479. You may have bypassed these ads because they never name the airline willing to fly you for discount prices. But the semi-secret world of consolidators is not a consumer hornswoggle.

Consolidators offer inexpensive fares because they buy blocks of seats ahead of time from major airlines such as TWA, United, Delta, Northwest, USAir, British Airways, Virgin Atlantic, and others whose sales records show there will be a lot of unsold tickets on particular flights. Consolidators may have contracts with carriers that allow them to buy tickets that carry generous commissions — as high as 40 percent instead of the customary 10 to 12 percent. Or the airlines may sell tickets to consolidators at a fixed fare that is below the retail price. Consolidators also offer unsold tickets on low-cost charter flights. These types of deals help them sell tickets below their retail prices a week or so before the flight.

The reason you don't see "TWA" or "USAir" on the consolidators' ads is because the airlines don't allow it. They don't want to upset the passengers who have paid twice as much for a last-minute ticket bought directly from them. Because consolidators take a gamble by buying unsold seats, you can save $100 to $199 per ticket on domestic and Europe travel and $400 or more on trips to Asia, according to prices cited in "Consumer Reports Travel Letter." These discounts, however, are not set in stone because ticket prices vary all the time.

Other benefits of buying from a consolidator: They usually don't require advanced booking, and you often do not have to stay over a Saturday night or modify the length of your stay — many airlines, for example, insist on at least two days or no more than 21 days.

"Consolidators' restrictions tend to be less onerous than the airlines'," said Terence Mascarenhas, president of Up and Away Travel in New York, which has sold discounted fares for about 13 years. "A maximum stay can be 21 days on an airline versus 90 days with a consolidator. Where (airlines) may make the ticket totally non-refundable, a consolidator returns money with penalty fee taken out of it."

A consolidator may take out $200 on a canceled ticket to Africa, he said, and return the rest.

Still, consolidators have their limitations. For example, if you want a discounted ticket for a trip from Albuquerque to Alabama, you'll have a tough time. Consolidators primarily sell tickets for flights overseas or for coast-to-coast travel within the United States. The reason: U.S. airlines already hatchet down their prices enough to make it hard for consolidators to offer anything cheaper — and make money. And these bottom-fishing renegades offer mainly coach seats, although some sell first- or business-class seating for a 20 percent discount below the full fare.

Other caveats: Make sure the consolidator you buy from is legitimate — that is, accredited by the airlines. It's easy to check. If you buy your ticket from a travel agent who deals with consolidators, you're in the clear. Always use a credit card, and verify your ticket with the airline as soon as possible. Also, make sure the initials in the status box on your ticket are OK or KK.

Some consolidators, like Up and Away (800-275-8001) and Washington, D.C.-based Euram Flight Centre (800-848-6789), sell directly to the public, while others sell only through travel agents, who, of course, will tack on a few dollars to the price of the ticket for their services.

And it's important to stress that consolidator tickets work best for the last-minute traveler. If you know your itinerary months ahead of time, you may pay no more for an airline's advanced-purchase ticket than for a consolidator's short-notice ticket. So do your research.

Last-minute travel doesn't have to be more expensive — it sometimes can be cheaper — if you buy your tickets from consolidators.

For more information about the consolidator industry, buy Kelly Monaghan's "Consolidators: Air Travel's Bargain Basement." It sells for $8.95 at travel bookstores, or call the Intrepid Traveler (800-356-9315).

And if you want to keep up to date on discount fares, subscribe to Jax Fax, a monthly travel-marketing magazine that lists thousands of flights around the world (The prices quoted for the tickets are what the travel agents pay, so you are going to have to pay a little more.). A one-year subscription is a mere $15 by calling 800-952-9329. Then relax and enjoy the fruits of your bargain hunting.

The Spousal IRA. For the single-income family that wants a dual-income retirement.

This chart shows the value after 10, 20 and 30 years of $2,250 or $4,000 in combined annual contributions to a married couple's regular and spousal IRAs with a hypothetical 8% average annual rate of return, and earnings reinvested. It does not reflect the effect of taxes or a possible 10% penalty for early withdrawals. Not intended to represent the actual performance of any Fidelity product.

You've made the decision to live on one income now. You shouldn't have to pay for it later. That's the idea behind the increased contribution limit for the Spousal IRA. Effective for the 1997 tax year, single-income couples may increase their combined maximum annual IRA contributions by 78%, from the previous limit of $2,250 to $4,000. To take advantage of this change in law, just call Fidelity.

MARINER'S GALLEY

Indulgences From the Heart

By Carole B. Carroll

Valentine's Day is but a heartbeat away. February 14th, a day to indulge your heart's desire. Mr. Webster defines the word indulge as "to allow oneself a special pleasure." The recipes that follow are special pleasures indeed. There exists a natural affinity between the taste sensations of chocolate and raspberry…the perfect marriage of seductive flavors. Treat yourself to something wonderful and make your heart smile!

CHOCOLATE GLAZED MINIATURE CHOCOLATE CAKES with RASPBERRY CREAM

YIELD: 24 Cakes

Miniature Chocolate Cakes

3 oz. best quality bittersweet chocolate (not unsweetened), chopped
6 Tbsp. unsalted butter, cut into pieces
2/3 cup sugar
1/2 tsp. pure vanilla extract
1/3 cup flour
1/4 tsp. salt
3 large eggs
1/2 cup miniature semisweet chocolate chips

Preheat oven to 375 degrees and generously butter 24 miniature muffin tins. In double boiler over simmering, not boiling, water melt butter and chocolate. Whisk until smooth. Remove from heat and using a rubber spatula scrape chocolate mixture into a large mixing bowl. Whisk sugar and vanilla into chocolate; add flour and salt. Mix until just combined. Add eggs 1 at a time, mixing well after each addition. Fill each tin about 3/4 full with batter and sprinkle each with 1 tsp. of miniature chocolate chips. Bake cakes in middle of oven for 12-15 minutes (tester need not come out clean — some crumbs should stick). Turn cakes out onto cooling rack.

Chocolate Glaze

1/2 cup unsweetened cocoa
1/2 cup light cream
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 cup unsalted butter (1/2 stick)
1/2 tsp. vanilla

In a saucepan over low heat stir together all the ingredients. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, for about 5 minutes, or until glaze is very shiny and thickened. Allow to cool slightly. Pour a small amount of glaze over each cake, covering top. Allow glaze to set before handling.

Raspberry Cream

1 cup heavy cream
2 Tbsp. seedless raspberry jam
2 Tbsp. sugar
1 Tbsp. Framboise (raspberry liqueur)
or Creme De Cassis (black currant liqueur)

In a chilled small bowl, beat the cream with the jam and sugar until soft peaks form. Add liqueur and beat a minute or two longer. Place a small dollop on the side of each cake.

Fresh raspberries for garnish.

From the annals of Gourmet magazine, three seductive flavors in one. For the ultimate indulgence, serve with chocolate raspberry sauce.

RASPBERRY CHEESECAKE BROWNIES

YIELD: 2 dozen

Brownie Batter

4 oz. best quality bittersweet chocolate, chopped
2 oz. unsweetened chocolate, chopped
1 stick (1/2 cup) unsalted butter
1 1/4 cups sugar
3 large eggs
1 1/2 tsp. vanilla
3/4 tsp. salt
3/4 cup flour

Preheat oven to 350 degrees and butter and flour a 13 x 9 inch baking pan. In a metal bowl set over a pan of barely simmering water melt chocolates with butter, stirring, and cool. Whisk in sugar and eggs, 1 at a time, then whisk in vanilla and salt. Whisk in flour until just combined and spread batter evenly in prepared pan.

Cheesecake topping

8 oz. cream cheese, softened
2/3 cup sugar
1 tsp. fresh lemon juice
1 large egg
1/2 tsp. vanilla
1/4 tsp. salt
2 Tbsp. flour

1 1/2 cups fresh raspberries
1 Tbsp. sugar

In a bowl using electric mixer, cream together cream cheese and sugar until light and fluffy. Beat in lemon juice, egg, vanilla, and salt. Beat in flour and spread mixture evenly over brownie batter. Scatter raspberries over cheesecake topping and sprinkle with sugar. Bake brownies in middle of oven 35-40 minutes or until top is puffed and pale golden. Cool brownies in pan set on wire rack. Chill brownies, covered, at least 6 hours or overnight. Serve at room temperature.

If serving this sauce with the raspberry cheesecake brownies, drizzle sauce in a zig-zag pattern, or better yet, in the shape of a heart on the bottom of a dessert plate. Place brownie on top of sauce and garnish with fresh raspberries.

AN EXCITING, THIGH BURNING, HEART POUNDING, CONSTANT TURNING DAY ON THE SLOPES BECOMES PERFECT
WHEN YOU SKI DIRECTLY TO YOUR ROOM AT NEW HAMPSHIRE'S ONLY SLOPESIDE HOTEL.

Slopeside. By our definition it means no driving, no walking, not even a shuttle bus. Slopeside means directly on the mountain so you can ski directly to your hotel. And after you kick your boots off we've got everything else you'll need too. Like a restaurant, lounge, a fitness center complete with an indoor pool and outdoor Jacuzzi and even a game room for the kids.

Slopeside. It's the best way to go skiing. And we've got the best and the only slopeside hotel in the state.

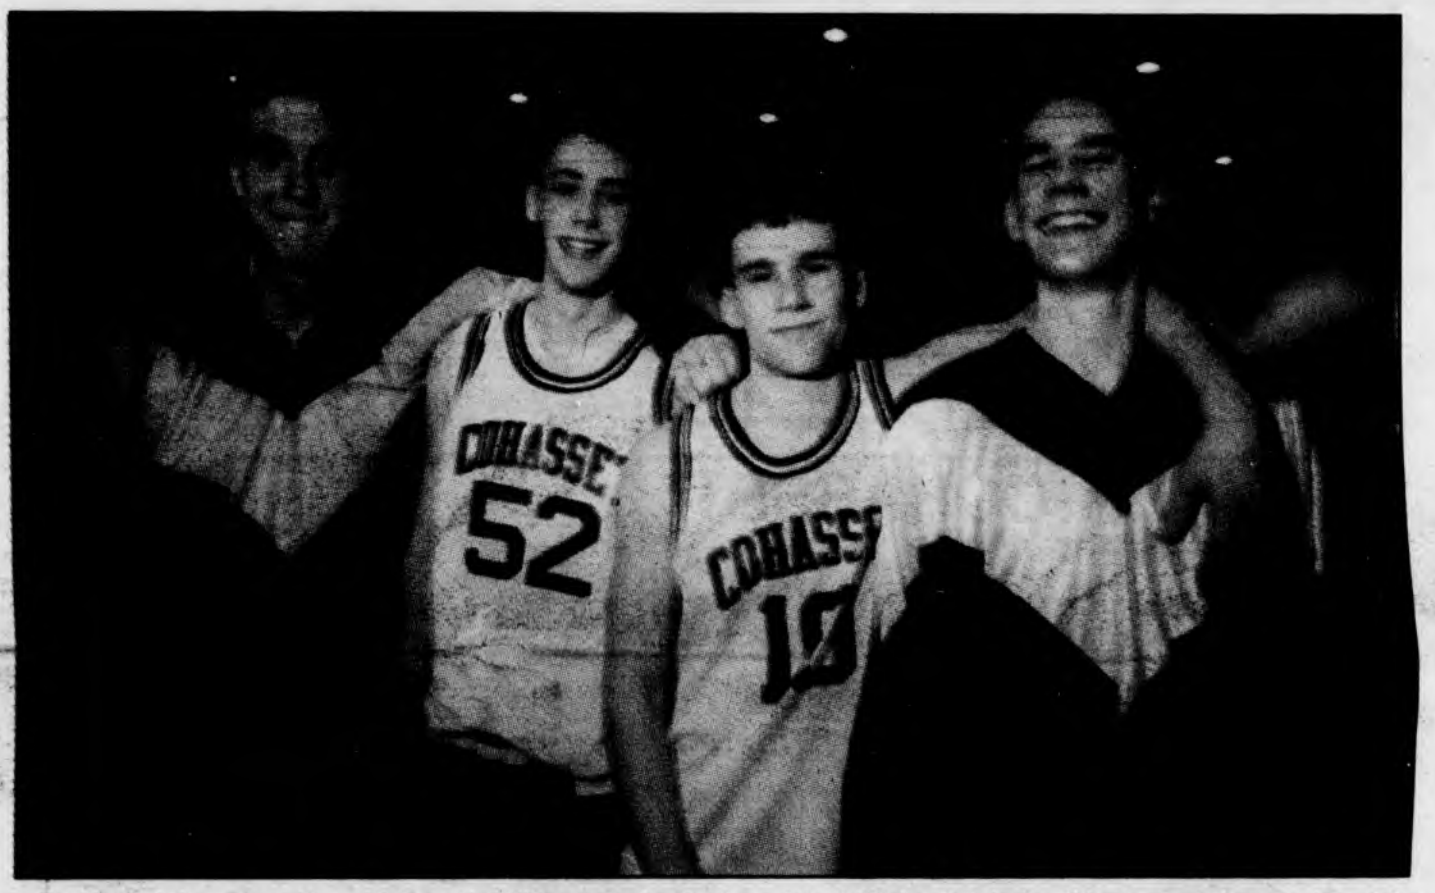
Residents Complain of High Cost and Red Tape

Septic Plan Not Flushed With Success

By David Tibbetts
COHASSETT MARINER



The health board's latest draft of an on-site waste water management plan was met with a mixture of skepticism and curiosity by a small group of residents who attended a workshop on Tuesday. Only about 10 people braved icy road conditions to attend the latest working session.

Members of the health board unveiled detailed cost estimates of a 12-year management plan that would also create a $12.2 million revolving loan fund for homeowners with failing septic systems.

The town is under a court order to address failing septic systems and sewer problems. Town officials knew that whatever plan they proposed would be controversial. They got a taste of that controversy at the workshop.

The proposed management plan would cost $405,125 per year to operate. Each of the 1,500 homes with a septic system would pay an annual fee of $270, which would cover mandatory annual function inspections, pumping costs, the

He was lacing up his high-tops in the small, visitors' locker room, deep in the catacombs of the old building. The simple wooden lockers bore no resemblance to the slick, metal lockers of modern arenas. The facilities were straight out of the dark ages.

But for Cohasset High basketball player Ryan Bishop, playing in the Boston Garden for the Division 3 EMass title, two years ago, was an experience he'll not soon forget.

Historic Renovations Near Completion

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

The future of the Red Lion Inn looked bleak when the historic building was sold at auction for $300,000 in January, 1996. The new owner, Carl Akerblom of Fort Lauderdale, Florida, promised no changes to the business. But then the front door was locked last fall, restaurant hours were reduced, and access was restricted through the pub. Residents began to worry that the inn would close forever.

Michael Anderson, general manager of the inn, wants to allay residents' fears.

"This building has been here for almost 300 years and we hope it stays open for another 300 years," Anderson said. "Business dropped of after the summer so we cut back our hours. But we've been doing a lot of work over the winter to build it up."

Anderson has worked for Akerblom for ten years doing maintenance and carpentry work. Last June Akerblom

Chittick, Carroll Won't Seek Re-election

School committee member JoAnn Chittick and recreation commissioner Ted Carroll both announced this week that they will not be candidates for re-election to their respective boards.

Chittick said after more than 20 years of working for the schools as a volunteer and elected school committee member it was time for her to turn to other personal and professional pursuits.

Carroll said between his jobs at the South Shore Sports Center and Hingham Recreation Department, continuing to hold elected office proved to be "too much to juggle."

Taking out papers this week were Joseph P. McElroy, 59 Windy Hill, for school committee; Raimund G. Vanderweil, Jr., 500 Jerusalem Rd. for reelection to the board of sewer commissioners; Alfred S. Moore,Jr. 101 Fair Oaks Lane, for reelection to the planning board; Anne C. Bowdoin, 131 Nichols Rd., for reelection to the board of library trustees; Michael C. Patrolia, 15 Cushing Rd., for reelection to the board of assessors; and Mary K. Muncey, 377 S. Main St., for reelection to the recreation commission.

Nomination papers for the May 3 Annual Town Election are available at the town clerk's office and must be turned in by March 17.

The following positions will be available: Selectmen — one for three years; School Committee — two for three years; Trustee Paul Pratt Memorial Library — three for three years; Assessor one for three years; Board of Health — one for three years; Cohasset Housing Authority — one for five years; Planning Board - one for five years; Recreation Commission — three for five years; Sewer Commission — one for three years; and Water Commission — one for three years.

Wednesday, March 19, is the last day to register for the Annual Town Meeting and Annual Town Election. Registration forms are available at the Town Clerk's Office, the Cohasset Post Office and the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. This form may be mailed or hand-delivered to the clerk's office but must be received or postmarked on or before the deadline.

Public Forum on Lobster Lab Feb. 25

Educators, parents, grandparents, students, friends of students and concerned citizens are invited to a public information forum to discuss the proposed Learning Laboratory for Marine Biology and Genetic Research, to be held in the cafeteria of the Cohasset High School at 7:30 p.m. Feb. 25.

Questions raised by the selectmen and attendees will be addressed. The potential benefits of encouraging student interest in science and research, and the considerable impact that genetics will have on world food supply and on medical diagnosis and treatment, are strong arguments against letting the proposal expire. Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation therefore has voted to adopt and implement the Learning Lab project, which was conceived by Dr. Kevin Ulmer, a scientist well versed in genetics and biology. It is proposed to lease the former Cohasset Colonials showroom on Parker Avenue (the Hagerty Building) from the town at $1 per year on a 10 year renewable lease. Cost of establishing and operating the lab would be borne by donations and grants from educational and scientific foundations, not from town revenues.

Another forum will be provided at the same place on March 5, so that voters should be well prepared to vote on issuing a Request for Proposal (RFP) to lease the building at the Special Town Meeting March 29.

For further information, call R.M. Campbell at 383-1379.

Town Census Mailed

The Town Census for 1997 has been mailed to all Cohasset households, the town clerk said this week.

The local census is primarily used to maintain voting and jury lists but it is also used for school enrollment projections and public safety and senior center needs. The local census also establishes proof of residency which is often needed for certain privileges, such as transfer station stickers and cemetery rights, certain veterans benefits and reduced tuition rates at state colleges and universities.

Dog forms were enclosed with the census. The licenses are valid through Dec. 31, 1997. If you did not receive a census form, call 383-9900. The census must be returned by Feb. 21.

Home Prices in Cohasset are All Over the Map

Four-Bedroom Homes are Popular

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

It's hard to talk about average real estate sales in Cohasset.

The least expensive house that sold last year was on Beechwood Street . It went for $120,000.

But there were four sales along the so-called "Gold Coast" of $1.1 million or higher, according to figures obtained from the Plymouth County Board of Realtors. The top price-getter on Jerusalem Road sold for $1.65 million.

In all, 85 homes sold in Cohasset last year which is just one more than the amount sold in 1995.

Twelve two-bedroom homes sold in 1996 for an average price of $197,145; 29 three-bedrooms sold for an average price of $247,372; 35 four-bedrooms averaged $329,807; and nine five-or-more-bedrooms averaged $357,111.

There were 14 permits issued for new dwellings last year, said Building Inspector Bob Egan.

Gail Bell, president of the Plymouth County Board of Realtors, said last year was a sellers' market. Due to low inventory there were more buyers than sellers, she explained.

But she predicts more houses to come on the market this spring.

"The amount of property on the market is determined by the comfort level people have with their job and the economy," she said. "Many waited for the election. Interest rates have held.

"There is more confidence in the economy."

While Title V, the state environmental code governing septic systems, is still a factor, homeowners have a better understanding of it today, Bell said.

"The big thing last year was fear of the unknown," she said.

In neighboring Hingha, there were 167 home sales in 1996 for an average price of $257,175. Five homes sold for less than $100,000 in Hingham and five sold in the $600,000s.

Toto Look-alikes Wanted

Know of any small dogs with a hankering for the limelight?

The Cohasset Dramatic Club is having a dog-gone time finding a Toto look-alike for the club's upcoming production of 'The Wizard of Oz.'

"A mutt will do," said Cindy Donovan, publicity chairman for the club.

The dog should weigh about 20 pounds or less and have a good personality.

Doggie auditions are 2 p.m., Feb. 23 at St. Luke's Episcopal Church at the corner of First Parish Road and Route 3A.

Donovan said all dogs must be on a leash and attendance at rehearsals will be necessary.

"We're looking," she said. "We need a small dog, one that's not too hyper."

She explained that in some of the scenes a stuffed animal will be used but in others, a live dog is needed. The dog will perform with Sarah Garland, who plays Dorothy.

Donovan is optimistic that a star will come forward.

"There could be some dogs that can handle the stage," she said.

Show dates are April 4,-6, 9, & 11-13 at Scituate High School. Call Tracy Dieselman at 545-5454 with questions.

transferred Anderson to the inn to perform renovations. Last month Anderson was given the general manager's job.

Once Anderson was named manager, he assembled a team of workers from the inn to help him revitalize the historic business. Anderson credits bar manager Renee Gaudet, her mother Dorothy, and cook Richard Joseph for helping rebuild the business.

"Everybody has a say in the work that goes on here," Anderson said. "People feel good when they have a say in what happens at their job."

The first thing Anderson set out to do last June was renovate the inside of the building. Enormous cracks laced the ancient plaster walls. A thick layer of old, white paint covered all the trim. Much of the wiring dated back to the 1940s and earlier. The fire alarm system needed to be replaced.

The three story inn has a restaurant and pub on the first floor, short-term inn rooms on the second floor, and long-term rentals on the third floor. Most of the work has been focused on the second floor where the short-term guest rooms are located.

Four of the seven bedrooms on the second floor have been completely renovated. Three of the rooms have private bathrooms which have also been renovated. Two common bathrooms await Anderson's attention.

Workers stripped thick layers of paint off railings and replaced it with a quality varnish that shows off the dark, natural wood underneath. The floors on the second floor were sanded and sealed. Cracked plaster was replaced with a new layer of plaster similar to the original composition, but sturdier.

Every effort has been made to maintain the original materials in the building, Anderson said.

"Some new trim was matched to the original trim," Anderson said. "The second floor is about 80 percent complete. We've also added a new fire alarm system which is wired into the fire department, we've replaced some of the wiring, and we're going to add cable and telephone lines to the short term rentals."

Some of the quirks of the building, which has had three additions, will be maintained. The kitchen area was an addition which has left the floor on the second floor warped into a pyramid shape. Anderson said it was a unique feature of the old building that would be preserved. He added that it would also be expensive to repair.

"This will always be a work in progress," Anderson said. "You have to think long-term with a big place like this."

Room Three on the second floor is a source of great pride for Anderson. Two twin beds with colonial-style quilts sit at t he center of the room. The walls are smooth and clean, and the floors gleam softly in the dim light. Some of the original inn furniture has been refurbished and placed in the room. The private bathroom looks new and clean.

As Anderson admires the finished product, Gaudet and Joseph enter the room with broad grins.

"Isn't this room just great," Gaudet says enthusiastically.

Anderson admits that there is still a lot of work to be done before the inn is completely renovated. His budget is tight so the work is progressing slowly.

Anderson estimated that it will be three more years before the inn is a big success, and another nine months before it turns a profit. But he believes he is uniquely suited to revitalize the inn.

Six permanent residents live on the third floor, which has one bathroom and eight units.

"One gentleman has lived up there for 45 years," Anderson said.

Eventually, the entire third floor will have to be redone. Anderson said he would maintain the third floor as long-term rentals as long as he had interested renters.

"I am just so in love with this place," Anderson said. "I would love to live here until I retire."

Part of the revitalization plan includes the creation of an Internet home page so people from around the world can learn about the inn in cyberspace. Anderson also plans to advertise locally, and he has other plans to make the inn more attractive to tourists. He is also planning to write a book about the inn detailing its rich history.

"I am thinking of adding a bike rack so visitors could lock up their bikes and cycle through town," Anderson said. "We'll also extend our hours in the spring, do some landscaping, and bring back patio dining, which was very popular."

The inn has a rich history steeped in Cohasset's past, a past which fascinates Anderson. Thomas James built the large colonial house in 1704. James' grandson Christopher converted it into an inn about 50 years later. The James family owned the property until Eleazer James died in 1871.

The third floor was added sometime after the Civil War.

A coastal stage coach route between Hingham and Scituate made it an attractive stop for travelers seeking to rest their horses and refresh themselves. Anderson said there is a rumor that there is a secret tunnel in the basement that leads to the Cohassett harbor and was used as part of the underground railroad for slaves. However, he hasn't found any signs of a tunnel.

Anderson hopes to make the inn as attractive to people in cars as it once was to people in stage coaches.

"I want people to come to Cohassett so they can see the Red Lion Inn," Anderson said. "I want this to eventually be a five-star establishment that is an integral part of the community. I want the people of Cohassett to be proud of the Red Lion Inn."

Police Shut Gate on Crime Spree

By Jennifer R. Horan
COHASSET MARINER

Scituate Police arrested a Scituate man Tuesday involved in stealing thousands of dollars worth of decorative and antique property from homes and cemeteries on the South Shore, said Scituate Police Lt. Brian Stewart.

Police recovered an estimated $50,000 worth of property stolen from the South Shore at Boston antique stores in the Beacon Hill area.

After several months of an ongoing joint investigation by Marshfield, Scituate and Cohasset police, Scituate Detective W. Michael Stewart arrested James B. Stuart, 37, at his home at 138 Old Oaken Bucket Road in Scituate just after 9 a.m. Tuesday (Feb. 11), Lt. Stewart said.

Stuart has been charged with nine counts of receiving stolen property: four in Scituate, two in Cohasset, two in Marshfield and one in Norwell.

For each count, Stuart faces a maximum jail sentence of five years, Plymouth County District Attorney Michael Sullivan said.

Police have a warrant out for the arrest of another individual allegedly involved in the property thefts, Lt. Stewart said. As of Wednesday morning, she had not yet been arrested, Sgt. John C. Rooney said. Stuart was arraigned in Hingham District Court yesterday (Feb. 12) and was held on $1,000 cash bail at the Plymouth House of Correction, DetectiveStewart said.

Since the summer, thefts of gates, yard ornaments, urns, statues and bird baths made of wrought iron, marble, granite and cast iron have been reported in Scituate, Marshfield, Cohasset, Hingham and Norwell, Lt. Stewart said. Police have stored more than a pick-up truck-load of the stolen merchandise at the Scituate police station. Most of the recovered property has already been matched to its original owners, he said.

DetectiveStewart, who has spent the past several days canvasing about 40 antique shops in the Boston area with Marshfield DetectiveSteven Marcolini, said residents bolstered the investigation by supplying photographs and drawings of their missing property.

Antique shop owners assisted them in identifying the stolen goods in their stores as well as the antique dealer who provided them, he said. The two detectives traced the rest of the recovered items through receipts and other paper work tying the Scituate suspects to the crimes, he said. Shopkeepers are not being charged, he said.

DetectiveStewart described Stuart as knowledgeable about antiques — aware of the difference between valuable artifacts and replicas — and that the antique shops he dealt with considered him an expert in the field.

"The suspect knew the value and the market that the average person wouldn't," he said.

DetectiveStewart said the rash of thefts all over the South Shore is an isolated crime and he believes the suspect dealt in antiques to support a drug habit.

An estimated $25,000 set of iron gates stolen from a Cohasset home topped the list of recovered items.

Cohasset resident Polly Logan, whose five-foot high garden gates were stolen last month from her Nichols Road home, said she was ecstatic that police recovered her valuable property.

"What a great Valentine's gift," she said, complimenting the police for "fine detective work."

Also recovered were an estimated $1,000 gate that was stolen from a home on First Parish Road last month, a $750 urn stolen from Hingham, a lavabo and urn valued at $1,800 stolen from a home in Scituate as well as many artifacts that police believe were taken from grave sites.

During the next few days, police expect to identify more of the stolen items and return them to their rightful owners within the next few weeks, they said.

Antique shopkeepers allowed police to take any merchandise from their stores linked to the suspect for the purposes of identification. Any items they are unable to identify will be returned to the antique shops they were recovered from.

DetectiveStewart said police were unsure whether some of the property reported stolen from the area during the past few months had already been sold. He said police would continue to track down missing property — including property that may have been sold — through antique dealers and retrieve it.

Because the antique business is not regulated like pawn shops and jewelry outlets, shopkeepers are not required to keep extensive records.

Septic Plan

salary for a program coordinator, and any other operational or administrative costs.

Each home would be assigned to a priority category. Title V inspections of on-site systems would be performed over a seven year period based on the preassigned categories. Homes that pose the greatest potential risk to public health would receive first priority for Title V inspections.

Homeowners who failed Title V inspections would have two years to upgrade their systems.

The management system would not be responsible for repairing failing or broken systems.

The loan program would be funded over 12 years with a $3.2 million loan from the state, and $9 million from the town, possibly through a Proposition 2-1/2 override. If this draft was adopted, the town would contribute $500,000 a year for the first six years into the revolving account. In the seventh through 12th years, tax payers would be asked to contribute $1 million per year into the fund.

The plan has two variations for the loan structure. Under one option, a resident with a failing system could borrow up to $40,000 at 5 percent interest for repairs and replacement. If the repair or replacement cost exceeded $40,000, the homeowner would have to seek additional outside funding.

Town officials would like voters to agree to pay 50 percent of the cost of failing or broken systems. If this resolution passed at town meeting, a homeowner could borrow 50 percent of the cost to replace or repair a system up to $20,000 at five percent interest. The town would match repair or replacement costs up to $20,000. If the repair or replacement exceeded $40,000, the homeowner would be responsible for the additional cost.

"Our intent is to have the town pay half the cost even in the first year of the program," said health board Chairman Tom Cook. "We need an override or the owner will have to pay all the costs."

Using figures based on annual sales of homes with septic systems, the health board estimates that approximately 50 systems would have to be repaired or upgraded each year at an average cost of $20,000.

Cook said the plan was an attempt to create parity for homeowners with septic systems by relieving some of the costs and providing low interest loans.

But several residents felt the plan actually created additional costs to homeowners.

"You're creating more bureaucracy that must be sustained with our tax money ," said Wigmore Pierson. "What kind of public input have you incorporated into this plan? When will I get the answers I need?"

Other residents also rejected to the creation of a new town agency. Wigmore referred to the new agency as the "septic police."

One resident pointed out that it currently cost him $150 to pump out his septic system every three years. The town's plan would cost him $810 over three years.

Additionally, residents currently do not have to get a Title V inspection unless they sell their homes. The proposed plan would mandate annual service inspections, and Title V inspections of all homes over a seven year period. Residents could be forced to replace their systems even if they had no intention of selling their homes.

Residents were also concerned with what the town would do if more than 50 systems failed in a year.

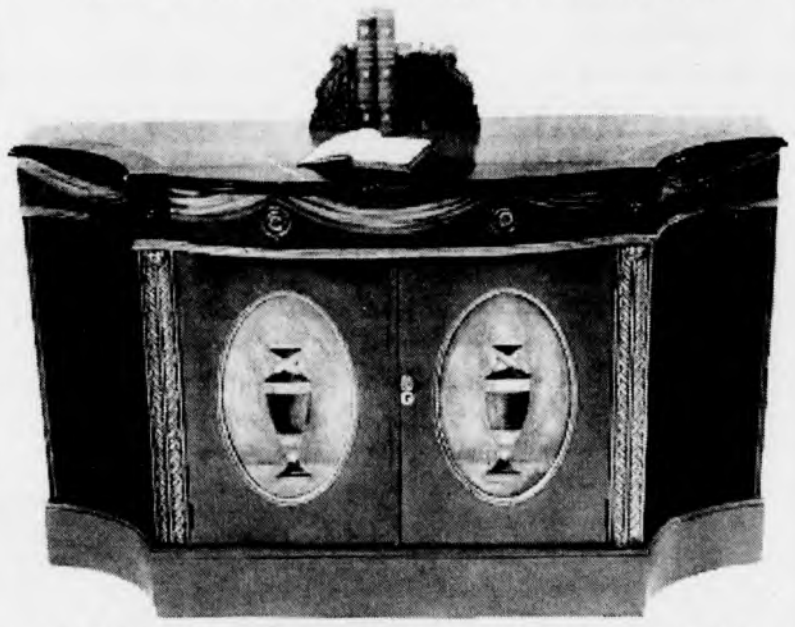
"I think the perception of a mandatory bureaucracy is scary to people," said selectman Peter Pratt.

Pratt suggested a voluntary management option for residents who are not in areas of critical environmental concern.

"We have to have a town-wide plan to address environmental areas," Cook said. "Unless a management plan is approved, we have to find a way to implement the mandate, which is why we were directed to come up with a parity plan. If we don't come up with something, then those key areas are going to get a letter from the board of health."

One woman wanted to know why town officials couldn't agree to sewer the entire town.

"You'll have to speak to another town agency about that," Cook replied.



Residents were also angry because a modification to the consent agreement with the state had not yet been made public. Pratt said he would work to have the document released immediately.

Cook added that he felt the health board would have the management plan ready for the annual spring town meeting. He also suggested that the plan may have to be voted on at a later special town meeting.

The next workshop is March 11.

Say It With Roses

By Carol Britton Meyer
COHASSET MARINER

"Valentine — a gift or greeting sent or given especially to a sweetheart on St. Valentine's Day." (Webster's Dictionary)

Lovers and friends will celebrate St. Valentine's Day for years to come, but as time goes on, traditions change. While roses are still the most popular flower to send to loved ones on that special day, other flowers are gaining in popularity. More and more women are also sending flowers to men on Valentine's Day, according to local florists.

Ann Brandon, manager of Hingham Square Florists on South Street, said the shop's floral designers usually choose more masculine flowers for women to send to men.

"We often include twig formations to help accomplish that goal," she said. "Women are also giving roses more often to men. Valentine's Day is a rose day, whether a single red rose or a dozen long-stemmed roses."

"The holiday has expanded over the years," said Paul Trifiro, manager of Exotic Flowers and Gifts on Route 3A in Cohasset.

"About 60 percent of those sending flowers on Valentine's Day are men, and 40 percent are women," he said. "It is becoming more of a family-type holiday, and children are sending flowers to their parents more often.

"Cohasset is a small town, and people who used to live here but have had to move away for one reason or another often send flowers to special people back in Cohasset," Trifiro said.

While florists appreciate the business, Valentine's Day is one of the hectic of the year. Most orders for flowers are placed the same week or on the actual day.

Prices range from $65 to $75 for a dozen long-stemmed roses. In Boston, the price can run as high as $85. To qualify as a long-stemmed rose, the flower's stem must be longer than 22 inches.

Wholesalers charge more for their flowers during this busy season, which results in higher costs to the consumer. The fact that Californian wholesalers had their flowers washed out in recent floods also contributes to higher costs. Another source of flowers is Ecuador.

"Valentine's Day has traditionally been the one day of the year when people express their feelings to their significant other," Trifiro said. "It's a day set aside for dinner, chocolates and flowers to show a special person you care."

Trifiro names a dozen long-stemmed roses as "the flower of choice for Valentine's Day," although individuals are "getting away from tradition and becoming more creative in mixing colors," he said. His shop has ordered 12,000 roses for the special day.

"A florist is entrusted with expressing people's feelings for each other," he said.

Brandon, like Trifiro, expects business to be good this Valentine's Day. "Even though flowers are wickedly expensive, roses are less expensive than a dinner for two," she said.

Hingham Square Florists also offers luscious short-stemmed pastel roses, including an unusual peach color. Rose bouquets are less expensive than long-stemmed roses, which take longer to grow.

"On Valentine's Day, we suggest 'Romeos' create a magical moment for their 'Juliets' by sending them a beautiful creation of colored roses. More traditional lovers may want to send their friends a dozen long-stemmed red roses, boxed prettily with a big red bow." said Brandon.

High School Swim Team Makes Waves at Championships!

Hip, Hip Horray! Kudos to the Cohasset High Swim Team — all members of the team recently participated in the Pilgrim Conference Championships held at the Lincoln Hancock pool in Quincy. The evening before the meet a "Spirit Dinner" was hosted by the co-captains, Patrick Leahy and Ashley Brister.

Congratulations go to Aimee Mitchell, the daughter of Ann and Larry Mitchell. Aimee made the dean's list at Lynn University, and we are all proud of her and her efforts!

Mary Jane (Cotton) Low was in town a few weeks ago, heading up the plans for the Class reunion for the class of 1962, to be held this summer.

Lynn Palmiter hosted the "Planning Group," and such fun was had visiting with each other that we almost forgot what we were there for! We are making great strides in our efforts to reach everyone, if you know of a class member that has not been notified please be kind enough to give me a call — we want everyone there!

Word comes from Noble and Greenough School that the headmaster, Richard H. Baker, has announced, the following Cohasset residents have achieved academic honors for their first semester grades. Earning academic distinction were: Geoffrey Chamberlain, senior; Taylor Devin and Maura MacLeod, juniors; William MacPherson, sophomore; Meghan O'Sullivan, freshman; and, Joseph Palone, eighth grade.

Academic high distinction went to Rachel Eisenhaure, a junior; Margaret Goedecke, Stefanie Noering and Annie Palone, members of the sophomore class!

Hats off to all of you for hard work that you did.

WWW.COHASSETMA.COM The Cohasset Harborfest committee is inching forward on the introduction of the Town of Cohasset to the Internet. At this point they are actively searching for volunteers who can devote the necessary time to complete the introduction of this project. They need volunteers for the input of a lot of data and for the jobs of Web Page Master and Site Masters. If the phrase "to cover the waterfront" had not already been coined they would coin it. They are going to cover the waterfront, the Harbor, Route 3A and all of the Town of Cohasset. Please EMAIL them at HOMEPAGE @ COHASSETMA.COM with your name, address, telephone number and computer experience or call 383-0787. As Bob Martin said in closing, "see you in Cyber Space!"

Boy, has the Cohasset Education Foundation (CEF) come up with an awesome fund-raiser — "Paris Pour Deux!" That is a trip to Paris for two, including round trip airfare and hotel stay for three nights (at a luxurious one) — how about that for your valentine — you can tuck one of the raffle tickets in the Valentine then just wait until March 5 for the drawing. This is all going to benefit the CEF's Language Lab Project, what a worthy cause! To get a ticket call the ticket hotline at 383-2833 or see any CEF member. The drawing will take place at CHS at the Spelling Bee at 9 p.m. Good luck! Cost is $20 per ticket.

Kathryn Ross, daughter of James and Susan Ross and a member of the class of 2000 at Skidmore College, earned honors during the fall semester at that college. Skidmore is a coeducational, liberal arts institution with an enrollment of approximately 2,150 students.

According to an announcement by Dean Francis L. Donelan, two Cohasset students have been named to the dean's list at Newman Preparatory School in Boston. In order to receive this honor, a student must maintain an average of 85 or higher in each major subject for an entire academic semester. The following students have been named to the dean's list for the fall semester, Sept. 9 to Jan. 17: Erin L. Johnson, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Walter Johnson of Jerusalem Road, and Joanna M. Larrabee, daughter of Joseph and Joan Larrabee of Hammond Avenue. Congrats to both of you for a job well done!

The following "Cohassetites" have earned academic honors for the fall trimester at Northfield Mount Hermon School:

Abigail Kornet, a junior and the daughter of Diana D. and John L. Kornet Jr., also known for being an assistant director in the 1996 Theatre Program one-Act Play Festival; she performed in the 1996 major production of "The Cinderella Waltz."

She participated in crew, the concert choir, and the Select Women's Ensemble.

Brett MacQuarrie is a senior and the son of Jane and Chris Kyricos. Brett is a student leader, has served as co-captain of the varsity soccer team, participating in the 1996 New England Prep Schools Tournament. A member of the varsity lacrosse team, he was co-captain of the Southeast Team in the 1995 Bay State Games. A member of the NMH "As Schools Match Wits" academic quiz, he has studied Advanced Placement economics. Brett has been accepted at Trinity College in Hartford and will be going there in the fall.

EDITORIALS & OPINIONS

We Need Sewers

The sewer is badly needed.

Don't let any of the 'confusion' surrounding the project cloud that simple fact.

Objections from north Cohasset residents are related to how the sewer is going to be paid for — few question the need for it.

As it stands now, the 345 homeowners in north Cohasset face the prospect of paying for 100 percent of sewering their part of town which will be hooked up to the sewer plant in Hull.

They are angry because they think being asked to pay for all of a major public works project is unfair and unprecedented.

Last year town meeting voted to subsidize 50 percent of the project with taxpayer dollars contingent on a debt exclusion override which subsequently failed.

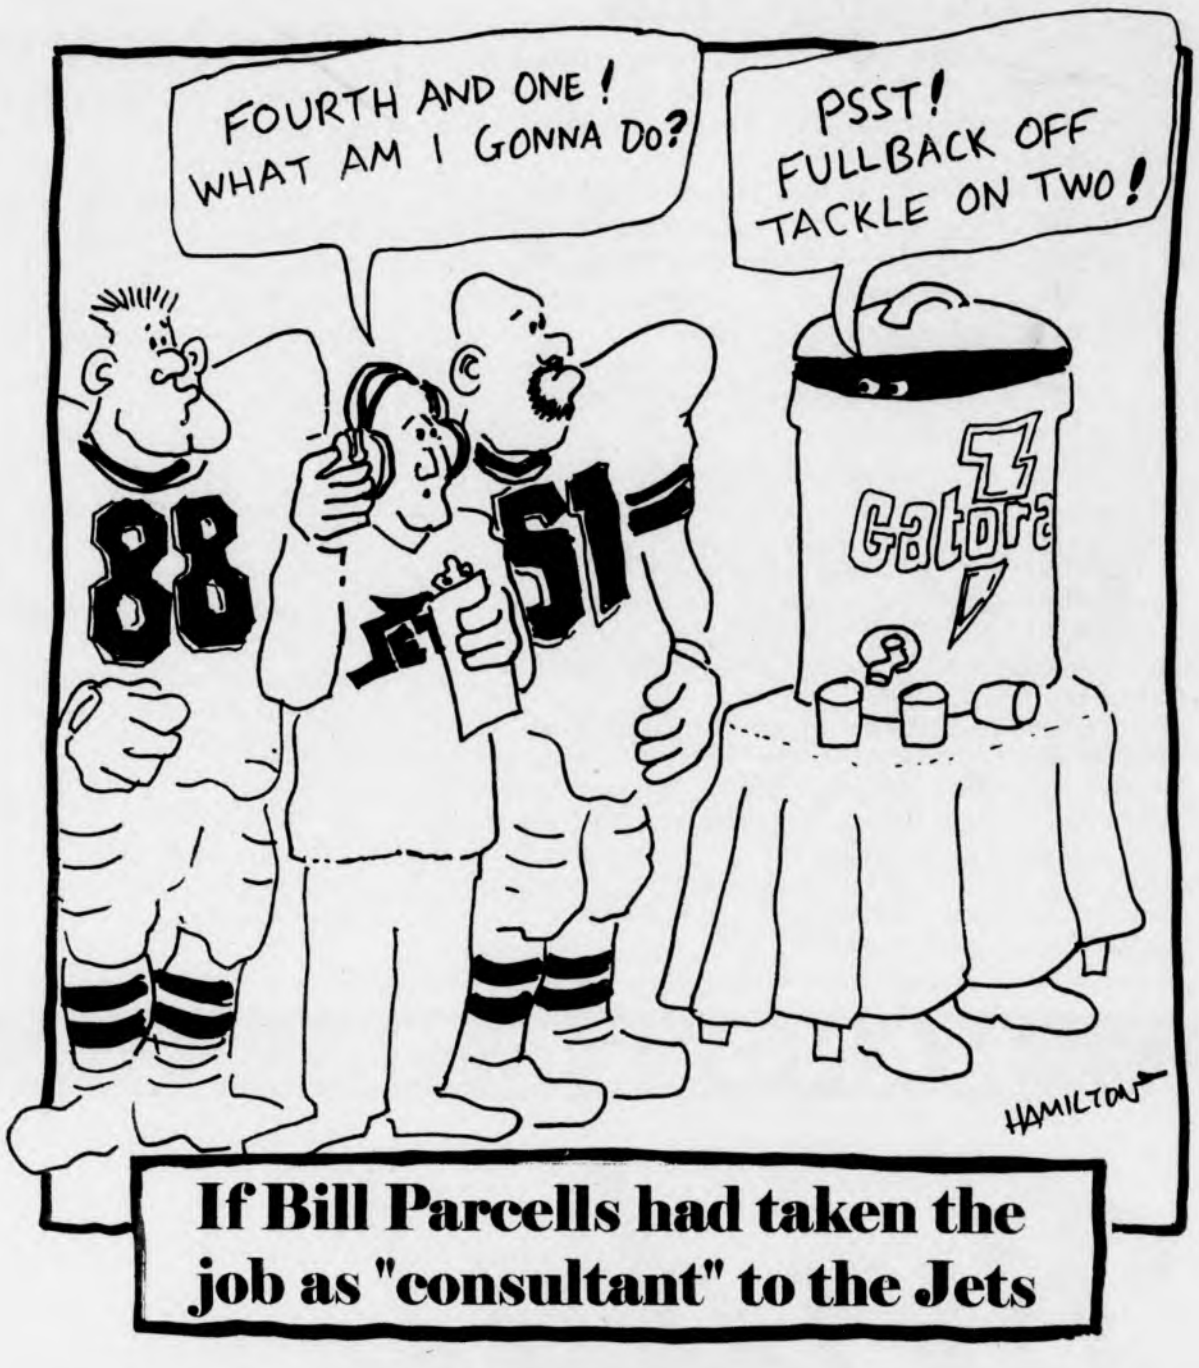
This year, if north and central Cohasset, which includes about 600 homes, join together, there's a good chance the override asking for 50 percent taxpayer subsidy will pass.

But there's no chance the sewer projects will even pass town meeting unless selectmen have a clear understanding of what's at stake.

This week, some selectmen seem to think the project should go down in flames unless the 50/50, taxpayer/user payment plan is approved and the override passes.

While we think fairness is a legitimate issue and support the residents in north and central Cohasset seeking shared-funding — the sewer projects should go forward regardless.

It is fair to give north Cohasset another "bite of the apple," so to speak, and to let central Cohasset have the opportunity for help with the sewer costs through a debt exclusion override.



Selectmen should support this effort and help get the vote out.

But it would be grossly unfair to the town and the environment to stop these projects.

Some say the court order forcing the town to upgrade its sewer system or face the specter of huge fines is a paper tiger and is meaningless. We'd hate to test the state's legal resolve on this matter.

The environmental arm of the state is different in the 90s. Just ask anyone who's confronted a Title V upgrade.

Cohasset Fire Fighters Thanked

Dear Fire Fighters,

Thank you for saving my house. You are nice. I got to see the kitchen. When the hurt fire fighter gets out of bed, please tell him thank you. Thank you for doing you best.

Your Friend,

P.S. You're cool!

Dear Fire Fighters,

Megan Sacks is in my class. I'm sorry one of your men got hurt. Thank you for saving Megan's house.

Your Friend,
Rob St. John

(Written by students in Mrs. Cook's grade 2 classroom at the Osgood School, in appreciation of the Fire Fighters in Cohasset.)

Personal Attacks are Inappropriate

To the Editor:

Cohasset has many civic-minded residents who give of themselves to keep our town rolling. These individuals get nothing and expect nothing for their efforts and each of us should be deeply grateful for their efforts.

It is very unfair if personal attacks are directed at any one individual. We all have a right to disagree with viewpoints expressed. It is our right and obligation to educate ourselves on the issues and express ourselves in the proper forum.

Not many are willing to give so tirelessly as Cohasset's volunteers do. Let's all applaud their efforts and thank them.

Swim Team Support Appreciated

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Cohasset High School swim team, I would like to extend a sincere thank you to the parents for all of their support and dedication in making this such a successful and enjoyable season for the swimmers on the team.

I would also like to extend a very special thank you to the Athletic Director, Clark Chatterton, for all of his hard work and special attention given to the team.

This season would not have been such a success without all of this support.

Town of Cohasset

Dear Mr. Worley:

Educational benefit is of considerable interest to many Cohasset voters, including those who are day sailors.

The Recreation Commission seems to be staking out a position of opposition to a significant development in educational benefit (the proposed Learning Laboratory for Marine Biology and Genetic Research), instead of reasonable compromise. Recreation and education need not be mutually exclusive.

After all, the footprint of the Hagerty building is only 2 percent of the 2-1/2 acres of the property. Surely a year-round educational facility, which will be available to all students who choose to use it, warrants giving up a few parking spaces for boat trailers that would be used on a few summer weekends.

An improved launching ramp and parking area is a laudable objective, but credibility is not enhanced by suggesting that the area could be in great demand for picnics and athletics, nor by suggesting that the lab is incompatible with improving the ramp and parking lot.

R.M. Campbell, President
Cohasset Lightkeepers Corp.

Town Manager Position Supported

To the Editor:

A group of citizens have submitted a petition before Town Meeting to consider a change to Town Manager form of government. What precisely does this petition ask our town to consider?

In general:

The town manager reports to the selectmen, and is a full time town employee with the skills and the experience to properly oversee and direct the daily operation of Cohasset, consistent with goals and policies set by the selectmen, and by-laws and other action of Town Meeting.

Specifically:

The selectmen become the chief goal-setting and policy-making body of the town. (Similar to the board of directors of a corporation.) The ultimate authority of our open Town Meeting is unchanged.

The selectmen and all elected town personnel, boards, commissions and authorities remain exactly as they are today. (This is a wise move since the town manager will clearly need the collective guidance of these individuals, boards, and commissions.)

The selectmen will also appoint the town counsel, and any committees, boards and commissions that they appoint today. The selectmen will continue to grant licenses and will have the authority to both hire and fire the town manager, as today.

Duties and responsibilities of the town manager include:

- Acts as the chief administrative and financial officer of Cohasset responsible for day to day operation of the town, reporting to the selectmen.
- Develops the town budget, working with all town boards, officers, and committees, and submits it to the selectmen for approval and forwarding to the advisory committee and capital budget committee. The budget of the school department remains under the jurisdiction of the school committee.
- Supervises all town departments.
- Responsible for coordination of operational and strategic planning of Cohasset.
- Responsible for hiring and firing all town employees, subject to civil service or union contract, as appropriate.
- Attends selectmen meetings.
- Administers all provisions of law and regulations approved by the selectmen.
- Administers the town budget.
- Keeps the selectmen informed about federal and state funds availability and all departmental operations.
- Signs routine town vendor and payroll warrants, functions as chief purchasing officer and negotiates contracts.
- Cannot engage in any other business activity while town manager.

Thus, this petition merely adds a full-time professional "CEO" to administer to the ever-increasing needs of our town.

New Voting System Previewed

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

The vote was 12-2 to put the IRS out of existence. And Jay Leno and David Letterman both won seats on the board of comedy Monday night.

The votes were part of a light-hearted demonstration of a new voting system to be tried out at the May 3 town election.

Voters in May will trade in their stylus and punch card for a paper ballot with circles that can be filled in with a pencil or pen.

Cohasset was one of several towns in the 10th Congressional District last fall that became embroiled in a recount due to an unusually high number of blank votes cast in the primary race between Democrats William Delahunt and Philip Johnston.

The blanks were blamed on the punch-card system in which the voter must push the stylus so it punches a hole through the voting card so light shines through and the ballot can be read by the machine. In the recount that was later appealed, a judge decided that dimples showed voter intent.

Ken Hajjar of LHS Associates, Inc., which rents or sells Accu-Vote voting scanners to interested communities, conducted a mock election that included ballot questions at the selectmen's meeting.

He said Marshfield uses the Accu-Vote system and Weymouth, which was one of the recount towns last fall, just bought 20.

For the May 3 trial, LHS will provide two machines, one for each precinct, at no cost to the town.

If the town decides to switch to the optical scanners, it can buy the machines for $6,000 each. After the first two years, the maintenance contract would be $125 per year. Programming costs are $350 per election.

Election warden Domenic Baccari said lighting could be a problem because the punch-card machines have their own lighting source.

Hajjar suggested clear Christmas lights be strung along the voting booths.

Selectmen said they would check with wire department head Steve Wigmore about any lighting problems.

Baccari said he particularly liked that the Accu-Vote machines accept the ballots in any orientation, even if they are inserted backwards.

Town Clerk Marion Douglas said she is looking forward to the trial.

"I think they will work out well," she said.

Informational Meeting on the 'Pay-Per-Bag' Program

The Recycling Committee will hold a public informational meeting at 7:30 p.m., Thursday, Feb. 20, in the Town Hall auditorium, on the "pay-per-bag" program to be implemented in Cohasset later this year.

"We are holding this meeting to explain the 'pay-per-bag' program to interested residents, and to answer questions about the program," said Arthur Lehr, chairman of the recycling committee.

In the "pay-per-bag" program, people pay for only the amount of refuse they actually dispose of, instead of the current flat fee, which would be eliminated, said Lehr. Since there is no charge to bring recyclables to the town Recycling Transfer Station (RTF), residents can save money for themselves and the town by separating their recyclables, he said.

Cohasset Blue & Gold Banquet

Each year, early in February, Cub Scout packs across the country hold Blue and Gold Banquets to celebrate the founding of the Boy Scouts of America Feb. 8, 1910.

Sunday, Cohasset's Pack 38 held its Blue and Gold Banquet at the High School cafeteria. Forty-five Wolf, Bear and Webelo Scouts gathered with their families to eat and receive well-earned recognition for the tasks they've achieved this year.

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray spoke to the group about her years as a Scout leader, and urged the Cubs to stay with the program into Boy Scouts.

After the banquet, Doug Sheerin and Kevin Duffy, representatives from the successful Cohasset High School wrestling team, showed highlights from a recent meet with Middleboro High.

100-Match Winner Is Just Warming Up

Duffy's Focus Is On State Title

Cohasset High wrestler Kevin Duffy has his sights set on winning a state championship. The relentless wrestler recently became just the third in Cohasset High history to break the 100-win mark.

COHASSET MARINER

He has the ability to give his opponent a sense of confidence in the early stages of a wrestling match. Opposing wrestlers come to believe they actually have a chance at defeating Cohasset's Kevin Duffy.

But if he doesn't wind up pinning his opponent, the 135-pound Duffy simply wears him down in the latter stages, sapping the once-confident opposition's strength right out of him.

Head coach Torin Sweeney says it's the extra work Duffy puts in during the offseason that makes him extremely tough to beat.

"They may be close in the first and second period," said Sweeney, "but Kevin wears them out in the third. He has worked so hard. His mental toughness and intensity on the mat really just wears people out."

Duffy has been "wearing out" opponents consistently now for four years. By the time he reached last Saturday's meet against Middleboro, Duffy had come face to face to the record books. He easily won his match and joined former teammates Ryan Freeman and Nate Fiore as the only Skipper wrestlers to break the 100-win mark.

For Duffy, he knew at the beginning of the season he was on pace to reach the prestigious mark. He won 29 matches last year, en route to taking third at the Division 3 South Sectionals in the 125-pound division. Barring an injury or sickness, Duffy was confident he could reach No. 100.

"I was really confident coming into this season because I had high expectations," Duffy said. "I felt good before the match and it's been something I've been looking forward to."

It was the example Fiore and Freeman set that motivated Duffy to work for the 100 wins. He saw the effort they put into their training and matches. Duffy realized he had to follow a steady, training regiment in the offseason if he wanted to accomplish the goal.

Duffy joined the Orange Crush Wrestling Team out of Weymouth and trained with some of the best wrestlers on the South Shore. He followed a lifting program and bought a mat in order to work on his moves.

The offseason work certainly paid off, not only physically but on the mental side as well. "I feel a lot more confident on my feet this year than in the past," Duffy said. "To reach 100 wins means I'm at the level (Fiore and Freeman) were."

One reason for Duffy's success is his ability and desire to test himself in what he considers to be a very difficult sport to dominate. Just one bad move in a match can turn the momentum the other way in only a second or two.

"The difficulty and level of competition have been great motivators," Duffy said. "Of all the sports I've competed in, this competition is the most difficult."

As tough as the competition has been though, Duffy has handled it just fine. As a freshman, Duffy proved he was for

Sheerin Shines at All-League Championship

By Joe Reardon
COHASSET MARINER

Scituate may have taken the Pilgrim Conference gymnastics title with an undefeated record, but second-place Cohasset shined just as brightly at last Wednesday's league meet.

The Lady Skippers had four girls named to the All-Star team, the most of any team, and seven medals awarded in the individual event competition.

Erica Hettstrom (Bars), Jodi Colwill and Kristin Sheerin (Beam), and Tara Hettstrom (Floor) were all voted league All-Stars prior to the start of the competition.

The Skippers didn't lose a step in the meet itself, placing in top six in every event. Just a seventh-grader, Sheerin came away with three medals, thanks to an impressive first place on the bars and finished third on both the beam and floor.

Fellow seventh-grader Caitlin Flint was third on bars, while Carolyn Pratt and Kristen Reynolds took third and fifth on the beam and vault, respectively. Colwill was sixth on the vault and earned a medal.

Pratt's performance was especially gratifying for head coach Erin Sutherland. She had perfect attendance for the season and is considered the "hardest worker" on the team by Sutherland.

"She has really worked hard on all her

Hoopsters Sink Non-League Harwich

By Jim O'Sullivan
Special to the Mariner

Cohasset dribbled in some non-league action on Monday and came away with a solid 67-54 basketball triumph over Harwich. Cohasset's Paul-Michael Quintin led all scorers with 22 points and Ryan Bishop followed with 19 points and 11 rebounds.

Despite giving Harwich 14 of its first 20 points from three-point land, and the absence of forward J.L. Williams, the Skippers were still able to notch their 14th win.

Bishop scored the game's first points, taking an inbounds pass from Quintin to the hole. Brian Kilroy, who tore down nine rebounds, swished a turnaround from the right block. Bishop kissed a fadeaway off the glass and went to the line. He then continued his scoring run, hitting the ensuing free throw and, on the nest possession, knocked down a runner. Burke Davis sneaked in for the steal and dished to Quintin, who got on the board with a jumper. Kilroy took advantage of his hot hand with a pull-up jumper and Bishop popped in a free throw, then snagged an offensive board and put it back for two. Jamie Buick picked up an assist by tossing to Kilroy, who finished, giving Cohasset an 18-13 edge.

Davis nailed a foul-line jumper and crisp passing by Quintin and Davis resulted in a Pat Hurley basket. Kilroy's rejection on the defensive end set up Hurley's trey and Cohasset led 25-15. Quintin drained a three and Davis grabbed the long offensive board and slashed to the hoop for a pair. Bishop stole an inbounds pass and somehow twisted his 6-foot-8 frame underneath the backboard for a bucket. Raheem Shepard injected defensive life into the team, grabbing a steal, then hitting Quintin, who stopped and popped for two. The Skippers headed into the locker room with a 34-22 lead.

Swimmers Hit Personal Bests

The Cohasset High School swim team is a perfect example of the saying "The body achieves what the mind believes." Led by junior co-captain Pat Leahy and the lone senior co-captain Ashley Brister, the team entered every meet ready to compete and represent its school to the best of its ability. Cohasset left every meet with compliments from opposing coaches and even occasional spectators about how well they swam and how high their spirits remained throughout the meet. Even when they knew they were not going to win, they still swam their respected races to the best of their ability. Every swimmer wanted to swim faster each and every time they competed. This is why Cohasset had a very successful season. Winning swim meets is just icing on the cake. Swimming faster and giving it all you have is the name of the game in this sport.

This is the exact approach the team took into the Pilgrim Conference Championships Feb. 6 and 7. They knew they would not be competing for the title but for personal improvement and the excitement of competing in the championship meet. This team was definitely captured by the championship spirit. Cohasset posted 23 season-best times and placed high enough to score points in seven of the 12 events. They knew they had to step up, and they did exactly that.

Hoopsters

Davis pumped in two from the line to start the second half and Quintin stepped in to make the steal and breakaway layup. Bishop labored under the offensive boards, and his work earned him two more points. Kilroy continues his tenacious defense of the basket with another block and Quintin swished a three, then hit another layup off a steal. Bishop was automatic in the post and picked up two from the left block. Quintin rained down his fourth three pointer of the game. Bishop dished to Hurley for a bucket, making it 52-36. A Harwich timeout with seven minutes remaining didn't rattle the Skippers and Cohasset responded by putting in sophomore Jamie DeMichele. DeMichele pulled up at the free-throw and, switching hands in mid-air, banked in a jumper. He then forced a turnover by playing stellar defense.

Buick finished a fast break which resembled d the old Celtics, with Bishop rebounding and outletting to Davis, who fond Quintin, who then made a great transition pass to Buick for the bucket. Buick finished the play, was fouled and hit the free throw. Quintin put the Skippers back up by 10, 59-49, with a three after a brief Harwich streak. Quintin's stingy defense again earned him an easy layup, topping his scoring for the night. With just over a minute to go, Bishop charged from one side of the court to the other, intercepting a pass and dribbling from the opposite foul line all the way to the hole, drawing the foul and laying it off the glass. He calmly netted the free throw and the victory was as good as in the books. But, Cohasset still had some suprises left. Matt Belson knocked down three foul shots in the final minute and Grant Emde and Eric Wenmark both played tough defense to seal the win.

events through the season," she said. "It was our favorite performance of the meet. When she finished, we felt like we won the Olympics.

In the All-Around competition, Erica Hettstrom placed a strong fourth amidst a tough, young field.

Seventh-graders Katie Grimm and Amanda Watts both earned varsity letters this season and eighth-grader Megan Cox was indispensable as the Skippers' team manager.

Sutherland said she was pleased with her inaugural season and credited Ruthann Ardizzoni for her support and help all winter.

"I'm really pleased with the season," Sutherland said. "I owe a lot to Ruthann and the gymnasts."

The 1996-97 Cohasset High gymnastics team enjoys a relaxing moment at the Pilgrim Conference meet. The Lady Skippers wound up their successful winter campaign with a second-place finish to Scituate High in the overall league standings.

100-Match Winner

real by taking third place in the Division 3 South Sectionals at 103 pounds. He was third again the following year at 125 and went on to take fifth in the Division 3 State championship. This year, he wants to take his success in postseason competition one step further and nail down an All-State title.

Duffy has a smart, common sense approach when it comes to his routine in the minutes leading up to a typical match. He conserves as much mental and physical energy as possible so he is able to distribute it evenly over three rounds. Worrying, Duffy believes is a waste of time and certainly detrimental to a good performance.

"I don't try to be too serious before a match because you can tire yourself out," he said. "I focus when I'm wrestling."

As good a wrestler as Duffy is, Sweeney believes it is his fearlessness on the mats that make him all the more tougher to beat. Duffy regularly moves up a weight with an equal amount of success the result.

In a meet two weeks ago against North Quincy, Sweeney asked Duffy if he wanted to move up to 140 pounds and take on a wrestler who had lost just one match all season.

The NQ wrestler quickly took a 3-0 lead and it began to look as though Duffy was overmatched. Duffy, however, battled back to knot the score, 3-3. He continued putting pressure on the NQ wrestler and dealt him his second loss of the season by winning in overtime.

"He came back from being behind and just wore the guy out," Sweeney said.

In a meet against South Shore League opponent Hanover, the Indians bumped up their 16-0 wrestler, who placed in last year's state divisionals, to take on Duffy.

Once again, it proved to be a mistake. Duffy won 15-7, pulling the wrestler all the way in the process. "Kevin just totally beat him up," Sweeney said.

Duffy has never been so determined during his wrestling career garner a state title. Sweeney believes he'll take any pressure that comes his way and throw it right back where it came from. Duffy is used to the big meet experience and isn't likely to get rattle.

"It's nothing new to him and he knows how to prepare and what it takes to win," Sweeney said.

Duffy is very much aware this is last shot at the state title. He isn't about to give anything less than an all-out effort in every match from here on in.

"This year my back's against the wall," Duffy said. "I want to make sure I accomplish as much as I possibly can."

Duffy does have his back against the wall. But that's when true champions, the kind he proved he is, shine their brightest.

PERSONAL FINANCE

Insurance housecleaning can help lighten your load

By Amy K. Barrett
WORTH MAGAZINE

Chances are you could be spending less on auto and home insurance, and you don't know it. When was the last time you examined your policies? If Ronald Reagan was president, then perhaps it's time to take stock.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

Making sure your insurance matches your day-to-day needs is just as important as refinancing your mortgage and re-evaluating your retirement savings plans.

Following certain steps such as bundling your auto and home insurance, paring down your coverage, and raising your deductible may be ways to decrease your insurance payments.

Of course, shopping around and comparing prices of policies is the first step — one that many people bypass in haste. Automobile and home insurance plans are often chosen as an afterthought to the big purchases they protect. A person will spend months, even years, searching for, say, the right sports car. Then once they've got it, they adopt the first insurance plan that comes their way. Rarely will you hear people say they spent their Saturday shopping for insurance.

"What it boils down to is taking the time to shop around, and not calling just one or two (companies) to make your best deal," says Hal Katz, president and chief executive officer of Interstate Auto Insurance Co., in Baltimore. "Most people will be amazed at the savings they can get. Somehow the insurance bill is a forgotten bill."

Buying your auto and home insurance from the same company is often a simple way to get a deal. Many insurers will shave 10 to 20 percent off of your premiums if you sign on for both policies, "which is a pretty nice discount," says Katz.

Then there is the deductible; the more you're willing to dole out for car repairs or home damages before your insurer steps in, the less you have to pay in premiums. "Most people get $250 deductibles. You can save quite a lot if you raise (the deductible) to $500 or $1,000," says Jeanne Salvatore, director of public relations at Insurance Information Institute, a trade group in New York City.

According to the institute's research, raising the deductible on your home insurance to $500 from $250 will shave 12 percent off your premium payments. The higher you are willing to raise your deductible, the lower your policy payments will be. In fact, setting your deductible at $1,000 instead of $250 can save you 25 percent; setting it at $2,500 can save you 35 percent. Increasing your deductible on your auto insurance should yield comparable discounts.

Consider this. Let's say you raised your deductible to qualify for a 20 percent discount per year on your premium. On a $1,000 policy you'd save $200 a year. Over eight years — the average span between homeowners' claims — you would have saved $1,600. For the very conservative of you who think taking a higher deductible might be too risky, you could always set that amount aside to help cover repairs in case something does happen.

And higher deductibles keep you from filing as many claims; a good thing since numerous claims may lead to rate increases. "Insurance is really for the big disasters," says Salvatore.

There can be such a thing as too much coverage. When your sports car was brand new, you needed a comprehensive policy. But perhaps you've had the car for seven years, had a few accidents, and now it's worth less than $1,000. You may be paying more in premiums than you'd be reimbursed for by the insurer if your car was destroyed in a collision. Have an auto dealer or a bank appraise your car for you, and then see what type of coverage would be worthwhile.

There may also be hidden benefits you don't need. Katz recently realized there were benefits in his auto policy he would never use. His insurance plan included free car rental service if his own car was in the shop.

Because he also owns two other cars, this feature was useless to him, so he called his insurance agent and asked him to take it off the policy — a move that saved him about $30 a year. Those kinds of discounts can add up.

Taking an active role in your own safety may win points with your insurer. Installing smoke detectors, burglar alarms, or dead-bolt locks are good steps to take. High-tech systems, such as an alarm that rings at a police station and a sprinkler system for fires, are even better. Some companies will cut your premium by as much as 20 percent for those sophisticated systems. However, home security systems aren't cheap.

Although you probably won't save money on the investment immediately, over time your savings will match your investment. And you'll sleep better.

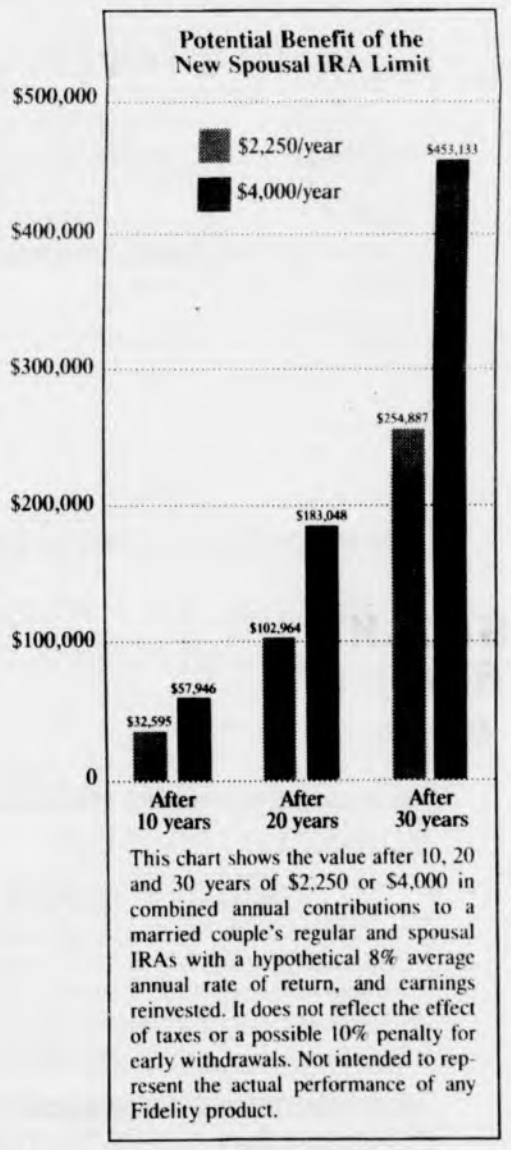
You can do the same for your cars; alarms, automatic seat belts, air bags, and anti-lock brakes serve the same purpose — making you safer while saving you money. States including Florida, New Jersey, and New York require insurers to give discounts for cars with anti-lock brakes since they give drivers better steering control and stability when stopping.

If you are not sure where to begin your insurance search, ask your family, friends, and co-workers who they use. The Yellow Pages is also a good resource. Be sure to use independent agents who are not obligated to sell policies from just one company. They can help you to find the best coverage to fit your lifestyle, and the most competitive price.

Just remember: all the insurance in the world won't do any good if it isn't there when you need it.

Couples At Tax Time

• Single people can end up paying more tax dollars than married couples who rely on one partner's salary. A single earner making $70,000 pays 31% in taxes, while a married head of household with the same salary pays just 28%.



• Couples in which one partner's income is high and the other's is low might benefit from living off one income.

• Dual-earning couples can benefit from using an accountant to make sure they take every deduction possible and reduce their tax burden.

• Couples who elect to file separately in order to lower their state income taxes must file separate federal tax forms as well.

The Spousal IRA. For the single-income family that wants a dual-income retirement.

This chart shows the value after 10, 20 and 30 years of $2,250 or $4,000 in combined annual contributions to a married couple's regular and spousal IRAs with a hypothetical 8% average annual rate of return, and earnings reinvested. It does not reflect the effect of taxes or a possible 10% penalty for early withdrawals. Not intended to represent the actual performance of any Fidelity product.

You've made the decision to live on one income now. You shouldn't have to pay for it later. That's the idea behind the increased contribution limit for the Spousal IRA. Effective for the 1997 tax year, single-income couples may increase their combined maximum annual IRA contributions by 78%, from the previous limit of $2,250 to $4,000. To take advantage of this change in law, just call Fidelity.

on the right foot at the diving championships Thursday. Maura placed fourth overall, earning herself Pilgrim Conference All-Star honors. Jen also dove extremely well, placing 12th overall, and also scored points for Cohasset. Cohasset's success did not stop there, though. The team carried it into the next day at the swimming championships. After the first event, the 200-medley relay, it was obvious Cohasset was there to swim and swim fast. The two Cohasset relay teams both shaved three seconds off the season-best times. The A relay of Ashley Brister, Pat Leahy, Derek Bugely and Colin Kilroy swam a 2:11.43, while the B relay of Maura Duffy, Allan Marcus, Alex Etkind and Jen Meehan swam a very surprising 2:19.59. The times just kept dropping in the very next event and every one after that. Swimming season-best times for Cohasset were Ashley Brister (200-freestyle, 400-freestyle relay), Pat Leahy (50-freestyle, 100-breastroke, 200-freestyle relay), Derek Bugely (50-freestyle, 200-freestyle relay), Colin Kilroy (50-freestyle, 200-freestyle relay), Maura Duffy (100-backstroke), Allan Marcus (100-breastroke), Alex Etkind (200-individual medley, 100-breastroke, 200-freestyle relay), Jen Meehan (100-butterfly), John Crowley (200-freestyle, 500-freestyle, 200-freestyle relay), Kelly Stone (100-butterfly, 100-backstroke, 200- and 400-freestyle relays), Ashley Leahy (200- and 400-freestyle relays) and Sue Gill (200- and 400-freestyle relays). Greatly missed by the team due to illness was Cara Foley, who is a solid freestyle sprinter.

Leaping for Gold

ready before playing."

Little did the 6-foot-8 Bishop know, the best was yet to come on that day against Winthrop. The Skippers got their pre-game talk from head coach Ron Ford and they proceeded through the tunnels that headed out to the court.

"Coming out of the tunnel into the Garden was the biggest thrill of my life," said Bishop. "You come out at center court and you look up and see the championship banners."

Paul-Michael Quintin was in the stands cheering Cohasset on against eventual winner, Winthrop, that day two years ago. Quintin was a key member of the JV team that season, but was still working to get his game to the varsity level.

It was when he saw the Skippers take the floor in one of the most celebrated and tradition-filled arenas in the world, Quintin made his mind up that he would be on the varsity roster the next year.

"I kind of wished I was part of the team playing in the Garden," Quintin said. "I decided I was really going to work hard and make the varsity team."

All through the game, Quintin soaked in the tradition of the Garden. The stories came flooding through his mind; Havlicek stealing the ball, Bird, Cowens, Auerbach, McHale, Cousy, D.J. The tradition of Celtics pride.

"Seeing the banners made me just think back," Quintin said. "Larry Bird was the first person I thought of."

Quintin went on to make the varsity squad last season. The Garden had since been razed and the new FleetCenter took its place. Quintin, who is currently averaging 15.5 points per game for this year's squad, still got a thrill seeing the world championship banners and the retired numbers of the Celtics' all-time greats.

He admits he got lost in a day dream prior to the game. "I imagined I was in the NBA," Quintin said.

Burke Davis, one of Cohasset's captains said there was a distinct difference between the Boston Garden and FleetCenter.

"The Garden gave you more of a feeling of the great Celtics teams," Davis said. "The FleetCenter's more real. The Garden was more of a museum. You look right up at the banners and you're in awe This is the floor you always dreamed of playing on."

Senior J.L. Williams said it was a "thrill playing on the same floor the Celtics did," but enjoyed his FleetCenter experience more because of the increased playing time he got. Williams also gave the modern facility high grades.

"It was a good time," he said. "It was exciting and the place was so big."

The memories of playing in the two arenas will always stay with the four Cohasset players. But they are all concerning themselves with running down the court of the Worcester Centrum, site of this year's Division 3 State finals.

If the Skippers play the game they are capable of through the tournament, all four players agree there is absolutely no reason why they can't end up playing on the Centrum floor.

There was a time this season, however, when Cohasset was inexplicably struggling along with a 4-4 record in the league it has owned for the past three years.

Bishop said the Skippers weren't concentrating on executing the plays that made them a good team. Too many players were standing around. Instead of passing off to an open teammate when Bishop was double, even triple covered in the low post, players would force the ball to him. The results were costly turnovers.

Bishop knew Cohasset had to run and swing the ball quick, taking the opposing defense by surprise.

Davis said the team lacked an identity early in the season. The squad's problems had nothing to do with a shortage of talent. It was more a case of players not knowing what their roles were.

Davis was embarrassed by the team's start because he knew the Skippers were loaded with the potential for a great season.

"A 4-4 start for a Cohasset basketball team is bad," he said. "The first couple of games this year we weren't playing like a team at all. Looking back now, guys were doing things on the court they normally wouldn't do."

The turning point of the season came when a team meeting was called where any gripes, ideas and suggestions the players had could be brought out into the open.

The meeting did the trick. Any fingerpointing that went on ceased and the players reaffirmed that they were all working for the same goal — a Division 3 State title.

Since that meeting, the Skippers have been among, if not the hottest team in the South. Cohasset has rattled off 11 consecutive wins to raise its record to 15-4. The confidence is flowing for the Skippers. They're playing their best ball of the year at exactly the right time.

Williams said the team must continue to stay focused and take each game one at a time. Ford and assistant coach Mark Hall have been scouting potential Division 3 opponents, looking for their strengths and weaknesses.

"They come back and will show us what we have to do to beat these teams," Williams said.

Quintin is confident the team will return to the FleetCenter for the Division 3 EMass final, but is equally as confident in the Skippers' chances of playing at the Centrum.

"We're playing good ball right now," he said. "When everyone's down we pick each other up."

Ford, too, has once again reaffirmed his reputation of being a strong motivator, able to get the best out of his players. The team believes in what he tells them because the players know he believes it. Ford's words are more than just words, they're his convictions.

"He tells us we have to believe in ourselves no matter what anyone else says," Quintin said.

Bishop sees the team advancing to the state finals this season, but he knows it won't be an easy task.

But when you set your goals, you see them through.

"It's my No. 1 goal this year," Bishop said.

The four players have memories of playing in the Boston Garden. Now they're looking forward to adding the memory of winning a state championship as something they can look back on many years from now.

"Last year we didn't get the job done," Quintin said.

Skaters Pass Tests

Public Notices

DEPARTMENT OF ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION WATERWAYS REGULATION PROGRAM
Notice of License Application pursuant to G.L. Chapter 91 Waterways Application Number W96-5640
Notification Date: Feb. 7, 1997

Public notice is hereby given of the application by Helen Watson to maintain an existing pier and stone retaining wall at 101 Border Street in the municipality of Cohasset in and over the waters of the Gulf River. The proposed use of the structures is noncommercial docking and boating access to navigable waters and shoreline stabilization for the protection of existing structures and is a water-dependent project.

The Department will consider all written comments submitted within 30 days subsequent to the "Notification Date" in order to decide whether to grant authorization for the proposed activity pursuant to G.L. Chapter 91. A public hearing may be held upon request by the municipal official. Furthermore, a municipality, ten citizen group or any aggrieved person that has submitted written comments may also petition to intervene to become a party before the close of the comment period. Failure to submit such petition will result in the waiver of any right to an adjudicatory hearing. Further information regarding this application may be obtained by contacting the Division at (617) 932-7600. Plans and documents for this application are on file with the Department for public viewing at the address below. Written comments should be addressed to: J. Sprague, DEP/DWW, 10 Commerce Way, Woburn, MA 01801.

Cohasset Resident to Head Videoconferencing Division

Eric Theriault of Cohasset is appointed to the position of videoconferencing specialist at Ahern Communications Corporation. He will head the firm's newly-formed videoconferencing division which provides videoconferencing system sales and videoconferencing room rentals to businesses in the greater Boston area.

The announcement was made by Dana Ahern, president of Ahern Communications Corporation, a worldwide distributor of videoconferencing equipment and systems, conference phones and other telecommunications products, including headsets.

"I am pleased Mr. Theriault is part of our expansion into the exciting area of videoconferencing technology," Ahern said. "He is an excellent communicator with tremendous technical experience and product knowledge. Mr. Theriault understands the needs of a business and will provide the information on videoconferencing systems that is most appropriate for a business owner."

Theriault, who joined the firm in 1994, was previously employed as a regional sales representative. A graduate of Plymouth State College, he resides in Cohasset.

Selectmen Tackle Town Meeting Articles

Midnight Debate Over Town Administrator Post

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

Tuesday night selectmen wrestled with 39 draft articles proposed for inclusion in the annual town meeting warrant. Many of the articles have yet to be worded completely, and some raised serious philosophical differences among board members.

Selectman had planned to consider articles for the special town meeting as well, but the debate on the annual town meeting lasted until midnight. The board will meet again next week to finalize articles for both the annual and the special town meeting.

Selectmen did not discuss any articles related to the town's sewer and septic problems, although selectman Peter Pratt said he would present a sewer article next week. No figure was provided for the FY98 budget.

The most contentious proposal was a citizen's article to replace the executive secretary's position with a stronger town manager or town administrator position.

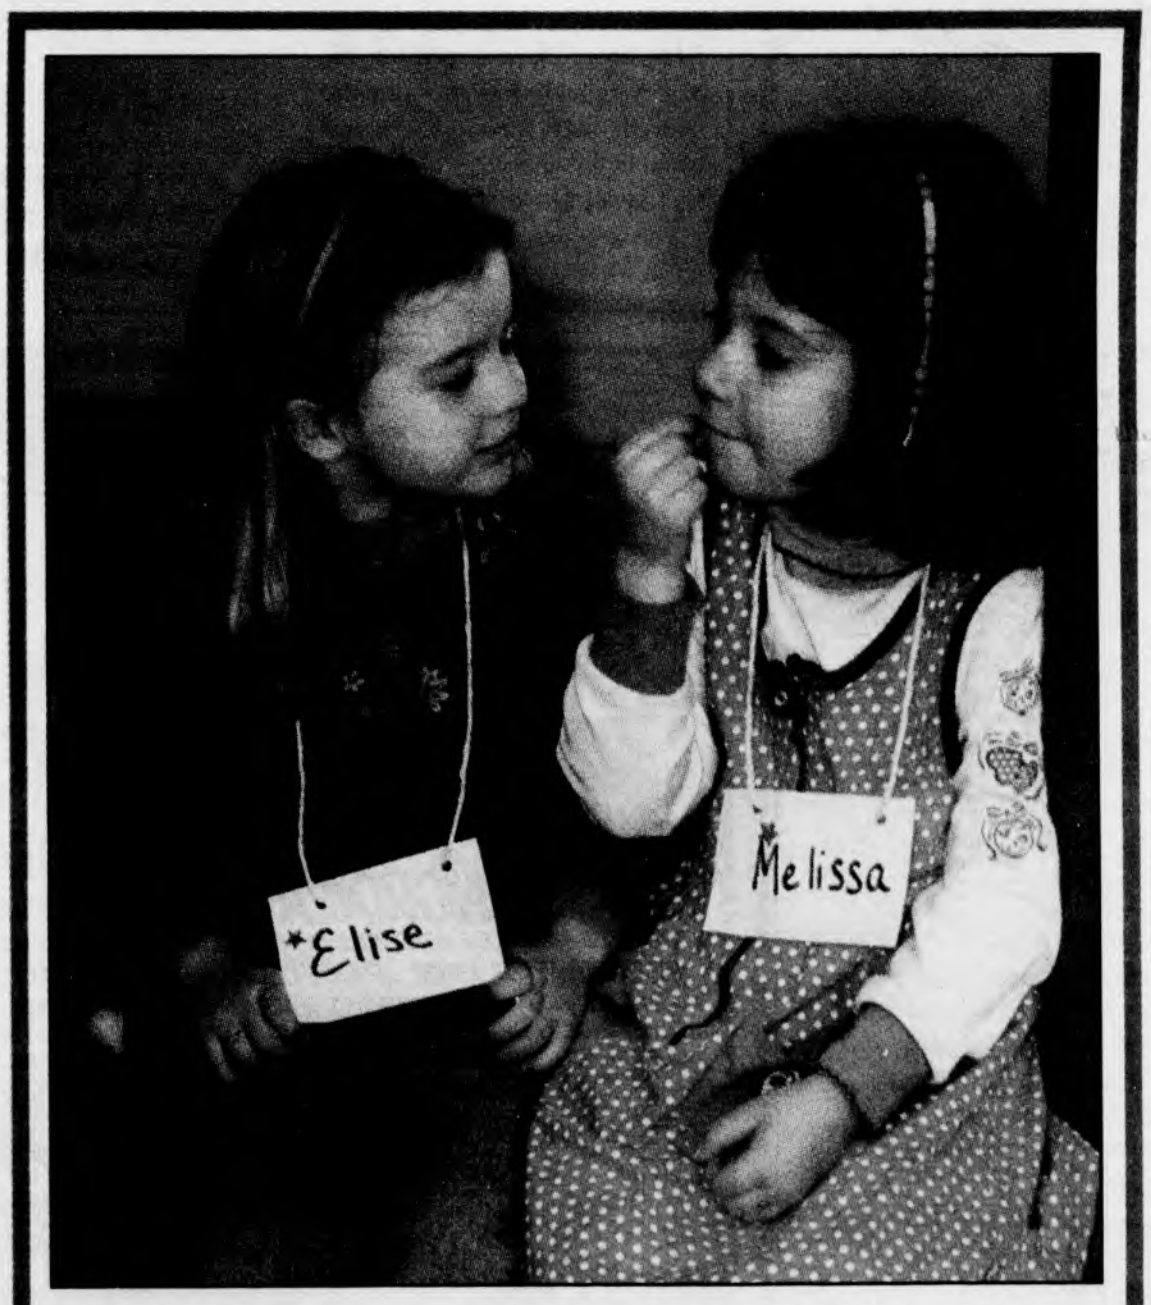
CHS Language Lab Nears Completion

Training Students for Global Economy

By Kerry Herlihy
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Cohasset Education Foundation (CEF) looks forward to the June completion of its latest and largest project, the foreign language lab located at the high school. "In a growing global economy, we see the need of foreign language instruction for ourselves and more importantly for our children," said Mike Hurley, President of the CEF.



The existing lab was installed in 1968 and is a basic listen-speak system with the option to record. The only change that has been made was the upgrade from cartridge to cassette players 15 years ago.

The CEF's subcommittee including the ex-officio, Superintendent Stephen Hart, have been planning this project for over 2-1/2 years. The original plan was to include a portable version of the language lab but was ruled against due to the high risks of damage and vandalism when mobile.

Only a few manufacturers produce language labs making the search limited. Language software programs made for large groups are hard to come by as well. Sony, being a reputable manufacturer offering top of the line technology with the most back up support, will be providing the lab. This new lab is projected to last another 25-30 years.

Each new carrel will have a television monitor on which students will be able to view movies spoken in the language they are studying. The lab includes cd players to ensure high quality sound. The use of CD players also make it easier to reach a specific point of the lesson as opposed to the time consuming process of searching for each point on a cassette tape.

Bizarre Loss Dealt to Hoopsters

By Jim O'Sullivan
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

In a tough loss which ended a bizarre day for the Cohasset High basketball team, the Skippers fell to Carver High, 69-66 last Wednesday.

Cohasset guard Justin McNamara was taken to the hospital with 103-degree temperature before the start of the game and an ambulances was called to attend to a Carver JV player, who sustained a minor neck injury. Both McNamara and the Carver player were treated and later released. However, the events of the day won't appear in the record books, and the Skippers' loss to the Crusaders will.

If Cohasset had won the game, it would have earned a home-court advantage and a higher seed in the first round of the Division 3 South Sectional tournament. The tournament

Selectmen OK Study of Downtown

Selectmen have given initial approval to a plan to study part of a plan to revitalize the downtown area.

The plan would address parking, sidewalks and pedestrian access downtown. The portion of the plan that was approved would study placing a sidewalk at St. Stephen's church that would extend toward the Village area.

The study could cost as much as $4,000, although the town would be eligible for a 90- percent reimbursement from the state. The town must apply for funding by Feb. 28.

Town Will Not Receive Federal Dredging Aid

Selectman Peter Pratt announced at Tuesday's selectmen meeting that Cohassett would not receive federal aid for the harbor dredging project.

Pratt said President Clinton's 1998 budget does not contain any money for small harbor dredging projects. Dredging projects are administered by the Army Corps of Engineers. Army Corps officials do not have a back-up plan.

"For three years we've been told we could get money," Pratt said. "In one day we have taken a double-hit. If it's any consolation, we are not alone in this situation."

Dog Auditions Feb. 23

The Cohasset Dramatic Club is having a dog-gone time finding a Toto look-alike for the club's upcoming production of 'The Wizard of Oz.'

Cindy Donovan, publicity chairman for the club, said the dog should weigh about 20 pounds or less and have a good personality.

Doggie auditions are 2 p.m., Feb. 23 at St. Luke's Episcopal Church at the corner of First Parish Road and Route 3A.

Donovan said all dogs must be on a leash and attendance at rehearsals will be necessary.

"We're looking," she said. "We need a small dog, one that's not too hyper."

She explained that in some of the scenes a stuffed animal will be used but in others, a live dog is needed. The dog will perform with Sarah Garland, who plays Dorothy.

Donovan is optimistic that a star will come forward.

"There could be some dogs that can handle the stage," she said.

Show dates are April 4,-6, 9, & 11-13 at Scituate High School. Call Tracy Dieselman at 545-5454 with questions.

Recycling Meeting

The Recycling Committee will hold a public meeting at 7:30 p.m., Thursday, Feb. 20, in the Town Hall auditorium. The public is invited.

The discussion will center on the "pay-per-bag" system, to be implemented in Cohasset later this year.

Arthur Lehr, chairman of the recycling committee, said the group will welcome any public comments or questions about the program.

In the "pay-per-bag" program, people pay for only the amount of refuse they actually dispose of, instead of the current flat fee, which would be eliminated, said Lehr. Since there is no charge to bring recyclables to the town Recycling Transfer Station (RTF), residents can save money for themselves and the town by separating their recyclables, he said.

Art Students Nominated

Cohasset Junior-Senior High School is honored to have five of its talented students recognized for their outstanding art work at this year's Boston Globe Scholastic Art Awards exhibition.

In the exhibit judging the following students were awarded their respective honors: Alicia Laas, Chris Pratt and Mark Whitman all received honorable mentions for their entries, while Dawn Massa-Williams was awarded a Silver Key for an outstanding photograph, and Grace Gardner was given the highest distinction of a Gold Key award for her still life painting.

In addition to these nominees, seven fellow students were chosen to submit work for consideration to this prestigious event. These seven include: Danielle Anderson, Kelsey Henderson, Doug Sheerin, Kelley O'Donnell, Haiden Hodgson, Emily Collins and Rachael Carlisle.

The Scholastic Art Awards is an annual juried art exhibit which draws student art work from both public and private schools across the state. All Gold Key and Silver Key art work is exhibited for public viewing for the month of February. The gallery is located in the Transportation Building in Park Square, Boston, and is free and open to the public.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

BUYERS ARE NOT NAIVE

QUESTION: I consider myself a good salesman. Don't you think I could handle a buyer as well as any Realtor?

ANSWER: Put yourself in the buyer's shoes. He will want the most house he can get for the money. Frankly, the stakes are too high to play the do-it-yourself game in this monetary arena. The best advice is – let an expert sell it.

The average buyer is far from naive. Before you even start serious negotiations, he'll expect you to deduct the broker's commission for HIS benefit. Then you're on your own in the critical areas of financing, mortgages, contracts, deeds, etc. It makes sense to sell it professionally.

Car Solutions

by Bob Travers & Barry Standish
General Manager Service Manager

PROPERLY WIRED

▶An automobiles ignition wires should last at least 50,000 miles, but it is important to use proper replacement wires when failure does occur. It sometimes happens that cars with computerized on-board systems will experience unusual performance problems after new ignition wires are installed, even though the wires check out fine on an engine analyzer. Replacement wires may not have the same built-in resistance value of the original factory wires, in which case the electromechanical interference can upset the operation of the on-board computer. Thus, if an automobile experiences unusual performance problems after the installation of a new set of ignition wires, the resistance of the new wires should be checked against factory specifications.

▶Even if you are not having trouble with your ignition wires, following this advice is prudent because oftentimes wiring can develop imperceptible cracks that affect your car's performance. At SOUTH SHORE CHEVROLET- GEO, you'll find service excellence, friendly personnel, and a willingness to go the extra mile to satisfy customers. What makes a difference in our automotive shop is the dedication to excellence that you'll find here. Expert follow-up is our commitment to you. Visit our convenient location at 828 C.J. Cushing Highway, Route 3A (383-9090.) Your happiness is our pleasure to ensure.

HINT

Town Meeting

Pratt favored the article because he felt it would allow the selectmen to focus on their legislative responsibilities.

"It's ridiculous to force town boards to sit in these chairs in front of us and present their budgets with papers flopping on the floor when we could have them go over their budgets with a town manager," Pratt said.

Selectman Nancy Roth disagreed with Pratt, saying that a town manager would just "add another layer of bureaucracy" to town government.

Selectmen Chairman Merle Brown questioned whether it would be wise to let a town manager have jurisdiction over municipal budgets.

"The town meeting proposal goes beyond our budget to all other budgets," Brown said. "I'm not recommending that the town administrator go over any budget but ours."

Other selectmen didn't think it was necessary to give so much power to one individual in town.

"Right now we can delegate expanded powers to our town administrator," said selectman Michael Sullivan.

Roth agreed with Sullivan, adding that the town could hire another town administrator with expanded powers at some point.

"To go to a stronger town administrator does not require town meeting," Roth said. "We can expand those powers."

Brown aid the town meeting proposal was modeled after the town administrator in Hull. Brown said the proposal should be more closely tailored to the needs of Cohassett.

Selectmen agreed to place the proposal on hold for one week to reexamine some of the details.

Many board members supported an article that would place a tax on new home buyers to finance a town land bank.

"I favor the concept," Roth said.

Sullivan objected strenuously to the article.

"So you're going to vote to put another tax on people who buy their homes in Cohassett," Sullivan said. "Why put it just on people who buy new homes. Let everyone contribute."

Roth disagreed, saying the tax only amounted to a few thousand dollars on each new home purchase in town.

Selectman Roseanne McMorris said there just wasn't enough money in the budget or enough support to get the entire town to pay for a land bank.

"To say the fund will be built up through taxation is to kill it," McMorris said.

Pratt said real estate transactions were driving up prices and forcing the town to take some kind of action to preserve land.

"It's essentially a user-fee," Pratt said.

Selectmen voted four-to-one to support the article, with Sullivan casting the dissenting vote.

"It's a sleazy way to approach this," Sullivan said.

Sullivan also opposed an article that would allow voters to hold a recall election to remove an undesirable elected official from office.

"I think it's unhealthy for the town and we should oppose it," Sullivan aid. "We've done perfectly [illegible] without it in the past."

McMorris strongly opposed an article that would create a new water resources protection committee. The article was placed on hold.

"This article makes them a standing committee," McMorris said. "I think our water is adequately protected by t he conservation commission. I just don't see the need for another standing committee."

Selectmen placed many articles on hold, including one that would ask voters to vote "yes" or "no" for a commuter rail station in Cohassett Village if the Greenbush Line is restored.

Also on hold are articles that would re-zone Whitney and Thayer Wood from residential to open space, an article that would create a water supply protection bylaw, an article that would require a public hearing prior to closing the Cohassett Heights landfill, a plan to fund a flood control project for downtown, and an article that would expand the planning board's jurisdiction over non-conforming parcels within the flood plain.

Selectmen rejected two articles related to the landfill: one that would freeze rates and one that would allow town meeting to determine the rate structure at the site. Sullivan said he would support the first landfill article if the word "freeze" was removed.

Selectmen are racing the clock against a Mar. 3 deadline to get the warrant to the printer and have it ready for the annual town meeting, scheduled for Mar. 29.

Sewer Agreement Would Speed School Construction, Save Money

Faces Voters at March 29 Special Town Meeting

By David Johnson
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

A new agreement between the town and the state, which faces ratification at the March 29 special town meeting, allows increased capacity at the Elm St. sewage facility, thereby facilitating construction the new elementary school and saving some $350,000.

It will also facilitate the approval of other projects, including construction of a new parish house for St. Anthony's Church and permit the Community Center to connect to the sewer.

The document also sets new, longer deadlines under which the town must fix its sewer problems.

According to Sewer Commissioner Edward "Ted" Guild, the agreement amends the existing judgment issued against Cohasset and approved by town meeting in 1994.

"I'm very pleased about it (the agreement)" Guild said. "It's a major step forward. This gives us more latitude."

He explained that special counsel Goodwin, Proctor and Hoar and Tutela Engineering negotiated the agreement with the attorney general's office and officials at the state Department of Environmental Protection (DEP.)

Guild said the new agreement indicates the previous adversarial relationship between Cohasset and state officials has ended.

"We're working very well with the state," he said. "We've made good progress. Cohasset is no longer a dirty word at DEP."

Specifically, Cohasset is now allowed a capacity of 120,000 gallons per day to flow through the Elm St. facility. Currently the town is limited to 100,000 gallons and faces fines of $10,000 per month if it exceeds that limit.

Guild said the town would only exceed the capacity in the event of severe weather.

The increase in capacity allows the new elementary school to connect to the sewer in Sept., 1998, instead of June, 2000, as originally planned.

In addition, numerous private requests for additional sewage capacity from residents and businesses will also be met sooner if the new agreement is adopted.

The agreement is article 4 of the special town meeting, which will be held during the March 29 annual town meeting.

In addition, the agreement cites two priority areas, currently being evaluated by the board of health: Lily Pond and Nichols Road.

Noting that there have been problems in correcting the town's sewage problems, the document said, "None of the various delays were attributable to Cohasset."

Town meeting voters will also be asked to approve debt exclusion Proposition 2 1/2 overrides allowing the town to pay half the cost of sewer extensions both in the harbor area and in North Cohasset. Residents on the sewer lines would pay the other half of the cost.

Kitchen Tour Set

The South Shore Community Center is sponsoring a dream tour of some of the most unique kitchens in Cohasset Friday, March 7, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. The tour consists of four fantastic kitchens, and free samplings from some of the finest caterers on the South Shore at each home.

A free shuttle service will depart regularly from the lightkeeper's residence to the homes. At the lightkeeper's residence there will also be free coffee and sweets along with a wonderful variety of kitchen ware, crafts, and antiques for home enthusiasts.

Advanced tickets may be purchased at the center or by calling the center at (617) 383-0088. Tickets are $15 per person in advance, and $20 per person the day of the tour.

Babysitting will also be provided at the center's nursery school for $2 per child for up to two hours. Daycare reservations must be made in advance by calling the center.

The South Shore Community Center is a non-profit organization founded 54 years ago dedicated to a wide range of educational and entertaining programs for infants to seniors. Programming ranges from aerobics to gym dandy for toddlers, gourmet cooking to cooking for kids, nursery school to continuing education. FLYING WITH A FAMILY

If you've ever boarded an airplane with a baby in your arms or little ones in tow, you know the look – occasionally from flight attendants, and often from passengers thinking, "Oh, please, don't sit next to me!" The strict confines of an airplane can make traveling a challenge. However, it is a challenge you can win, and even enjoy, if you know a few tricks. Perhaps the most important thing to do is tell your travel agent that you will be flying with children and what their ages are before you book the flight. The agent may help you find nonstop or direct flights, to minimize the hassle of changing planes, as well as flights at off-peak times, when there may be extra room on a plane for children to move about or nap. Reserve your seat assignments at the earliest possible date to make sure the family will be seated together in a non-emergency row, preferably in the bulkhead seats, for extra room and privacy.

Traveling with small children can be challenging! And, as much fun as it is to plan your own vacation, you can't be expected to know all the in's and out's of care-free travel, like where the best place is to sit on the plane or what special services are available for young passengers. That's where we come in with free travel assistance. We're SCITUATE HARBOR TRAVEL, and we've got the experience behind us to ensure your successful travel. Come talk travel with us at 53 Cole Parkway, Scituate Harbor, or call 545-4281 or 800-354-2720.

Charter School Enrollment Grows

By Carol Britton Meyer
HINGHAM JOURNAL/COHASSET MARINER

Enrollment at the South Shore Charter School in Hull is on the rise. The figure for next year is already up to 352, an increase of 32 over this year's number of students. Of those currently enrolled in the school, 12 are from Cohasset and eight from Hingham. Enrollment is expected to climb to 468 by 2000.

Fifteen charter schools, which were formed under the 1993 state Education Reform Act, opened throughout the state in 1995. South Shore Charter School opened with 150 students in the fall of 1995, and grew to more than 300 last September. If student requests for enrollment exceed available space, a lottery is conducted. The registration deadline is April 10 this year.

Funding remains a concern for local school systems, which are required to contribute funds toward alternative schooling tuitions. State reimbursement is based on a complicated formula in which the state determines the minimum amount a town should be spending per pupil. The formula is based on the number and type of students, wealth of the community and other factors. Tuition costs are deducted from the amount the town gets in education aid from the state. Cohasset and Hingham received 100 percent reimbursement from the state last year.

The state will kick in 50 percent reimbursement for Cohasset students attending the charter school this year, leaving a tab of about $38,000 for the town to pick up.

Hingham figures for this year are not yet available, but it is expected the town will also receive 50 percent reimbursement, or about $23,000.

Both communities are expected to receive 40 percent reimbursement from the state next year.

"Our main concern is the financial impact on the town," said Superintendent of Schools Stephen Hart. "Should we be taking money away from the education of all the (other) students? If the state wants students to have the option to attend a charter school, then (the tuition) should be completely state-funded," he said.

Of the 14 Cohasset students who enrolled in the charter school last fall, two have returned to Cohasset Public Schools.

South Shore Charter School is currently the only charter school in Massachusetts serving grades kindergarten through 12. The school is developing and piloting a model that is project based, individually paced and includes extensive parent and student involvement in the school's government and operation. The elementary program uses the Core Knowledge Sequence developed by E.D. Hirsch. The high school program includes a focus on life skills.

A student-teacher ratio of 11 to 1 is maintained. A full-day kindergarten and multi-grade classes are offered, along with world languages and physics in all grades.

The school, which is too young to be accredited, will be required to go through a self-study process prior to accreditation.

"Colleges broadly accept students with our charter school background," said Anderson.

Rick Small, a communications teacher at the secondary school, said the main difference between a charter and other schools is the "ability to adapt to an individual's needs and interests. The faculty operates as advisers, in close proximity to the school's administrators and parents," he said.

Greg Thornton of Cohasset, whose daughter, Leslie, 14, is a student in the secondary school, is co-chairman of the school's board of trustees.

"My wife, Helene, and I have been participating since the school was up and running, and we've seen some significant growth. We're very pleased with the development of the curriculum this year," he said.

"I like the school because it has hands-on activities," said Cyndie Connolly, whose three children, Jesse, 14, Kyra, [illegible] and Hannah, 7, all atten[illegible] there. Connolly teaches in the extended day program and does substitute teaching during the day.

"My children came from home schooling, and the philosophy of the charter school is close to the home teaching philosophy," she said. "I like my kids experiencing multi-age classrooms and the fact that parents can just drop in anytime."

Claire Overlee, a primary school teacher at the charter school, praises the school for "taking kids where they are and going from there. The school is based on life skills learning," she said. "There's also good communication between parents, teachers and students. We rely on parents' helping at the school."

Children involved in her Project Store, which offers school supplies and snacks to students, applied for, and received a $1,000 loan from a CEO of a local company. They will pay back the loan with profits from the store. Students sometimes sell handmade jewelry and other items on consignment there.

Train Chugs Forward, Town Prepares

By David Tibbetts
COHASSETT MARINER

Dean Rizzo and other members of the Greenbush mitigation committee have prepared a list of items they would like to see the MBTA incorporate into its Greenbush mitigation plan. Rizzo presented the updated list to selectmen at their meeting Tuesday.

Rizzo said the items in the town's mitigation proposal are "90 percent the same as previous concerns." He emphasized that the selectmen needed to draft the proposal into a letter to the MBTA before next week's meeting between the mitigation committee and the MBTA on Thursday, Feb. 27. Rizzo said the public is invited to attend.

The current draft of the mitigation plan focuses on six major areas: the Route 3A train station, Rocky Lane, James Brook, the Village area, wetlands impact, and general concerns.

The area of greatest concern discussed at the meeting was the impact the restored rail line would have on commercial properties in the Village area.

Selectmen voted to support trains using the historic track route rather than realigning the tracks.

"Moving out of the historic track district would have the greatest impact on residential areas and require a home-taking," said selectman Peter Pratt.

Several owners of businesses at the meeting protested the vote.

"That last vote puts Strawberry Parfait out of business," said Joseph Rosano, owner of the restaurant.

Rosano said the using the historic track alignment would cut-off his business from Cohassett Village, and prevent truck deliveries because of the installation of a nine-inch berm.

Rosano asked selectmen to include the relocation of his business as part of the mitigation plan.

MBTA officials have stated that they are not required to provide mitigation for impacts on commercial areas.

"Languages are tough to grasp, so we looked for a lab that could juice up the lessons and vary instruction. The more interactive the lab the more students will learn, " said Hurley. Students of all levels can be working in the lab simultaneously on individual projects and assignments. Students will be encouraged to work in groups via the audio mechanism of the lab. The teacher can also audio pair students together with or without the students knowing with whom they are paired. This format aims to actively engage each students in the lab. "The activity options of the lab offer much more to the students in terms of curriculum," said Superintendent Hart.

Around 75%-80% of the students body are enrolled in a foreign language class. "Colleges look for students who have stayed with one language for three or more years, " said Paul Narkiewicz, Chairman of the Foreign Language Department. "Language is growing in importance as our students prepare to take their place in a more global society. I believe foreign language instruction should begin in kindergarten and be carried all the way through," said Narkiewicz. This lab intends to raise the interests in foreign languages by showing the students alternatives in learning.

The language lab classroom can accommodate between 40-50 students.

Initially, the lab will consist of 25 carols with the intent to add carols in the future.

This is a huge investment for the CEF. The fact that they have been able to generate the funds necessary to support such an expensive project has put them in high demand. They have recently received several large scale proposals for future projects.

The CEF was established in 1992 when a group of people recognized the need to reach larger capital when fundraising for the schools. "With fiscal constraints, the Foundation acts as an additional source to implement activities and services that would otherwise not exist," said Superintendent Hart.

The CEF recently provided funding for the purchase of extensive computer equipment at the Osgood School. Deer Hill awaits funding for the purchase of six video disc machines, six monitors, and 12 VCR laser disc machines that will be put forth in 1998.

In the meantime, the CEF has agreed to partially fund the "Voyage of the Spray" project which includes all schools. This international project involves the reenactment of the first circumnavigation by Joshua Slocum. Three Cohasset teachers will sail a three week leg of the trip while communicating with the schools via satellite, teaching lessons from the boat. Students will be covering the trip over its two and a half year time span.

The Foundation receives ongoing donations from various sources but can't solely rely on donors. The CEF looks forward to its annual Spelling Bee on March 5. On the same night the raffle will be drawn for the winner of a four day three night trip to Paris for two. The CEF hopes to raise substantial

Quilt Show Tickets Available

Carol Sandblom called last week with some news for all of you quilt fans — tickets for the Fourth Annual Quilt Show are available to you now! The show will take place at the Second Congregational Church, complete with a wonderful luncheon! This year's tickets will be $8 in advance or $10 at the door. They still need more quilts to display, in the four years there aren't any that have been shown twice, and they would like to keep that as a tradition — really makes it more fun, knowing you will see new (or "old-new") ones — if you have one, please call Carol at 383-1812. You may purchase tickets from Carol, Annette Sawchuck or DeeDee Perry, just give them a call.

Ed Mulvey celebrated a unique anniversary a few days ago. Feb. 10, 1958, he started work at the Pilgrim Co-operative Bank in downtown Cohasset. Yes, that was 39 years ago and just look at Ed now! He is the president of Pilgrim Co-operative Bank, and one of Cohasset's finest gents! Congrats go out to you Ed, we are lucky to have you!

Thayer Academy sends us word that Dylan Lanzillotti, son of Victor and Jane Lanzillotti and a member of the Class of 2003, made the honor roll for December 1996. We congratulate you for all of your hard work, and hope to write about you next semester also!

Did you know that the South Shore Community Center is planning a unique event next month? Friday, March 7, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. to be exact! They are going to hold a tour consisting of four "dream" Cohasset kitchens, including a spotlight of an interior decorator and free samplings from some of the South Shore's finest caterers at each kitchen! Free shuttle services will depart from the Lightkeeper's residence to the homes — then, upon your return you can sip some coffee and eat some sweets while looking at a wonderful variety of kitchenware, crafts and antiques. Tickets will cost $15 per person in advance, or $20 per person the day of the tour; you can call the center or stop by — daycare will also be provided for $2 per child, reserve that while you are there too! Have a great time!

Tickets are now available for the Rosemarie Mercurio Memorial Scholarship Pancake Breakfast, to be held Sunday, March 16, from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. at the Cohasset High cafeteria. The scholarship will benefit a current graduate of Cohasset and Hull High School, and the donation is $3 per person. Please call Anna Lucia (925-8817) or Melinda Bonanno at 982-0597.

Thursday, Feb. 13, was the first meeting for a most worthy project, Relay For Life. It promises to be one of the South Shore's greatest events — a 24-hour team walk, held at the new track behind the high school. There will be entertainment and refreshments, it will be held June 13 and 14, from 3 p.m. 'til 3 p.m. All money that is raised will go to the American Cancer Society. Please watch for more details, it promises to be an event not to be missed!

Congratulations go to Douglas A. Catalano, who was recently named president and chief operating officer at Peritus Software Services, Inc. With his incredible computer background, he is a sure winner, and we will undoubtedly be hearing more about Mr. Catalano!

Speaking of Cohasset's outstanding businessmen, how about Geoffrey Nothnagle! Mr. Nothnagle was honored by the American Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay recently with the organization's trademark disaster relief helmet. Mr. Nothnagle was recognized for his outstanding service to and dedication to the mission of the Red Cross! Quite an honor indeed, and a well deserved one!

Many will remember the Shea family, they lived on Elm Street 30-odd years ago. Well, Laurel Shea Gallivan called me last week, she will be coming to Cohasset this summer for the class reunion — she reports that her brother, Terry, recently got married, she is fine, and all is well with the Sheas. Laurel lives in Virginia!

That brings me to one last request for the week — last summer I received a letter from Sharon (McEwen) Brennan, and she said that she and her husband, Jim, were going to be in town for his 35th reunion. Well, I misplaced her letter, and never responded, and feel terrible about it, and want to get in touch with her so she can come to our class reunion — I know she lives in Kentucky, and that both she and Jim teach — can anyone help? Please?!

That's the news for the week — this being vacation week, everyone is doing something, so please let us know what it was that you and/or your family did for excitement!

Cohasset Has New District Attorney

By Marilyn Jackson
COHASSET MARINER

He's a prosecutor's prosecutor, a man who has spent the past 18 years fighting crime and injustice.

And last week, 43-year-old Jeffrey A. Locke of Wellesley was formally sworn in as the chief law enforcement officer of the county — district attorney.

Gov. William F. Weld administered the oath of office to Locke in the hallowed courtroom of the Norfolk County Superior Court, the same courtroom where Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti were prosecuted in 1921.

Weld had appointed Locke several weeks ago to fill the vacancy created after longtime District Attorney William D. Delahunt of Quincy was elected to Congress in November. Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci had sworn Locke into office a month ago.

Former Sen. David H. Locke, a staunch Republican, served as master of ceremonies.

"I never thought I'd be so happy to see another Democrat go to Congress," said the father of the new district attorney, who also is a Republican.

But partisan politics will not be part of the district attorney's office, the younger Locke vowed, as he praised his predecessor and staff and the programs Delahunt had initiated. "It's about the administratation of justice," he said.

Marianne Hinkle, director of the domestic violence and sexual assault unit in the district attorney's office, told the audience of judges, politicians, lawyers and court personnel, told Weld he had selected a "career prosecutor dedicated to public service...committed to innovation and compassion," which have been the hallmark of the district attorney's office.

Knowing his work as an assistant district attorney and an assistant U.S. attorney, Hinkle said she was reassured that the standards of excellence set by Delahunt will endure under Locke's leadership.

But last Thursday's program was filled with gentle political nudges. Attorney General L. Scott Harshbarger told Weld, "Once again you have made a wonderful choice of a major public figure.

"When you look back and reflect on your career — in the not too distant future — I know you will be proud of this decision," said Harshbarger, who is planning a gubernatorial bid in two years.

He pointed out that Delahunt continues to represent many of the people in Norfolk County now as their congressman and that his successes in the areas of domestic violence and civil rights will continue under Locke, whom he described as an exceptional person and an outstanding, brilliant career prosecutor.

Harshbarger was the Middlesex District Attorney when Locke began his prosecutorial career, although Locke had helped prosecute his first case in Quincy District Court when he was a law student at Boston University School of Law; he handled his first criminal jury trial in Dedham District Court. Locke completed his undergraduate work at Georgetown.

He joined the Middlesex County District Attorney's office in 1980 and remained there nine years, specializing in arson prosecutions and earning the moniker "Sparky," disclosed Suffolk County District Attorney Ralph Martin, who also had worked with Locke in that office.

Locke, said Martin, "has served with distinction both as an assistant district attorney and assistant U.S. attorney." But, he advised, when heading a government agency and serving as a community leader, you are the boss and there are great expectations.

"You have awesome power and responsibility" in this job, and "it's impossible to do with perfection, but the highest standards are required. It's the best job I've had.

"And when you leave, you will have your reputation and your family."

Weld described Locke as being "tough as nails on criminals," then added that he was innovative, pointing to the time he left a leaking fountain pen in his pocket, the better to hold the jury's attention.

When it was time for Locke to speak, he paid tribute to his mentors — Harshbarger, Middlesex District Attorney Thomas Reilly, former U.S. Attorney Wayne Budd and present U.S. Attorney Donald Stern — who were in the courtroom. And he acknowledged former Lt. Gov. and Mrs. Edward McLaughlin, the parents of Paul McLaughlin, the Suffolk County assistant district attorney who was "cut down by violence" in 1995.

Taking historical note, he focused on what issues faced Norfolk County in 1793 when it separated from Suffolk County. At that time the court addressed mostly civil disputes; its criminal docket was handled in seasonal sessions.

Today, he said, criminal matters dominate the court. "A child back then who carried a pocketknife probably intended to carve his initials in a tree; today, he may be carrying a knife with the intention to harm another or protect himself.

EDITORIALS & OPINIONS

A Powerful Misconception

The word "power" was once used to indicate the ability or authority to get something done. For instance someone might say "Town meeting lacks the power to approve a certain article." "Power" can also mean the energy level of a particular object, such as "the power of an engine."

It is this last meaning that apparently brought us the phrase "power walking," which evidently means "energetic walking."

But now, in the form of last week's Boston Globe article on Cohasset, we have a new use of the word "power:" the power suburb!

And it seems, while no one was looking, Cohasset has turned into one, whatever it may be!

And whatever the article was, it was hardly powerful. Instead, it was downright misleading, creating stereotypes and prompting more questions than it answered.

First of all, isn't a bit odd to pick out a single house, admit that it is atypical, and then devote half the article to that family? What was served by listing family members and how much their various houses are assessed at?

Isn't that stereotyping? What about the hundreds of Cohasset houses that are modest, typical middle-class homes? Wouldn't a photo of one or two of them provide a bit of balance in any accurate article about the town?

Another odd thing about the story was the list of "movers, shakers and players." Yes, there are some very successful people in Cohasset, but they are not necessarily active in local affairs. They may be movers and shakers, but not here. Some of those on the list are unfamiliar faces at town meeting.

But what was even more strange was the glaring omission from the list: former Congressman Gerry Studds.

The list included former State Sen. William Weeks, who left Beacon Hill some 20 years ago, and New York Congressman Amory Houghton, who summers here, but did not see fit to mention a Congressman, who is actually from Cohasset and who retired only this year.

Perhaps Studds, a liberal gay, does not fit the image the article wanted to give the town.

And what about the obsessive attention given to so-called class distinctions? Is figuring out who is or isn't a "townie" worthwhile? Aren't such distinctions somewhat arbitrary and artificial in today's social fluid world? Compare the child of a professional fisherman who graduates from an Ivy League school and goes on to become a diplomat, with the child of a banker who decides to become a local carpenter. Which is the "townie?" Neither? Both? Why does it matter?

The sentence "contact with reality - substantial townie population" was particularly strange. Maybe the author of the article should stand on Rte. 3A at 6 am on some cold, snowy morning and watch the procession of cars gingerly making their way toward Boston. Are the drivers of those cars somehow out of touch with reality simply because they are heading for generally well-paying jobs? Considering the high tax bills and staggering college tuitions facing many of these people, it's a safe bet they have a pretty clear view what's going on. On the other hand, those of us who work locally can often forget how unpleasant urban life can be and are routinely horrified by the traffic on those occasions when we have to be in Boston early on a weekday morning.

Another unanswered question is that of education. According to the article, Cohasset's education spending is only average, yet the high school has the highest percentage of those going on to four-year colleges in the state. Could we not infer that the schools may just possibly be doing something right? And that the dreaded "townie" just might value education by encouraging his own children?

And what about all the non-snobby reasons a person would want to live in Cohasset - the art center, the drama group, recreational opportunities? Except for boating, these weren't mentioned.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Pay-As-You-Throw

To the Editor:

The recycling committee has worked hard over the years to reduce the cost of disposing of our trash. We have been able to take many items out of the mainstream and recycle them. It is our desire to continue improving on this. Through many hours of study and seminars we believe (as does the state) that one of the best ways to reduce our trash and increase our recycling is with the PAY-AS-YOU-THROW system. This system will not only reduce our trash (which many studies and 75 cities and towns in the Commonwealth have shown) it is the fairest and most equitable for everyone. The person who does not dispose of much trash does not subsidize those that have much more.

At the present time it cost us approximately $75 to take each ton of trash to Semass. Some have said that we are paying to get rid of our recyclables. So why bother to recycle? Yes, at times we do pay to have our recyclable material taken away. However, it is more cost-effective to recycle. At this time we are paying $20 a ton to take our newspaper and junk mail to the mill. We had been paying $20 a ton to take our corrugated away and now we are getting $40 a ton to the mill floor.

We believe if we look at this positively, it will work to everyone's advantage. We also believe it will reduce our trash and improve our environment while reducing our cost of sending our trash to Semass.

The recycling committee is having a hearing on the PAY-AS-YOU-THROW system Feb. 20 at 7:30 p.m. in the Town Hall auditorium. We urge everyone to bring their concerns or questions to this hearing.

Stewardship of Mind and Land

To the Editor:

Many readers of the Mariner saw the article in the rival Boston Sunday Globe, South Weekly section, about the renewal of interest in stewardship of our seacoast and our maritime heritage. We are pleased that the article mentioned the non-profit Cohasset Lightkeepers' proposal to establish a Learning Laboratory for Marine Biology and Genetic Research.

Our primary interest is stewardship of the intellectual promise of our students by providing extra-curricular opportunities for hands-on science and mind-expanding experience with research. However, stewardship of the town's precious waterfront property is important to us also, and the laboratory establishes a worthwhile non-commercial anchor point that will help prevent the former Hagerty property from degenerating into an overflow parking lot for the marina across the street.

Students of all ages will enjoy the extra-curricular lab experience because they want to be there, and surely that experience is just as much recreation as is athletics and boating.

Conversion of the former Cohasset Colonials furniture showroom into a Learning Laboratory is consistent with and complementary to improvement of the boat-launching ramp and parking lot. Removal of the building, which occupies about 2 percent of the property, to gain a few parking spaces which might be used on summer weekends, seems a poor trade-off. The renewed interest in stewardship of our maritime heritage and of our seacoast assets may discourage those who would perpetuate the careless destructiveness of the past.

Cohasset Library Story Hour

Registrations are currently being accepted for the Spring Story Hour at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Story hours will be held Thursday and Friday mornings at 10 a.m., beginning March 6 and March 7. The session lasts for six weeks. Each 45-minute program consists of several picture book stories, simple fingerplays, songs and crafts. Children must be at least 3-1/2 to participate. To register, call the library at 383-1348.

DONATE USED CHILDREN'S BOOKS

The Friends of the Cohasset Library need donations of used children's books (only in good condition, please) for their annual book sale this spring. Please bring your books in shopping bags to the front desk of the library. The date of the book sale, which will include all categories of used books, will be announced in this newspaper soon. If you would like to make a tax-deductible monetary donation to the library, please send a check made payable to the Friends of the Paul Pratt Library, to 106 South Main St., Cohasset, 02025.

FREE MUSEUM PASSES

A reminder to Cohasset library cardholders: there are free museum passes available to the Boston Computer Museum, the Museum of Science, Museum of Fine Arts, Children's Museum, the New England Aquarium and Plimoth Plantation (courtesy of Lucille McLoughlin). Telephone in advance to reserve a pass, 383-1348.

HOLLIS EXHIBIT CONTINUES

Landscape and still-life artist Susan A. Hollis of North Easton currently has on exhibit at the Paul Pratt Library a group of her recent paintings. The exhibit, sponsored by the South Shore Art Center and the Friends of the Paul Pratt Library, will continue through March 8.

Gourmet Dinner Will Benefit Carousel

The Friends of the Paragon Carousel, Inc. and Ed Kane of Tosca Restaurant in Hingham have announced plans for a gourmet wine dinner to be held at the restaurant to benefit the carousel. The event will take place Monday, March 10, at 7 p.m. All proceeds from the $100 per person cost will go to the carousel. Tickets must be purchased in advance, and reservations may be made by calling the restaurant at 740-0080.

The Paragon Carousel was built in Hull in 1928 and is one of only 60 grand carousels still in existence. The Friends organization was formed to preserve the carousel in its current location and to complete the restoration of the historic treasure.

Snow Row Heats Up Winter

The number of boats lined up on the beach at the start is testament to the excitement of the Snow Row, the Maritime Program's signature race. The Snow Row is a hard-working winter event, covering a three-and-three-quarter mile triangular course. The race starts off the beach at the Hull Boathouse, LeMans style (worth a whole role of film in itself), and continues through Hull and Hingham Bays around Sheep Island, past the Peddocks Island Day Marker, and back to the beach.

The whole event is within view of the boathouse, so this is a particularly enjoyable event for spectators. It is also a rare opportunity to see an amazing array of wooden pulling boats up close on the beach and in action – peapods, dories, wherries, whitehalls, ocean shells, pilot gigs, Bantry Bay gigs, and Irish curraghs.

The race, which begins at 11 a.m., March 2, at the Pemberton Point Boathouse, has five boat categories: workboats, livery boats, coxed boats, ocean kayaks and ocean shells. A few notes to all race participants: 1) all racers must be members of the USRA or the HLM Rowing Association; 2) all boats must carry PFDs, bailers, and whistles; 3) all coxed boats must begin the race bow on the beach; and 4) the HLM Race Committee reserves the right to cancel the race or keep individual boats from setting forth due to weather conditions or rower skills level.

The Snow Row's one-of-a-kind LeMans start embodies the spirit of our style of competition (organized chaos), so come out for a laugh and then step inside the boathouse to warm up with a cup of hot coffee or cocoa. The Lifesaving Museum, one mile down the beach from the boathouse, will be hosting a free open house following the race. For more information about the Snow Row, call Ed McCabe at 925-0992, 925-4826, or Box 221, Hull, 02045.

Wrestlers March on to State Division Championships

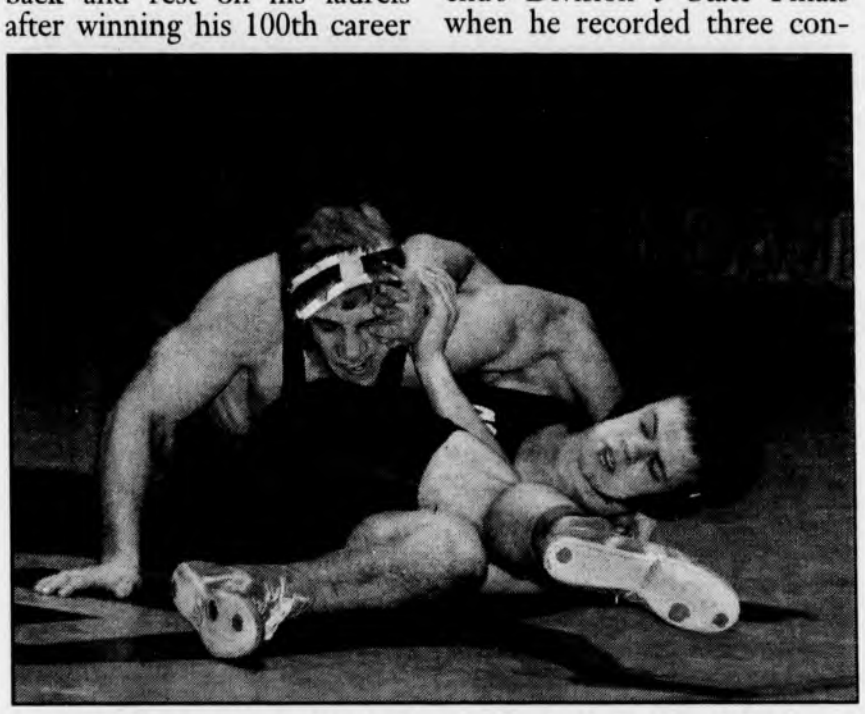
Duffy and Buckley Earn South Sectional Titles

By Joe Reardon
COHASSET MARINER

Kevin Duffy didn't exactly sit back and rest on his laurels after winning his 100th career match against Middleboro. Quite the contrary.

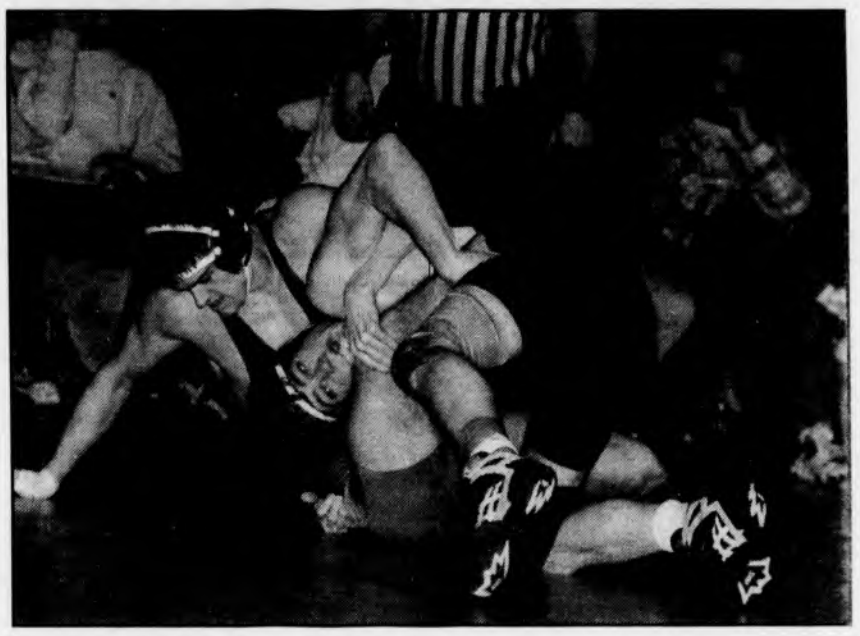
The senior captain earned the No. 1 seed in this weekend's Division 3 State Finals when he recorded three consecutive pins and won his last match, 12-3, to dominate the 135-pound division at the Division 3 South Sectional Championships at Carver.

Duffy, who raised his record to 32-1, joined fellow teammate Justin Buckley (171), the winner of his division, in leading 11 Cohasset wrestlers to the divisional meet. Buckley moved to 30-2 on the season in nailing down his first South Sectional title. He'll be seeded second in his weight class on Friday night.



The meet was a successful one for the Skippers as the squad tied the school record of 11 qualifiers, which was set in 1988 and repeated in 1992.

"Most of the kids moved up a seed or two so you can see they really stepped it up for this meet," said Cohasset head coach Torin Sweeney.



Mike Rossi garnered second place at 145, losing in an exciting final to Foxboro's Jake Leighton, voted meet's most outstanding wrestler. Mike Baird was the runner-up at 119 pounds and Ben Littauer (125) wrestled his way to a fourth-place finish.

Freshman Chris Pratt, one of the most promising young wrestlers on the Skipper squad, nailed down an impressive sixth at 112. Doug Sheerin (140) was fourth, as was Luke Caldwell (152) and Justin Golden (160). Adam Sasso qualified by working his way to fifth at 189 pounds and J.P. Laugelle (215)

All-Star Game Notes

By Mike Farley
Special to the Mariner

Some odds and ends from Friday night's All-Star basketball double-feature:

If at first you don't succeed...Norwell's Matt Lewis, a 6-foot-7 center, was one of several All-Stars in the boys event attempting to display his dunking skills. After missing two attempts in succession, on a double-pump and reverse, Matt came back with a resounding double-pump jam to redeem himself in front of his hometown supporters.

Up, up and away....Marshfield's Eric Wilson, a senior and one of four Ram players on the ACL squad, missed a dunk opportunity on a breakaway early in the second half. When he arrived back to the bench, Marshfield and All-Star coach Paul Wholey took advantage of the ribbing opportunity. "He's been a special player and a key to our success," said Wholey of Wilson, a major part of the team's ACL championship. "We've talked about the time to dunk, and I'm glad (the miss) happened in an All-Star game. It's something to kid about."

And the SSL is on the power play....Simon Peters of Scituate was on the South Shore League roster, and perhaps could have dialed his coach, John Ekstrom, head of the Scituate High School math department, for counting assistance. You see, with the SSL nursing a 10-point lead midway through the second half, ACL coach Wholey wondered aloud why an SSL player had gone unguarded by his team. Upon further review, he and the rest of the crowd, including the referees, determined that the SSL had six players on the court. A technical foul against the SSL resulted, and Wholey and Cohasset and SSL coach Ron Ford kidded each other on the sidelines about the unintentional mishap. Afterwards, Wholey pointed out that things like that can happen, especially with the frequency of player turnover that goes along with mass substitutions. He likened the changes to line shifts in hockey.

Not all was lost for the SSL girls...Unofficially, the SSL won the knee brace competition. Seniors Danielle Ryan from Hanover and Meg Barao from Norwell provided the SSL with a 2-0 victory in the protective gear category.

And the winner is...League championship plaques were presented prior to the start of the boys' game. Accepting as the SSL champs were coach Bill Gerety and his senior girls from Norwell and Pat Shea with her Duxbury girls captains. On the boys side, Ron Ford and five of his players from Cohasset were acknowledged as the SSL champs, while Wholey and his four-player All-Star contingent accepted for the ACL champion Marshfield Rams.

SSL Throws its Winning Hand

Ford Coaches South Shore League All-Star Hoopsters Past ACL

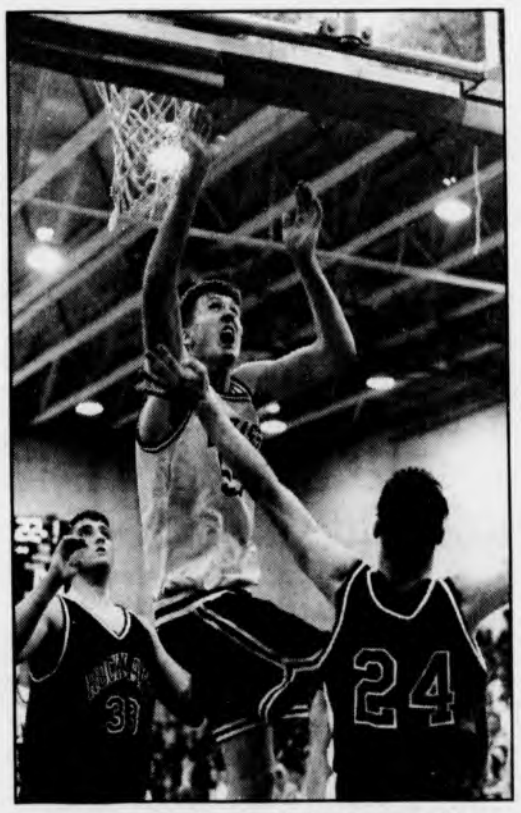
By Mike Farley
Special to the Mariner

Hanover's Jon Peacock and Norton's Craig Wencis, both seniors sporting the number 10 on their game jerseys, teamed up for a dramatic finish to the boys' All-Star basketball game Friday night at Norwell High School.

Following an Atlantic Coast League missed chance with only seconds remaining, and the score tied at 69-69, Wencis and Peacock out-dueled an ACL opponent for possession of the ball near half-court.

Wencis managed to get the ball to an open Peacock. And Peacock, with a defender tailing him like a newspaper boy on collection day, raced to the basket to score the winning hoop on a reverse lay-up with no time left to give coach Ron Ford's South Shore League All-Stars the 71-69 victory.

Peacock finished as the game's leading scorer, tossing in 16 points, nine of which came courtesy of three three-pointers.



The SSL's leading scorer wasn't exactly sure how much time was left when he drove for the final hoop, saying that "It was under five seconds. I just knew I had to get the ball up quick."

The contest was close throughout most of the evening, especially in the early going, as the assembled cast representing their league's best got acquainted with each other.

Turnovers and errant passes, however, were soon replaced with a fun-filled night of basketball showcasing the local basketball elite.

The SSL established a five-point differential, 31-26, which lasted about as

Youth Sports Center Opens in Pembroke

North American Sports, a youth sports center, opened in Pembroke Feb. 1. The sports center features a number of innovative ideas as well as traditional training equipment. The facility provides training in baseball, softball, basketball and soccer to children ages 5 through 18. Each sport is taught one season at a time, with group and individual lessons available as well as facility and equipment rental available to the public. From February through June, the center is set up for baseball and softball, with batting cages, screen hitting and throwing/fielding areas. A number of specialized clinics will also be held throughout the year. The center is the perfect place for teams to get in some great preseason practice!

The center is featuring a summer basketball camp and fall basketball program with special equipment for the younger child.

Starting in November, soccer will be the featured sport and includes a goalkeeping program. After soccer the center once again begins its baseball/softball programs. The public is invited to come and tour the facility. The hours are 2:30 to 9 p.m., Monday through Friday, and 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturdays and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sundays.

Expanded hours are in effect during school vacation weeks.

gets underway next week. Instead, the Skippers (15-7) are looking ahead to a likely first-round game at Greater New Bedford.

The Skippers fell behind to Carver midway through the first half, but Cohasset's home crowd was treated to something special when senior Ryan Bishop slammed down a double-fisted dunk and Raheem Shepard made an acrobatic base-line move. The Skippers trailed 38-33 at halftime.

J.L. Williams, after netting only two points in the opening half, came out with his game face on in the second. A three pointer, an offensive putback and a four-point play tied the game for Cohasset.

The rest of the team followed Williams' lead. Bishop netted a free throw to push the Skippers ahead. However, Carver held on and the teams swapped leads throughout the second half. Bishop's layup with 2:15 remaining gave Cohasset a 62-61 edge. Just under two minutes later Paul-Michael Quintin sank two free throws to put the Skippers up by two.

Carver, though, came right back and scored five straight points and led 69-66 with 5.2 seconds left in the game.

A Cohasset timeout set up a simple, but effective inbound play. Williams fired a 65-foot pass to Bishop, who made a leaping catch and dished to Pat Hurley on the wing. Hurley fired a pass to Davis, who took an off-balance three-point shot as time expired. The shot missed and the Crusaders had dealt the Skippers their third South Shore League defeat.

Cohasset swallowed two more marks in the loss column after defeats to Hingham and Milton in the Hall of Fame Tournament at Massasoit Community College.

These losses bring the Skippers' record to 15-7, but also whets the appetite of the players who seek the state title. The book on Cohasset going into the season was that it may not overcome the loss of star Jared Hardwick. So far, the Skippers have fared well, but haven't had one player step up to deliver consistent 20-point performances. In last year's state tourney, Bishop ratcheted his game up a notch and carried more than his share of the workload. Others will need to pick up the slack if Cohasset is to win its first Division 3 State title under head coach Ron Ford.

PERSONAL FINANCE

When is a fund worth its fee

Edited by Amy K. Barrett
WORTH MAGAZINE

If an equity mutual fund has a horrible year, industry watchers say it's pulled a "Steadman." The Steadman family of funds, based in Washington, D.C., are notorious bad performers, losing around a third of their value in the middle of a market rally.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

Part of the trouble may be that the stock they picked didn't do well. But what clinches the funds' losses year after year should be a caveat for all mutual fund investors: high annual fees.

"No one who charges high fees can be an above-average performer in the long run," said James Cloonan, chairman of the American Association of Individual Investors in Chicago. "Out of funds in the U.S., 1.5 percent might be the top end you'd want to pay (in annual fees), considering too there is no significant load."

Often when people shop for mutual funds, they scrutinize the funds' initial sales charges — called loads — and then ignore the companies' further costs used for advertising, research, mailings, lawyer fees, prospectus publishing, etc. It's easy to do because you don't actually have to pay the annual fee; it's deducted out of the fund's assets every year before the profits are distributed and used to pay the money manager and cover operating costs.

A percentage point — or fraction of a percentage point — difference in fees may seem insignificant at first, but the money saved by lower fees can appreciate substantially over the long term. If you invested, for example, in a $1 billion fund that carries a fee of 1.35 percent a year of the assets, instead of one that has a fee of 2.35 percent, you would own a piece a fund that was automatically $10 million richer. Say your fund goes on to gain 10 percent each year for the next five years. That $10 million would turn into almost $70 million. Distribute that amongst — for the sake of simplicity — 70,000 shareholders, and you've earned yourself $1,000 over five years because you bought the cheaper fund.

Lower annual fees, however, don't necessarily promise fat returns. In fact, they are useless if a fund doesn't profit. And it's possible for a fund that appreciates significantly to have above-average costs. More than anything, a fund's outcome is determined by how its particular investment focus fits with the current market environment. Take, for example, Vanguard index funds, which tend to have inexpensive fees. The Vanguard International Equity Index Pacific fund uses a low 0.25 percent of the fund's value, but has increased in value only an average of 3.5 percent a year over the last five years, thanks partly to Japan's economic woes. On the other hand, Vanguard's Index 500, which mirrors the Standard & Poor's 500 Index, charges 0.2 percent a year and has gained 15 percent over that period, reflecting the success of the U.S. stock market.

So, lower operating costs aren't everything, but they do help you hedge your bets.

By the same token, don't throw out all funds with higher fees. While the average annual fee for an equity fund is about 1.5 percent, you should consider the type of investment focus a fund has when judging whether it has a reasonable fee. A fund that invests in U.S. small-capitalization stocks or international stocks tends to be more expensive to run than one that holds large-cap shares. Why? Small companies and foreign companies can be more obscure and require more research. "There is more efficiency in the large-cap market," explains Brian Mattes, a spokesman for Vanguard. The corporate behemoths are closely researched, so there is not as big an element of risk or surprise.

As a result, it may be worthwhile to pay a little extra for small-cap and global funds, while making sure your large-cap funds have below-average fees, said Jeffrey Keil, vice president of Lipper Analytical. "Intuitively it really makes some sense," said Keil. "Looking at large-cap stocks there is typically a lot of analysts tracking them, and, therefore, a tighter clustering of returns. Then what makes the difference is expenses."

And the opposite holds true for smaller companies. Besides tending to require more research, they are more expensive to trade. Because fewer people trade a given small-cap stock, when a money manager goes to sell it, he may have to lower the price he's asking for to get a buyer — or vice versa if he's buying the stock, depending on the availability of shares in the market place. Funds that invest overseas can be costlier as well, due to higher overseas trading costs, among other things.

These greater risks and expenses can turn into greater rewards if the companies' business takes off and attracts investor interest. "On the small-cap side there's a chance for better returns because they may not be covered by analysts. People can be rewarded because they paid for better research," Keil said.

These distinctions are not set in stone, of course. Each fund is unique and requires particular evaluation. It's important to remember that all annual fees can make the difference between below- and above-market performance for a fund. Only about 17 percent of growth and value equity funds perform better than the S&P 500, according to a Vanguard study; and a mere 5.5 percent exceed its gains by at least 2 percentage points. If the odds that a given money manager will outdo the market are that slim, it may be worth parking your money in an S&P 500 index fund like Vanguard's. In fact, the Vanguard family of funds also contains other index funds that allow you to focus on certain stocks while paying less than 0.5 percent.

When evaluating funds, compare ones similar in investment style and see what they cost. Any annual fee above 2 percent could be a red flag that you may be looking at a so-called Steadman.

South Sectional Titles

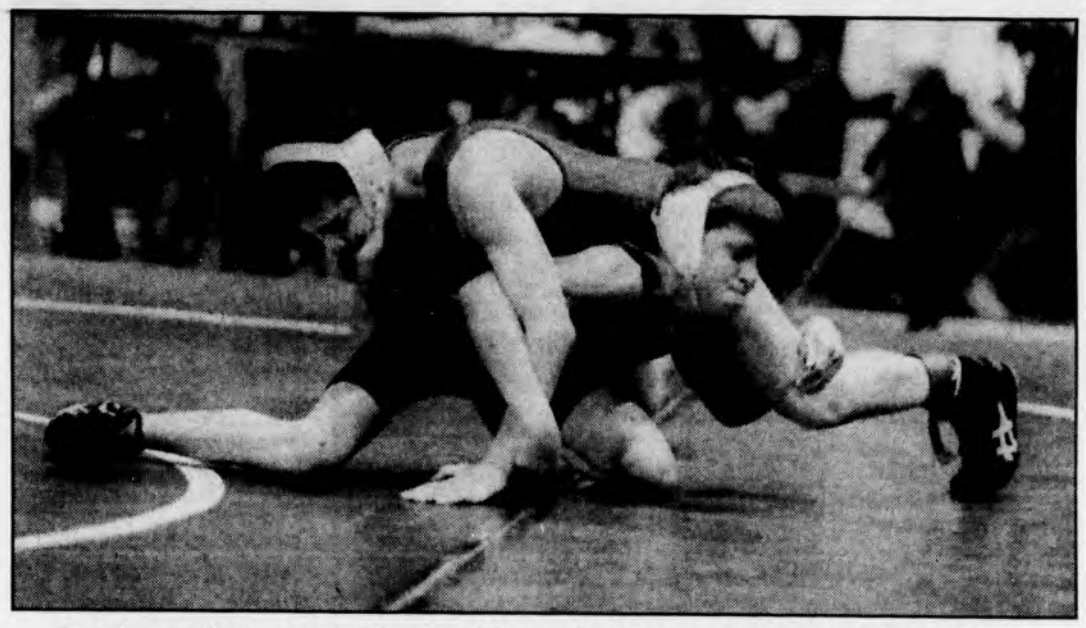
guaranteed himself an extended season after taking fourth.

Sweeney said he would like to improve on the team's eighth-place finish in 1993, but admitted it will be no easy task to move up.

"We'll have to wrestle very well," he said.

With the South Sectionals behind them, the Skippers will be working out with several wrestling teams in the area in preparation for this weekend. Boston College High, Hanover and Scituate were just a few of the teams Sweeney said Cohasset would be practicing with.

Working out with the other teams, Sweeney said, serves a valuable purpose. Wrestlers don't get stale practicing with the same partner and they are challenged more by other athletes who have similar goals. A bond forms between the South teams and the wrestlers cheer each other on at the Division 3 meet.



"You get the opportunity to wrestle different guys," Sweeney said. "The wrestlers pull for one another because they are all representing the South."

Leading up to the South Sectional meet, Sweeney concentrated on repetitive drills during the workouts. He said earlier that week he had no specific plans to introduce new moves or escapes. "The instruction is pretty much done at this point," he said.

Sweeney expected defending Division 2 State Champion Foxboro to be the odds-on favorite to capture first place. He did say, however, that many of the teams were pretty evenly matched, making the battle to secure the second through fifth place a "real dogfight."

Cohasset recently found itself at the losing end of its dual meet against the tough Foxboro team, dropping a 51-23. The competition against the Warriors, and their four wrestlers who placed in last year's New England championships, was a good feeler for the Skippers heading into the South Sectionals.

Cohasset had five winners, three of whom won by pin. Craig Sheerin (103), Baird (119) and Buckley (171) took pin victories, while Littauer (125) and Duffy (135) won on points.

Duxbury High wrestler Kevin Flaherty (top) tries to pin his Cohasset opponent, Craig Sheerin, in the 103-pound division in the Skippers' victory.

The Skippers had little problem with win No. 16, taking the final regular season meet against Duxbury, 52-12. The Skippers smothered the Green Dragons by running out to an insurmountable 52-0 lead before Duxbury recorded its first victory. Seventh-grader Paul Previte wrestled impressively in defeating Green Dragon eighth-grader Ian Stewart by pin. Doug Sheerin, Caldwell and Buckley defeated their respective opponents by pin as well.

Winning Hand

long as it took for players to enter and leave the court on the ensuing mass substitution at the 4:12 mark of the first half.

At that point, seniors Pete Condon (eight points) and Jeff Gannon (six points) from Rockland scored the ACL's next six points to give their team a 32-31 lead.

The ACL maintained the lead until the closing seconds of the opening half, when East Bridgewater's Marc Taylor unloaded a three-point bomb to give the SSL a 36-35 lead at the break.

The second half featured an array of three-pointers from the SSL, which built a 12-point lead midway through with the two sides preparing for another round of subs. Contributing to the trifecta shower were Cohasset's Paul-Michael Quintin with one and Peacock, who had two from beyond the line and another as a result of being fouled on a double-pump score in the key and a free throw.

The ACL would then begin its comeback, chipping away on the strength of some fine play from Marshfield senior Eric Wilson, who finished with 12 points.

Wilson would score six of the ACL's next 14 points, including two consecutive baskets to knot the game at 63-63. Ram center Ryan Kent also played a solid inside game for the ACL stars.

The two units exchanged baskets until 69-69 and the fantastic finish at the buzzer.

It was a fitting conclusion to a night meant for fun.

As ACL coach Paul Wholey explained, "It's nice to get (the kids) together in a more relaxed atmosphere. They're usually competing against each other (and now get a chance) to play with each other.

"It's an opportunity to have some fun and for the South Shore area to see some of its better players," added the coach of the 1996-1997 ACL champion Rams.

Wholey also joked about losing the game to coach Ford.

"I think Ron had six players on the court a couple times and that last Peacock hoop definitely came after the buzzer," Wholey laughed. "I blame Ron and I'm filing a protest tomorrow. Let's suit up and play the game again."

Public Notices

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
THE TRIAL COURT
THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT DEPARTMENT
Norfolk Division

Docket No. 97E0012-PP1

To Robert Davenport and James Michael Davenport of Cohasset and the Town of Cohasset and to all other persons interested.

A petition has been presented to said Court by Vincent Sestito of Dorchester, Mass. in the County of Suffolk representing that he holds a part or share of certain land lying in Cohasset in said County of Norfolk and briefly described as follows: a certain lot of land being contiguous with land known and numbered as 135 Sohier Street, Cohasset, Norfolk County, Massachusetts, as further described on an unrecorded plan entitled "Plan of Land Sohier Street, Cohasset, Mass. June 12, 1996. Scale 1"=40'. Eng. Surveyor: Neil J. Murphy, Assoc. P.C. 231 C.J.C. Highway Cohasset, MA 02025. Owner: Estate of E.E. Sestito, P.O. Box 338, Cohasset, MA 02025", a true copy of which is annexed hereto, consisting according to said plan of 4.1 acres of land more or less, and bounded and described as follows:

SOUTHEASTERLY along Sohier Street, three hundred six and 00/100 (306.00) feet;

WESTERLY by land owned by Robert V. and Barbara T. Davenport, one hundred sixty-one and 00/100 (161.00) feet;

SOUTHWESTERLY along land owned by Robert V. and Barbara T. Davenport, one hundred twenty-five and 00/100 (125.00) feet;

NORTHWESTERLY by land of Philomena and Barbara A. Conte, two hundred ninety-five and 00/100 (295.00) feet;

NORTHEASTERLY by land of Town of Cohasset, one hundred ninety-two and 00/100 (192.00) feet;

SOUTHEASTERLY by land formerly a New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Right of Way, three hundred ninety-four and 00/100 (394.00) feet; and SOUTHEASTERLY by land now or formerly owned by John E. and Patricia A. Conway, two hundred ninety-six and 41/100 (296.41) feet.

Being a portion of the real estate property described in the deed from John M. Bready to Elena E. Sestito dated November 28, 1968, recorded with Norfolk Registry of Deeds in Book 4589, at Page 329; see also Estate of Elena S. Sestito, Norfolk Probate Court No. 93P0905-E1 setting forth that he desires that pursuant to the third clause of Elena E. Sestito's will, that he be granted so much vacant land on Sohier Street in Cohasset...as meets lot requirements for building a home. And praying that partition may be made of all the land aforesaid according to law, and to that end that a commissioner be appointed to make such partition of all, or any part of said land which the Court finds cannot be advantageously divided.

If you desire to object thereto, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham/649 High St. P.O. Box 269, Dedham, MA 02027-0269 before ten o'clock in the forenoon on the nineteenth day of March 1997, the return day of this citation.

Witness, David H. Kopelman, Esquire, First Justice of said Court, this seventh day of February 1997.

Thomas Patrick Hughes
Register.

Community Garden Club Meeting

The monthly meeting of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset will be held at St. Stephen's Church Tuesday, Feb. 25. Coffee will be served at 9 a.m.; the meeting will commence at 9:30 a.m.

The topic this month is "Pollution and Its Effect on Habitat and Environment." Greg Mertz, from the New England Wildlife Center, will define the many faces of pollution and ways in which we can improve our habitat and the larger environment.

Be a Winner for Cabaret '97

The First Parish Church in Cohasset is preparing for another outrageous midwinter extravaganza — Cabaret '97 — "Those Fabulous Fifties" to be held on March 15 and 16. Celebrating its fifth year, Cabaret promises to be "brighter, bolder, and more hilarious" than ever before. Members of the church are currently selling raffle tickets for the event which is always a sell out. For $2 you can win two reserved seats for the Saturday evening performance and buffet or Sunday afternoon matinee. Call the church office, 383-1100, for further information.

South Shore Spinners Guild

The South Shore Spinners Guild will meet Thursday, Feb. 20, from 7 to 10 p.m. at the Second Parish Church, 685 Main St. (Route 228), Hingham. After a business meeting and light refreshments, the meeting will be devoted to learning to spin cotton by three different methods. Members are requested to bring their spinning wheels and cards for an exciting, hands-on lesson in spinning this natural fiber. Questions? Call (617) 545-1880. Visitors are welcome.

"Cohasset Works": Victoria Chin, left, owner of Victoria's by the Sea Antiques, Cohasset Harbor, chats with high school friend Diane McLaughlin, owner of Echo Lake Antiques in Scituate. They sit amid the Colonial comfort of Chin's store. Both live in Scituate.

Bridge Lessons with Popular Teacher

Popular Bronze Life Master bridge director Anne Bell of Milton will teach a series of lessons during March in conjunction with luncheons at the South Shore Country Club, 274 South St.

The beginners' bridge will be preceded by luncheon at 12:30 p.m. followed by bridge lessons Monday afternoons, commencing March 3, 10, 17 and 24. An intermediate bridge course will be held from 9:45 a.m. to noon followed by luncheon Friday, March 7, 14, 21 and 28. Classes are limited, so reserve enrollment by calling 749-1720.

Alzheimer's Support Group

"Making It Manageable: Treating the Symptoms and Problem Behaviour" will be presented by Susan R. Donaldson, M.D. at the Feb. 26 meeting, 7:30 p.m., of the Alzheimer's Disease Support Group of the South Shore.

Dr. Donaldson will speak on the importance of a thorough diagnosis and how it benefits the patient and the patient's family. Dr. Donaldson is the division director of psychiatry at Quincy Hospital and director of the recently opened outpatient clinic for cognitive disorders. The clinic provides diagnostic and assessment services for older adults suffering from memory loss or cognitive impairment.

Dr. Donaldson is on the faculty of Tufts University Medical School and has published her research in psychiatric journals.

Meetings are held at Thaxter Community Center, 30 Thaxter St., Hingham. Complimentary respite care is available during the meeting at Harbor House Day Health Center, 11 Condito Road, Hingham. Please call Gervaise Haley at (617) 749-4774 by 3 p.m. on Feb. 26 for a respite reservation.

Meetings are free and open to the public. For further information, call (617) 749-5417.

Channel Dredging Money Dries Up

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

Money to pay for dredging the town's outer harbor has dried up, officials learned last week.

The Army Corps of Engineers, the lead federal agency on the project, found out that funds for the estimated $1.5 million harbor dredging project in Cohasset is not in President Clinton's proposed fiscal year 1998 budget.

> 'Little old Cohasset is on the cutting edge of a bad multi-level government problem.'
> — Selectman Peter Pratt.

And because of a derth of small harbor dredging projects, Cohasset is not on the list for "reprogrammed" money — funds that can be redirected if other projects come in under budget.

That means the about $300,000 remaining of the original $400,000 in state/town funds for dredging of the inner harbor might have to be redirected

Everyone Benefits From Advanced Life Support

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

When a Linden Drive woman suffered a serious brain hemorrhage, she needed immediate expert medical service. EMTs on the scene stabilized her and called for paramedics from the South Shore Hospital's Advanced Life Support Unit. The paramedics recognized the seriousness of the her condition and immediately called for a Med-Flight helicopter to take her to a Boston Hospital.

A neurosurgeon who worked on the woman later credited the paramedics with saving her life.

The ALS unit that operates out of the South Shore Hospital in Weymouth provides expert paramedic care to 16 South Shore communities at no cost to taxpayers, according to Peggy Cass, paramedic services coordinator for SSH.

ALS paramedics receive 6,000 requests for service each year and treat more than 3,600 patients per year.

Cass said the program began five years ago as a way of providing cost-effective paramedics to a number of communities serviced by SSH.

Hagerty Group Wrestles with Uses for Property

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

While a majority of the board of selectmen want to tear down the Hagerty house rather than turn it into a lobster lab, the Hagerty committee is continuing to study viable recreational uses for the entire site.

Members of the Hagerty committee met Tuesday night to examine the latest engineer's drawings for a proposed public recreation area at the site.

The latest drawings, created by John Modzelewski of Civil Designs Inc. Consulting Engineers, show parking for six cars with trailers between the Hagerty house and the shoreline, a 135-foot-long boat dock, and a rebuilt path on the west side of the property that crosses over the creek.

The Hagerty house was not addressed in the latest drawing because of its uncertain future.

Pratt to Seek Re-Election; Ofsthun to Run for School Board

Selectman Peter Pratt, 75 Ripley Rd., has taken out papers to seek a second term on the board of selectmen and Kathleen A. Ofsthun, 45 Fair Oaks Lane, plans to run for the school committee. Ralph Perroncello, 10 Pleasant Lane, will seek re-election to the Cohasset Housing Authority; and library trustees Anne C. Bowdoin, 131 Nichols Rd., Patience C. Towle, 180 Lamberts Lane, and Agnes McCann, 104 Doane St., all plan to seek re-election to that board.

Also in the running are: Joseph P. McElroy, 59 Windy Hill, for school committee; Raimund G. Vanderweil, Jr., 500 Jerusalem Rd. for reelection to the board of sewer commissioners; Alfred S. Moore,Jr. 101 Fair Oaks Lane, for reelection to the planning board; Anne C. Bowdoin, 131 Nichols Rd., for reelection to the board of library trustees; Michael C. Patrolia, 15 Cushing Rd., for reelection to the board of assessors; and Mary K. Muncey, 377 S. Main St., for reelection to the recreation commission.

School Committee members JoAnne Chittick and Jim Kirk are not seeking re-election. Recreation commissioner Ted Carroll also said he will step down at the end of his term this spring.

Nomination papers for the May 3 Annual Town Election are available at the town clerk's office and must be turned in by March 17.

The following positions will be available: Selectmen — one for three years; School Committee — two for three years; Trustee Paul Pratt Memorial Library — three for three years; Assessor one for three years; Board of Health — one for three years; Cohasset Housing Authority — one for five years; Planning Board - one for five years; Recreation Commission — three for five years; Sewer Commission — one for three years; and Water Commission — one for three years.

Wednesday, March 19, is the last day to register for the Annual Town Meeting and Annual Town Election. Registration forms are available at the Town Clerk's Office, the Cohasset Post Office and the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. This form may be mailed or hand-delivered to the clerk's office but must be received or postmarked on or before the deadline.

Cohasset Heroes Donate Blood

The Cohasset Community Red Cross thanks the following heroes who have probably saved a life by donating a pint of blood at the last Cohasset Community Blood Drive Jan. 15: Bill Adams, Connie Afshar, Joan Allen, Debbie Anderson, Gary Anderson, Amy Argus, Gloria Bamford of Scituate, Ellen Bash of Hull, Elizabeth Bates, Janice, Jarrod and Mark Batts, Robert Beggan, Victoria Berger, Nancy Burns, Susan Carter, John Chapman, Ryan and Shirley Cibelli, Joseph Curley, Rev. Duxbury Dog to Star in Wizard of Oz

Wins Role Over Seven Toto Hopefuls

Sara Garland, who portrays Dorothy in the upcoming Cohasset Dramatic Club production of 'The Wizard of Oz,' tries out Toto of Duxbury for the part of Toto.

COHASSET MARINER

They came from all over the South Shore to audition for a starring role in the Cohasset Dramatic Club's upcoming production of 'The Wizard of Oz' at St. Luke's Episcopal Church in Scituate on Sunday.

And after walking, sitting, a ride in a basket and a cuddle with Dorothy — the producers made their decision.

Toto — yes that's his real name — beat out seven other hopefuls to portray the dog that has won the hearts of innumerable children ever since Judy Garland took Toto with her to the land of Oz in the musical film of 1939.

Coincidentally, Toto's co-star shares a surname with the actress who played the same role in the movie classic. Sara Garland, 16, a junior at Marshfield High School, will play Dorothy in the show.

The Cohasset Dramatic Club, in its 75th year, put out a casting call for Toto look-alikes after producers were having a dog-gone time finding the right dog for the role.

Although this will be his first stage appearance, Toto is used to lots of distractions.

The 12-pound Yorkshire terrier lives with 80 cats at the Standish Humane Society cat shelter on Congress Street in Duxbury.

His owner, Julia Fratalia, heard about the try-outs from a friend who read the notice in the newspaper.

She said Toto, who attended his first rehearsal Monday, is taking all the attention in stride.

"He's just wonderful," said Fratalia, who works at the David Jon Louison Child Center in Brockton where she adopted Toto 4-1/2 years ago.

"He loves everybody. He's supposed to hate the wicked witch and that will be really hard for him."

Fratalia said the three-times-per-week rehearsals will be harder on her than Toto. She drives him to Scituate and back but, at the director's request, can't stay to watch so she doesn't distract him.

This isn't Toto's first exposure to the limelight. In September, he was the poster dog for the Standish Humane Society benefit walk.

The Wizard of Oz will feature 60 children in the performances scheduled for April 4-6, 9, 11-13 at the Scituate High School auditorium. Tickets are $10 and will be available at the door or by calling Tracy Dieselman at 545-5454. The 75-year-old Cohasset Dramatic Club's usual venue is the stage at Cohasset Town Hall but the size of this production necessitated use of a larger facility.

Life Support

"In late 1990 we formed an ALS study committee and met with fire chiefs and town officials from towns serviced by the hospital to develop a plan to provide better emergency medical coverage to the region," Cass said. "It was the consensus of that group that the most cost effective and efficient solution was to provide paramedics to the towns through a regional service operating out of the hospital."

ALS began operating in May, 1992.

Cass said it would be extremely expensive for towns to maintain their own paramedics. A town would have to hire eight paramedics to maintain 24-hour coverage. Paramedics receive 1,000 hours of basic training, plus an additional 56 hours of refresher courses each year.

Then there are equipment costs and payroll considerations.

"The committee felt there were many benefits to a regional hospital-based service," Cass said. "The patient benefits from the advanced skills of the paramedic. The region benefits as a whole because many towns don't have enough calls to warrant full-time paramedics. The individual towns benefit because the tax base is not affected by ALS service."

Most towns employ a group of emergency medical technicians rather than paramedics. EMTs receive 110 hours of basic training with 21 hours of annual refresher training. EMTs are trained to do all of the functions necessary to stabilize a patient for the trip to the hospital.

The towns serviced by the hospital pay nothing for ALS. All paramedic fees and costs are billed to patients and their insurance companies. Occasionally the paramedics will be called to an incident where they are not really needed. Cass said the hospital doesn't usually charge for those incidents, which make up about 15 percent of all the paramedics' runs.

According to Cass, only about 20 percent of all ambulance calls actually require paramedics. The remaining 80 percent can be handled by EMTs.

The ALS committee felt that a regional service would provide paramedic care where none existed while keeping costs to a minimum.

SSH currently operates two groups of paramedics using two vehicles. The hospital employs 16 full-time paramedics and 14 per diem paramedics. The two vehicles, Chevrolet Blazers, contain ALS equipment but do not have transport capabilities. Two paramedics go out on each call.

Members of the ALS committee said each town already had ambulances that could take people to the hospital, so it was not necessary to use the paramedics for transport. The paramedics would also be free to respond to multiple calls rather than driving patients to SSH.

One of the vehicles is stationed at the hospital and serves 10 communities: Abington, Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Holbrook, Norwell, Rockland, Scituate, and Whitman. A second vehicle stationed in Hanson serves Bridgewater, East Bridgewater, West Bridgewater, Halifax, Hanson and Pembroke.

The hospital has also provided free defibrillator training to the towns served by ALS, as well as training with epinephrine pens-- a device used to inject an anti-allergy drug into patients suffering from severe allergic reactions.

Cass said the additional training ensures residents of outlying communities that a team of expert emergency workers who can handle any emergency will arrive in minutes.

"People in these communities should know that a well-trained team of emergency personnel will be on the scene in a few minutes, whether it's the paramedics or local EMTs," Cass said. "Emergency workers have four to six minutes to restart the heart after someone has suffered cardiac arrest. EMTs with defibrillators and proper training can save a patient's life while the paramedics are on the way."

Town officials and local officials feel the service is invaluable. ALS paramedics have treated more than 500 people in Cohasset over the last five years.

Cohasset Selectmen Chairman Merle Brown said he liked the program because it is cost effective and efficient.

"It is cheaper for us, which is important because our municipal budget is so tight," Brown said. "We don't have to pay for training or additional employees. The paramedics are well trained and professional and they do a good job of complementing our EMTs."

Cohasset Fire Chief Roger Lincoln said ALS was extremely effective.

"Prior to this program we had no paramedics at all," Lincoln said. "Paramedics are trained to a higher level than EMTs and are very valuable. It would be nice to have paramedics on my department but the costs are too high."

Lincoln said his EMTs have benefited greatly from the defibrillator and epi-pen training offered by the hospital.

"Our EMTs can deal with serious injuries, heart attacks, cardiac arrest, bee stings and other allergic reactions, and just about any situation imaginable," Lincoln said. "What the paramedics provide is an extra edge because of their advanced training."

Lincoln said many fire-fighters are becoming certified paramedics because it gives them an edge when they go out on calls. He added that some fire-fighters also want to be paramedics in case towns decide to provide the service locally.

"The future will bring a higher level of training to all emergency personnel," Lincoln said.

Snow Row is March 1

The number of boats lined up on the beach at the start is testament to the excitement of the Snow Row, the Maritime Program's signature race. The Snow Row is a hard-working winter event, covering a three-and-three-quarter mile triangular course. The race starts off the beach at the Hull Boathouse, LeMans style (worth a whole role of film in itself), and continues through Hull and Hingham Bays around Sheep Island, past the Peddocks Island Day Marker, and back to the beach.

The whole event is within view of the boathouse, so this is a particularly enjoyable event for spectators. It is also a rare opportunity to see an amazing array of wooden pulling boats up close on the beach and in action – peapods, dories, wherries, whitehalls, ocean shells, pilot gigs, Bantry Bay gigs, and Irish curraghs.

The race, which begins at 11 a.m., Saturday, March 1, at the Pemberton Point Boathouse, has five boat categories: workboats, livery boats, coxed boats, ocean kayaks and ocean shells. A few notes to all race participants: 1) all racers must be members of the USRA or the HLM Rowing Association; 2) all boats must carry PFDs, bailers, and whistles; 3) all coxed boats must begin the race bow on the beach; and 4) the HLM Race Committee reserves the right to cancel the race or keep individual boats from setting forth due to weather conditions or rower skills level.

The Snow Row's one-of-a-kind LeMans start embodies the spirit of our style of competition (organized chaos), so come out for a laugh and then step inside the boathouse to warm up with a cup of hot coffee or cocoa. The Lifesaving Museum, one mile down the beach from the boathouse, will be hosting a free open house following the race. For more information about the Snow Row, call Ed McCabe at 925-0992, 925-4826, or Box 221, Hull, 02045.

Town Manager Proposal on the Table

Selectmen Split on Need for Position

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

Beefing up the job description for the town administrator is preferable to switching to a town manager, some selectmen say.

But town meeting will have the final say so when voters will get the chance to decide on the citizens petition article creating the town manager's position.

The town manager would be responsible for the day-to-day operations of the town including handling departmental budgets which would free selectmen up to establish public policy and long-range planning goals.

The Government Structure Committee backs the proposal.

"We agree the time has come to create a town manager's position," Louis Simeone said.

He explained that selectmen are still in charge but would be able to leave the day-to-day operations up to one individual.

Proponent Tom Gruber of Pratt Court said the town manager would do all the budgetary leg work.

"There would be no worry that at the 11th hour, there would be pieces out in left field," he said.

While a majority selectmen said they agree that in light of former town administrator Greg Doyon's resignation, this is an opportune time to make changes, the town manager's position may be going too far.

"We could move to a town administrator with more responsibility or the more drastic (step) of town manager which requires an act of the legislature," Selectman Ronnie McMorris said.

McMorris said there should be some middle ground.

Diana Kornet of the Government Structure Committee said the bottom line is "accountability." She said the position can be tailored to fit the community.

"This would take the board out of the tedium so you could look at the bigger picture," she said.

A frustrated Selectman Peter Pratt, who strongly endorses the town manager concept, said the time for study has passed and urged his counterparts to back the proposal.

Maria Plante, 798 Jerusalem Rd., agreed. She noted that the town is facing a $10 million school project, $18 million in sewers and has a $17 million annual budget and needs someone to provide oversight.

"We need someone to coordinate efforts," she said. "I'd like to be able to address our concerns with one leader who could help us understand our problems and help us come to a solution working with all the town boards."

Gruber, spokesman for the proponents, and the Government Structure Committee, agreed to work together to further study the proposal and fine-tune the job description for the text of the article.

Winter Aerobics Offered

to provide emergency dredging of outer channel which is getting narrower due to silt buildup. The town has spent about 1/4 of the money for engineering costs and silt testing.

But it would take an act of the legislature to take state money and slam it into the federal channel, Pratt explained.

The federal channel hasn't been fully dredged in 35 years. As it stands now, the entire fishing fleet cannot travel in and out of the harbor for two hours on either side of a very low tide. With the state's financial help, the town is responsible for dredging areas in the harbor while the Army Corps of Engineers is supposed to tackle the harbor channel, which falls under federal jurisdiction.

Due to the entangled environmental permitting process, the two projects — town and federal — actually piggy-back onto one another. The same contractor and same equipment would be used for both projects. But now there's a chance that the state will be nervous about going into the project without being "piggy-backed" onto the larger project, Pratt explained.

Pratt has asked Congressman William Delahunt to work with Senators John Kerry and Ted Kennedy to file federal legislation to fund the Cohasset dredging project; to see that the permitting moves forward; and for emergency authorization to remove the shoaling condition in the outer channel.

He said state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray has filed legislation for Cohasset to get $1.5 million in state funds for dredging and state Sen. Robert Hedlund is working on the senate side.

The lack of federal funding could have strong budgetary implications for the state as towns clamor for money. There are two other towns in the state, Dennis and Chatham, that did not appear in the President's budget.

"Little old Cohasset is on the cutting edge of a bad multi-level government problem," Pratt said.

Selectmen Cool to Lobster Lab

Hagerty House May be Demolished

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

A majority of selectmen will not back the lobster lab proposal for the Hagerty house at town meeting.

And if the lobster lab does not move forward, the board will ask town meeting to approve demolishing the building and the cutting room, which also remains on the 2.2 acre harbor-front parcel.

At their meeting Monday, selectmen Michael Sullivan, Nan Roth and Ronnie McMorris said they would not support the citizens petition article asking the board to issue a request for proposal to lease the former Cohasset Colonials showroom to establish an educational research facility in the building.

The vote came without discussion towards the end of a marathon meeting in which selectmen discussed a range of town meeting business.

In a telephone interview Tuesday, Sullivan — who has been a vocal opponent of the lobster lab use of the building — said he felt the town did not buy the land for that purpose.

He said the land should be used for a recreational park and place where families can park their trailers and launch their boats. He fears that if the lobster lab went in and grew in use, it could ultimately take over the entire parcel.

"It's the wrong place to put it," Sullivan said. "It's the last (harbor-front) parcel we have. Why should we give it away for $1?"

The article asks the terms of the lease be 10 years renewable at $1 a year.

Sullivan suggested the lobster lab use the north Cohasset fire station site or the high school. He pointed out that parking is limited on the Hagerty parcel.

Proponents say that few would use the harbor-front park in the winter months and in the summer, hours and activities at the lobster lab could be adjusted to accommodate those periods of heavy use of the boat ramp.

A view of the Hagerty property from the harbor.

Selectman Peter Pratt supports the lobster lab concept. And Selectmen Chairman Merle Brown said he preferred the lobster lab use over demolishing the house. Brown abstained from voting on the lobster lab because he is a member of the Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation, a non-profit group, that wants to renovate the structure.

The town bought the Hagerty property nearly four years ago with the understanding that it would be turned into a passive recreational area for all town citizens to use.

Local resident and health board member Kevin Ulmer, a marine biologist, came up the the lobster lab concept. A majority of the Hagerty Property Committee, charged with developing a plan for the parcel, back Ulmer's proposal.

Hagerty Group

Members of the committee will include the building in their plans once town meeting decides the fate of the structure.

Also excluded from Tuesday night's plan was a metal building which is scheduled to be razed at some point.

The plans also call for the land between the house and the shore to be filled to prevent flooding of the proposed parking lot during highest tides.

Some members of the committee were unhappy with the parking layout shown in the latest drawing. The current design shows six double-length spots that would accommodate twelve cars or six cars with boat trailers. Committee members were worried that parking cars in the middle of the property would interfere with tractor trailers trying to deliver large boats.

"We're going to need at least a 35 to 40 foot opening so a trailer with a boat can come down Parker Avenue, turn into the lot and back the boat into position," said committee member Joe Migliacco.

Migliacco offered to have a boat transporter bring a truck to the site and demonstrate what kind of room would be needed to turn around.

Committee member Robert Davenport was also unhappy with the parking layout.

"Ask John [Modzelewski] to come to our next meeting with some blank designs and we'll draw in what we want," Davenport said.

Committee member Max Pounder said he would ask Modzelewski to come with some overlay designs so the committee could examine several different design ideas.

There was also some concern about the width of a proposed boat dock. In the design, the first 80 feet of the deck were drawn in at a 20-foot width. Pounder said he would ask Modzelewski to reduce the width to ten feet. The remainder of the 135-foot dock would lead to an area for smaller boats, and would be only ten-feet wide.

Vice-chairman Vee Roebuck said the committee would spend the next couple of months focusing on obtaining permits from the Department of Environmental Protection and the Army Corps of Engineers to rebuild the deteriorating rip-rap, and fill and develop the land on the site.

Roebuck said the stone rip-rap that wraps around the shoreline would have to be reconstructed in some areas, while a soft bank would have to be added to the area not made of stone.

The committee authorized Modzelewski to proceed with the engineering of the water's edge beginning with the ramp to the boat house and the west side of the creek to the path and the sailor's club turn-around.

Members also want Modzelewski to design the wooden walkway in a more northerly direction to reduce material costs if it is ever built.

Roebuck said she hopes the committee can come up with a final design that would address the needs of all members of the community including boaters, residents, families and children.

The committee will meet with Modzelewski on Tuesday, Mar. 4, or Monday, Mar. 3 if there are scheduling conflicts.

Rosemary Murphy is a New Great-Grandmother!

There is a new great-grandmother in our fair town, and is she ever excited about it! Rosemary Murphy is the lady we are talking about and her brand new bouncing baby girl is her grandson's — remember Philip Arbury? Well, he and his wife, Charlotte, had a baby girl, Madeline Anne Arbury, Feb. 10.

We have to tell you — Madeline's grandmother, Andrea Powning, is just so excited, she cannot wait to see her! She does have pictures if you run into her be sure to ask her to see them!

Naturally, Aunt Caroline Arbury cannot wait to get to see her little niece! One thing is for certain, little Madeline will be surrounded with love! Hopefully we will be able to see her this spring!

Rose Collins had a memorable birthday recently; we will only tell you that it is a milestone, then let you figure out the rest! Suffice it to say that you will never be able to tell by looking at her, she stays the same and always looks grand! Anyway, hope that you enjoyed your birthday bash, and that your day was a happy one.

Here's some great news from Florida, via Maine! Confused? Well, Sue Fone called to tell that she and Ken have wonderful news to report about their daughter, Joanna. Joanna lives in Florida, and she got engaged last week. Joanna will become Mrs. Henry T. Aman Aug. 31. She and Tommy will be married in Maine. Everyone is just so excited! And, you know Sue and Joanna, they will make sure that everything is perfect for the event! We will keep you informed of major developments as we hear about them, stay tuned! And, congrats to you, Jo and Tommy!

News flash — last week I asked for Sharon McEwan Brennan's address, and this week I not only got it, I talked to Sharon! She sounded great, reports that all of her family is fine, and that she will be here for the 35th class reunion. Sharon also told me that her dad gets the Mariner sent to him every week, so hello, Mr. McEwan!

Jack Creamer, Jack McGinnis, and Dennis and Midge Kuntz went into Boston Feb. 8 to see John Kuntz's one-man show "Party Poopers." Ten different people are invited to a party, they come with different problems and dreams. John played all of the parts and wrote all of the dialogue. The reviews are in and all said that he did an awesome job. John phased in and out of the characters with amazing versatility — Dennis and Midge said they were extremely proud (but exhausted) during the 90-minute show! This all took place at the Boston Center for the Arts. John has been acting and writing there for more than five years. His one-man show, "Freaks," played to sold-out houses in Boston last winter and spring as well as in Provincetown this past summer. John's credits are too numerous to mention, let us just hope that he will let us know about his next performance before it shows, so that we all can go! Needless to say, Dennis and Midge are extremely proud of their son!

They also have more reason for pride, they are about to become grandparents for the third time! Their daughter Nancy is expecting in August, and baby will join siblings Nicole (who is 5) and Alexis (who is 2). Nancy and her family live in North Carolina, and they are always a main topic of conversation for Dennis and Midge!

Here is good news for bridge players or "wannabes." Bronze Life master bridge director Anne Bell of Milton (formerly of Cohasset) will teach a series of lessons during March in conjunction with a luncheon at the South Shore Country Club in Hingham. The beginner's bridge will be preceded by luncheon at 12:30 p.m., followed by bridge lessons commencing March 3, 10, 17 and 24. Intermediate bridge will be held at 9:45 a.m. to noon, followed by luncheon Friday, March 7, 14, 21 and 28. Classes are limited so reserve enrollment by calling 749-1720. Anne Bell is a renowned teacher throughout the state; be sure to take advantage of this opportunity!

Guess whom I saw while on a walk last Sunday — Bill Enos! He reports that he had a knee replacement last December and he was driving when I saw him! And he looked marvelous! Guess he would be a great ad for the procedure, and I am so happy to give such a good report!

Okay everyone, it's your turn to let us know what is going on in your life — or your children's — or friends or relatives! What did you do for the vacation? Let us in on your good times, we all love to hear it! Give me a call!

If you're walking by the First Parish Sunday or Wednesday evenings and hear strains of "Love Me Tender," "Chantilly Lace," "Gonna Get Along Without You Now," or "Chanson d'Amor" it's a preview of what's to come March 15 and 16 at Cabaret '97.

Well-known town residents will become Elvis, Peggy Lee and the Big Bopper that weekend as they take us back to "Those Fabulous Fifties." Join the fun and purchase your tickets before they're sold out. Call the First Parish box office at 383-1100 for further information.

OBITUARIES

Jacob Perry Hague

A private funeral service will be held for Jacob "Jake" Perry Hague, four-day-old son of Keith and Angela (Archambault) Hague of Cohasset, who died Feb. 11 at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston.

Jacob also leaves his grandparents, Ronald and Angela Hague of Colorado, formerly of Dennis, Catherine Archambault of Middlebury, Conn., and David Archambault of Watertown, Conn.; and many aunts, uncles and cousins.

Arrangements were made by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home.

Donations may be made to Brigham and Women's Hospital, c/o the Newborn Intensive Care Unit, 75 Francis St., Boston 02115.

Rotary Phone Plans

The Cohasset Rotary Club announces that the 1997 Cohasset phone book is being assembled. The Cohasset phone book is a service provided to the community by the club annually. All proceeds from the phone book are used for scholarships for Cohasset High School seniors. The Rotary Club also supplements the fund and accepts donations from the Cohasset community.

If any residents or businesses would like any information call Ed Fox at 383-6411. Deadline for ad submission is April 1.

Foreign Languages for Fun and Profit

Bravo for the Cohasset Education Foundation (CEF) which is paying for the new foreign language laboratory for the high school.

Paul Narkiewicz, chairman of the high school's foreign language department believes languages should be taught at kindergarten and continued until graduation.

He couldn't be more right.

America's foreign language failure is a national scandal, embarrassing countless US travelers overseas, who can't conduct simple transactions in any language but their own, and costing millions of dollars in lost business.

The examples are many.

The Chevrolet Nova, a popular automobile in the 1970's, was sold in Mexico under that name.

Amazingly, US auto executives were caught off guard when the car failed to sell. They wouldn't have been surpised had they done their homework.

In Spanish, "No va" means won't go.

Pepsi suffered an even greater disaster when the slogan, "It Brings Good Things to Life," was improperly transalted into Korean as: "Pepsi Brings Your Ancestors Back From the Dead."

Not the best marketing tool in a Buddhist, ancestor-worshipping culture.

Some people have an almost unbelievable language ability. I once interviewed a man who was conversant in 11 languages.

As a boy growing up in Poland, he spoke Polish, Russian and Yiddish (a mixture of Hebrew, Polish and German.)

After five years in a concentration camp, he picked up German.

In Israel after World War II, the man was required to study Hebrew, Arabic and English.

His first wife was Hungarian and she taught him her native language.

Deciding to become a chef, he studied cuisine in Paris, learning French along the way.

Finally accepting a job with the Israeli cruise ship line, the man had to learn enough Spanish and Italian to buy supplies and deal with authorities in Mediterranean and South American ports.

So, Cohasset High School students, see what you can achieve if you apply yourself? Enjoy your new lab and make languages a life-long hobby!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Globe Article Disappointing

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to the recent article in The Boston Globe about the town of Cohasset. As a citizen, I must honestly say that I was extremely disappointed in this article and shocked as well. I became very excited when I heard that there would be a story on Cohasset in the Globe, but never expected this outcome. The article described Cohasset as a town of primarily wealthy, snobbish and greedy people, who are more interested in flaunting their money rather than the well-being of the town. Well, I totally disagree with that. Instead of looking at the strengths of the town, the Globe focused on specific people and how much money their "mansions" were worth.

Cohasset happens to be a town that consists of several wealthy people, that have worked hard for their money and have earned their success. Some of these people have donated their time, money and effort into benefiting the school system as well as town organizations. Often times the power of money can influence positive changes and I think that there has been many examples of this within the town. I believe and know that my family has chosen to live here because it has high standards of values, a strong school system and, most of all, the citizens take pride in Cohasset because it has so much to offer. Many people have chosen this town because they feel as though their private life is well respected and people accept them for whom they are and not what they have.

By writing this piece, the readers were misled. I thought that newspapers, especially The Boston Globe, gave all the facts, but I was obviously wrong. I chose to respond because I was hurt and embarrassed by the impression shown in this article about what Cohasset is like. The Boston Globe has given a negative impression of this town, and should be ashamed of its weak job reporting it.

More Study on Village Station Warranted

It seems to be settled that the Greenbush train line is going to be restored. The location of the Cohasset train station will be a very important decision for the future of our town. Last fall, the selectmen made a decision about the train station's location, based on a "straw vote" prior to a relatively small town meeting, as well as other comments made to them. It was apparently believed that a December deadline existed for the selectmen's decision.

We understand that, in fact, the MBTA will consider a different decision about the station location. We therefore hope the selectmen will now retain an independent consultant to analyze relevant facts concerning traffic patterns, parking, aesthetics, impacts on adjacent property, and effects on local business and residents. Such an analysis would provide an informed, independent opinion regarding the merits of a train station on Route 3A or in the Village.

We believe an independent analysis would be extremely useful in deciding this important matter. If other Cohasset voters agree with us, we hope they will make the effort — before March 9 — to sign a petition to the selectmen to that effect, copies of which are at the Log 'n' Line Restaurant on Ripley Road, French Memories, and the Silver Spoon Cafe, both on South Main Street in the Village.

ASK THE SCHOOL COMMITTEE

Breakdown of School Budget

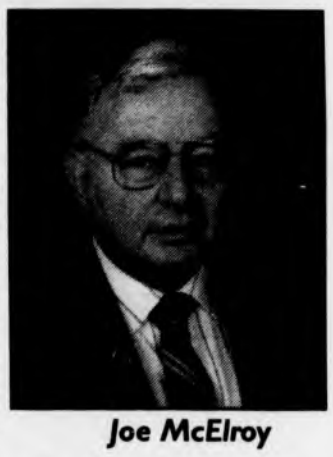
The Cohasset School Committee will recommend a budget of about $7.6 million for 1997-1998, up 5.6 percent from this year's $7.2 million. Under Education Reform, about 1.1 percent of that increase will be covered by new per pupil funding from the state, resulting in a net increase to the town of 4.5 percent. This increase is well below the 5 percent requested by the advisory committee. Enrollment is expected to increase by about 30 students next year to a total of 1270. We estimate that this will result in a per pupil expenditure which is almost exactly the state average as it has been in recent years.

Before describing the major components of our budget, you should know that next year will represent the biggest impact from Education Reform to date; the average high school student will spend 35 percent more time in core subjects than they did this year, and the average high school teacher will teach 20 additional hours. These changes were accomplished so cost-effectively through the collaboration and hard work of our teaching and administrative staffs.

Teaching salaries make up the lion's share of the budget; about $4.5 million of the total, or 59.1 percent. Other student services, such as library and health, make up another 13.4 percent. Utilities, maintenance and custodial services represent 8.3 percent of the budget; replacing or acquiring equipment such as microscopes, 1.0 percent; administration, including the superintendent's office, business office and three principal's offices, 11.0 percent; and buses and contracted transportation, 2.2 percent. As mandated by state law, the town also will allocate 5.0 percent of the budget ($378,000) for special needs education programs that must be provided outside the town.

So what makes up the 5.6 percent (or 4.5 percent net to the town) budget increase? In total, staff salaries account for 5.0 percent of the 5.6 percent. Salaries for teachers are going up 3.5 percent, and, to allow for Cohasset to compete with neighboring school systems, we have also added one seniority "step" for those with an advanced degree. New aide/teaching support positions, expansion of one part-time teacher to full time and one new part-time teacher account for the rest of the 5.0 percent increase. The remaining 0.6 percent is about evenly divided between special education, transportation and the various operating expenses. Again, about 1.1 percent is offset by new Education Reform funding.

If you would like more information about the budget, please refer to the town warrant, call the superintendent's office, or call a member of the school committee. We look forward to seeing you at town meeting March 29.



McElroy Announces Candidacy for School Board

Joe McElroy, 59 Windy Hill Rd., has filed as a candidate for the Cohasset school committee. McElroy holds a bachelor of arts from Boston University and a master of education from State College at Boston. He was the United States Army Security Agency's "Instructor of the Year" and he has taught as an Adjunct Professor at Bridgewater State College.

A 13-year resident of Cohasset, he has served on the town's capital budget committee, been a director of the Cohasset Historical Society and is past President of the Cohasset Lightkeepers' Corporation. McElroy has certifications in purchasing, inventory control as well as software analysis and design. He is a licensed real estate salesperson and notary public.

Currently, McElroy is the North American footwear-buying manager for REEBOK; previously he was director of material management for ETONIC-TRETORN-PUMA. He retired from military service as a lieutenant colonel with citations to include the Bronze Star, five Meritorious Service medals and two Army Commendation Medals. While in the military, his duties included facilities management, base master planning, management information systems project officer for United States Army Europe, instructor and course director at Fort Devens, and Pentagon project officer for Department of Defense implementation of bar code technology.

McElroy says that he made the decision to run for school committee because of his concern that all students have the best possible opportunity for a quality public education and because he wants to help heal recent rifts that have arisen within the Cohasset community. He has stated that he will give special emphasis to parental involvement, long-range budget planning, and putting technology implementation on a fast track within the Cohasset school system.

Joe McElroy

He and his wife, Mary (formerly a teacher in the Boston school system and currently a computer instructor), have three children: Mary-Catherine and Christopher are graduates of Cohasset High School and Rachel is a sixth-grader at the Deer Hill elementary school.

Gerard T. Keating and Fred Koed are his co-chairpersons and Nancy Snowdale is treasurer. His campaign committee includes Barbara Dillon, Mary Brennock, Patricia (Pat) Buckley, Daniel (Dan) Cotton, Elaine Coyne, Jonathan (Jack) Creighton, Charles Douglas, Anthony (Toni) Finegan, Gordon and Louise Flint, Doris Golden, Bettie Grassie, Angie Kelley, Keith Knowles, Patricia (Pat) Laugelle, Shirley Marten, Donna Morgan, Elizabeth (Peg) Stoughton, and Patricia (Pat) Anne Walsh. Inquiries and offers of assistance may be made by calling Joe at 383-0505 (Fax: 383-9762/Internet CohJoe@aol.com). Democrats to Caucus Statewide

Registered Democrats in Cohasset will hold a caucus Saturday, March 8, at 10 a.m. to elect delegates to the 1997 Massachusetts Democratic Convention.

Cohasset will elect four delegates and four alternates equally divided between men and women, to send to the convention. The apportioned number of delegates has been allocated on the basis of a formula giving equal weight to the Democratic Party registration and the average vote for Democratic candidates in the last general elections for Governor and President for which figures were available at the time delegate tabulations were prepared.

Ronnie McMorris, chairman, will call the caucus at Cohasset Town Hall.

The caucus is open to all registered Democrats, persons ineligible to register and media representatives. The only persons eligible to participate in any portion of the caucus are those who are registered Democrats in the ward or town as of February 19, 1997. There will be no absentee or proxy voting.

Candidates for delegate and alternate must also be present, voting and give his or her written consent to be nominated and that nomination must be seconded by two persons present at the local caucus.

All ballots will be written and secret. Those candidates receiving the greatest number of votes on the first ballot will be elected.

Each candidate will be allowed to make a two-minute speech and to distribute material on their behalf.

Slate-making is allowed, but no special preference shall be given to slates. There is no quorum requirement for the caucus.

There will be no admission or expense charge at the caucus, although donations may be solicited.

Discrimination on the basis of race, sex, age, color, creed, national origin, religion, ethnic identity, philosophical persuasion or economic status in the conduct of the caucus is strictly prohibited.

Challenges to the delegate selection process can be filed in writing with the Compliance Review Commission, c/o The Massachusetts Democratic Party, 129 Portland Street, Boston, MA 02114, no later than March 10.

Globe Story Off Base

To the Editor:

Thanks to Mariner acting editor David Johnson for setting the record straight with regard to Cohasset in his editorial of Feb. 20. As Mary Ford once so aptly said, "Cohasset is an economically diverse town."

It's sad, indeed pathetic, that The Globe evaluated our town on one characteristic — money.

No Comingling of Learning Lab Funds

To the Editor:

Some of the generous people who supported the renovation of the Lightkeepers House may wonder if some of the funds will be diverted to the proposed Learning Laboratory for Marine Biology and Genetic Research. No, only donations and grants specifically intended for the lab project will be used for the lab. Nor will proceeds from operation of the Lightkeepers House be used for the lab project. The vote to adopt the lab project was conditioned on keeping the finances entirely separate from the original project. A separate bank account has been established, and each project has its own treasurer. We did vote to allow a loan up to $10,000 from the original project to the lab project, but probably this provision will not be exercised.

We continue to be encouraged by the broad support from people interested in learning opportunities for students. Our biggest problem isn't what people don't know, but rather what they "know" that isn't so! Taking the trouble to become properly informed always seems to prompt people to become supportive.

Our last scheduled public information forum is March 5 in the high school, but one or two more may be provided before the town meeting March 29. There will be a warrant article to require the town to issue a request for proposal to lease the Hagerty building for a Learning Laboratory. There will be another, less constructive, article to require that the building be removed. People with vision should vote yes on the first and no on the second. There is no article to permit selling the building in situ with the real estate on which it sits.

'Citizen' Honor is Appreciated

To the Editor:

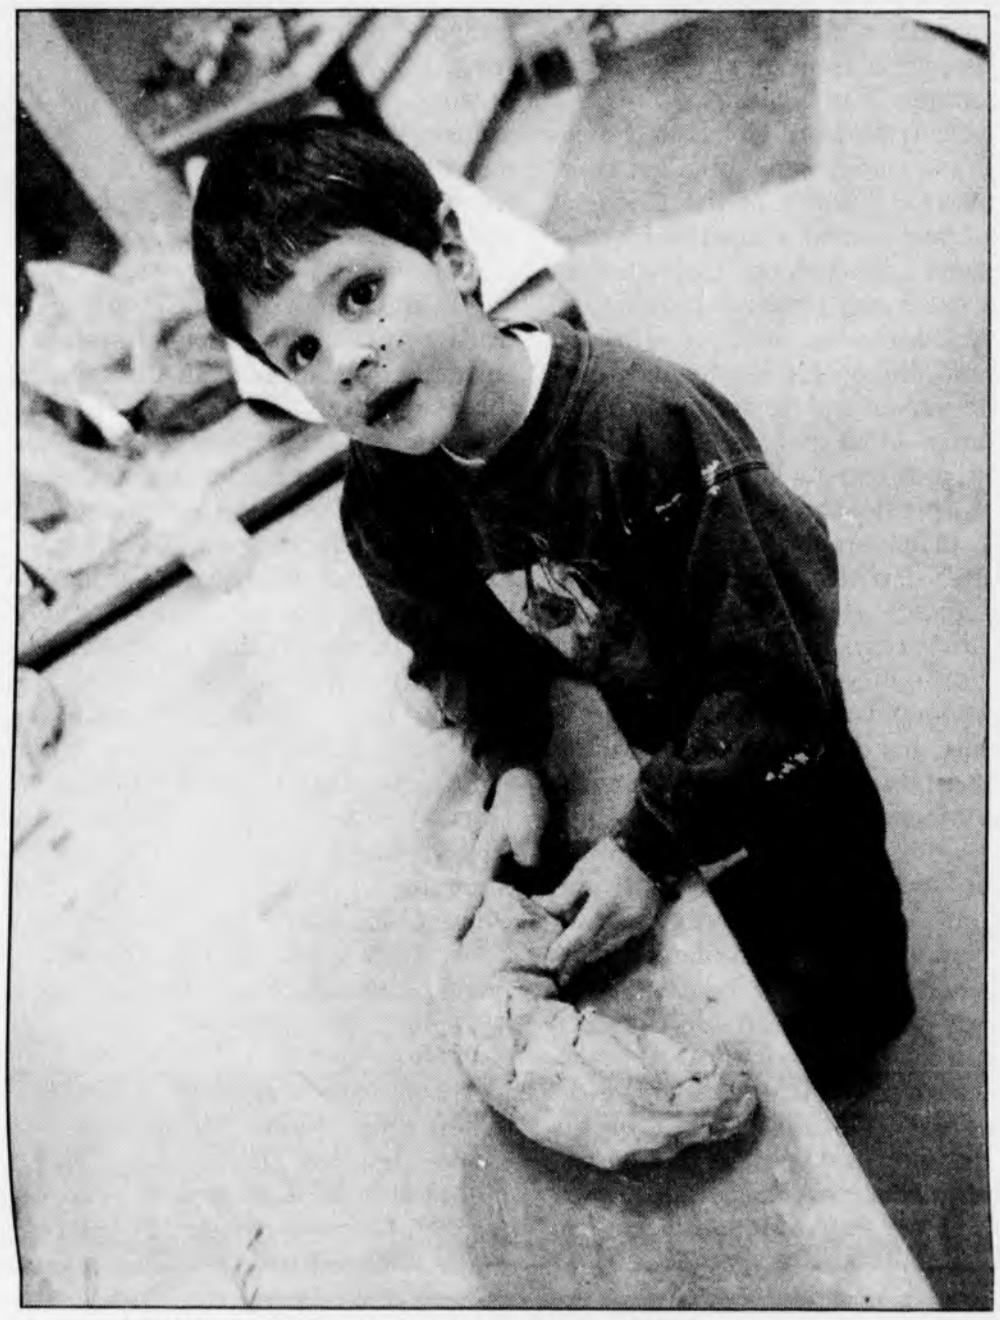
I just wanted to express my most humble gratitude for the honor bestowed upon me.

Special thanks to you, Mary Ford, to your committee and to those who submitted my efforts. A deep bow to the other 13 nominees as each of you have also given of yourselves for the benefit of others.

Again I would reiterate what Ms. Ford so accurately reported: The success awarded me is not mine alone. I share most of this honor with my wife, Judy, whose energy and unflagging commitment to the Appalachia Service Project has kept me in forward motion over the years.

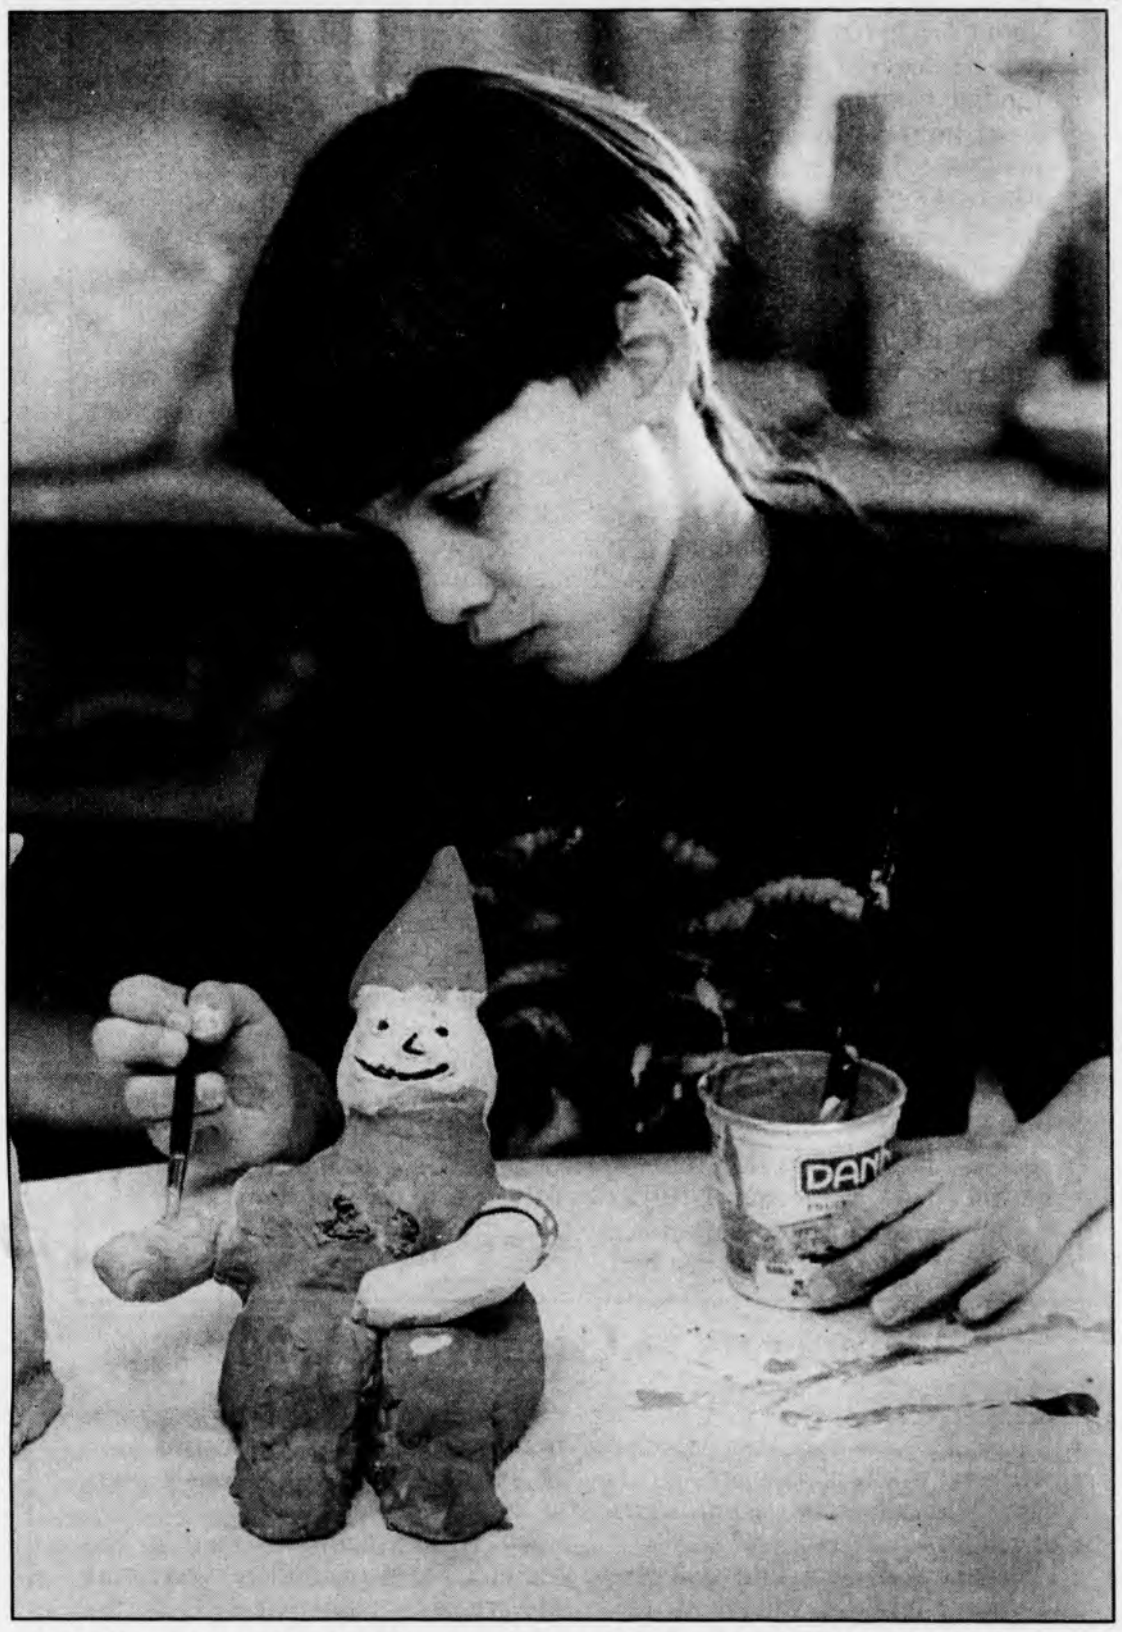
Also, with the project itself, with all the adults and parents, with our families and with those willing teenage volunteers over these nine years - I share this honor.

And I thank God for the spirit of service that is alive and well in our community (the abundance of that spirit is the "wealth" that makes this a "power suburb," Mr. Cobb!). (See editorial.)



Thank you Mary Ford, the Cohasset Mariner, and the friends of A.S.P. for this honor.

Rev. Gary Ritts



P.S. - Forms to buy stock in our Cohasset Appalachia Service Project are now available at $20 per share!

Skippers Grapple to 8th Place in Div. III

Kevin Duffy Claims 135-Pound Crown

By David McKee
COHASSET MARINER

It was quite a performance for the Cohasset High wrestling team at the Division III state championships at Foxboro.

The Skippers, under the direction of coach Torin Sweeney, battled to an eighth place finish out of 43 teams and qualified three wrestlers in this week's all-state championships.

"This ties our best finish since the '93 season and makes it four top ten finishes in the Division III championships in this decade," Sweeney said. "I think we've put Cohasset on the wrestling map and earned a lot of respect for the smallest school in the Division."

The Skippers were led by the first place finish of senior Kevin Duffy in the 135-pound class.

Duffy was the top seed going in and did not disappoint.

"Kevin dominated everyone he faced and had a great tourney," Sweeney said. "He has an excellent chance of doing well at the all-states."

Senior Justin Buckley finished second in the 171-pound class.

"Justin dominated everyone until he went against the three-time state champ," Sweeney said. "Overall, he had an excellent tourney."

Sophomore Mike Rossi claimed fifth place in the 145-pound class.

"Mike lost to the eventual state champ in the semi's in probably the best match of the day," Sweeney said.

The top four finishers in each weight class, plus the fifth place alternate, move on to all-states at Salem on Friday.

Sophomore Mike Baird just missed advancing to the all-states as he took sixth place in the 119-pound division.

The Skippers finished the regular season with a 16-4 overall record and placed third in the Division III South Sectionals two weeks ago at Carver.

Tough Tourney Road for Skippers

Two-Time South Champs on the Road

By David McKee
COHASSET MARINER

Experience counts for something.

At least that's the hope of Cohasset boys' basketball coach Ron Ford on the eve of the Division III state tournament.

The Skippers, who are the two-time defending Division III South champs, begin their quest to three-peat on Wednesday night on the road against Greater New Bedford Voke.

"We have four players who were a big part of our championship teams and I'm hoping that will give us a big-time boost this year," said CHS coach Ron Ford. "We kind of shot ourselves in the foot by losing our last three regular season games, but this is a new season and we have a lot of tourney experience."

Those four Skipper Ford spoke of are:

Senior forward J. L. Williams.

Senior guard Burke Davis.

Senior center Ryan Bishop.

And junior guard Paul-Michael Quintin.

The Skippers wrapped up the regular season with a 15-7 record.

"If we had finished stronger, we could have been seeded two, three or four instead of nine," Ford said. "Now we have to go on the road and face a really strong Greater New Bedford team. They are a team that likes to play man-to-man and they have some good athletes. It will be a challenge to go in there and win at their place."

Since the regular season ended, the Skippers have been busy in practice.

"We had a week of good practices and worked out some of the kinks," Ford said. "We did a lot of conditioning work and fundamentals."

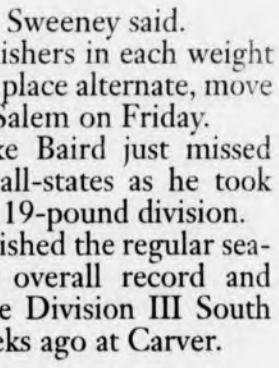
If Cohasset can beat Greater New Bedford Voke, they will face the winner of top seed Bishop Feehan and Westport.

"We certainly didn't receive any favors in the draw but all we can do is go out and play well and see what happens," Ford said.

EXTRA POINTS/Dave McKee

Fearless State Tourney Predictions

It's that time of the year.



No, I'm not talking about a pay-per-view, no holds-barred, fist fight between Will McDonough and Bob Kraft, but the winter high school state tournament.

And with the hoops and hockey tourney pairings finally out, the following are a few fearless predictions.

Boys' Basketball

While I love the Marshfield High boys' team and its 20-0 record in winning the Atlantic Coast League, the Rams will have an extremely tough road to climb in Division I South.

Under the MIAA enrollment set-up, the Rams are the smallest team playing in the Division I tourney. (The MIAA goes by the number of male students and Marshfield, with 362, missed the Div. II cut-off by two boys.) Some of their potential Div. I hoop opponents, New Bedford, Brockton have more than 1,000 males.

Dave McKee

Oh well, maybe the Rams (led by Ryan Kent and Eric Wilson up front and Ben Loomis in the backcourt) will get hot and make this area proud. Both Kent and Loomis have two Ram Super Bowl titles on their resumes, so they know a little something about playing in pressure situa-

RECREATION NOTES

Indoor Golf Lessons

The Cohasset Recreation Department, in conjunction with the Scituate Recreation Department, will accept registrations via phone for adult indoor golf lessons, scheduled to begin Thursday evening, March 6.

Lessons are five weeks in duration, meeting one hour weekly and cost $65 per person. Classes are limited to eight individuals maximum in size and registrations are accepted on a first enrolled basis. Should you require use of golf clubs for the classes, indicate this at the time of your registration and we will loan you clubs for the classes free of charge.

To register call the Cohasset Registration Department at 383-6791. Mr. Dan Neary will be the golf pro teaching this session, which will be held at the Cushing Elementary School, off Route 3A, Scituate. Class times are 6 and 7 p.m.

Ski Waterville Valley Grades 6 to 9

$60 per person, Saturday, March 15. Motor coach leaves from town hall at 5:30 a.m., returns at about 7 p.m.

To register, call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791, before Monday, March 3. Ski equipment and snow board rentals available. Ski lessons also available at Waterville Valley.

Ski equipment rental: $18, snow board rental: $25, and ski lessons: $18.

Summer Employment

The Cohasset Recreation Department is currently accepting applications for playground program counselors for their seven-week day camp program.

Candidates should have demonstrated experience working with children in a structured setting. Employment is for seven weeks, from June 30 through Aug. 15 plus a one-day orientation during late June. CPR certification is mandatory and the recreation commission will conduct a course during late June for those who need CPR certification.

Openings exist for both the pre-school half-day program and the 5- to 12-year-old, full-day programs.

The recreation commission conducts a seven-week day camp structured program for children 3-1/2 through 12 years of age.

Should you be interested in applying, call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at (617) 383-6791 for an application or further information.

Pre-School Program Coordinator

The Cohasset Recreation Commission is accepting applications for a pre-school program coordinator for their summer playground program for children ages 3-1/2 through 5.

Candidates should have experience working with preschool age children and a degree in Early Childhood Education or related fields would be an asset. The preschool program coordinator reports directly to the playground director and is responsible for program development and staff direction.

The position is for an eight-week period working 3-1/2 hours daily Mondays through Fridays. The rate of compensation is $8 per hour. Call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at (617) 383-6791 if interested.

EXTRA POINTS

tions.

Silver Lake and coach Dick Arrieta won their last two games to sneak into the Division I bracket. The Lakers are hot and with 6'6" center and Laker football QB Jon Bond averaging a double-double, the Lake could make some noise.

In Division II boys, I would like Hingham's chances a whole lot better if the ACL top scorer, Dennis Desmond, didn't have a broken hand. But the Harbormen are also on fire and have a chance to go far in the post-season, especially with guard Pat Durgin and forward Jimmy Humphrey playing well.

But overall, I look for Duxbury and hot shot Eric Simonelli to make a run at the South title.

In Division III boys, there are strong teams like Rockland, Cohasset and hot teams like Norwell, Norton and Hanover who could all go very far.

A lot depends on the bracket, but I think a South Shore based team has a great chance of winning the South title.

Watch out for Norwell's Matt Lewis and Hanover's Jon Peacock. These two seniors could carry their teams a long way.

However, if you're a betting man (Hello all you Boston College grads) then take the Rockland Bulldogs and the points. Overall, Division III South looks to be the most interesting.

Girls' Basketball

In Division I girls, Silver Lake will ride 1,000 point-scoring junior Marche Strickland as far as it can. Marche (30 points per game) is the best female basketball player in EMass and could be playing for number one UConn in two years.

But Marche and her awesome jumper will need some help from the rest of the Laker line-up to go very far.

In Division II girls', I really like Duxbury and Hingham. Duxbury won the ACL crown and has all-stars Sarah Morgan, Marie Murphy and Lauren Fuller. But Hingham is a ten-deep team (with all-stars Jan St. Pierre, Stacey Saggese and Megan Aucoin) and that should really help in the post-season. Plus you gotta love a team with a head coach nick-named "Skip".

In Division III girls, Norwell, the South Shore League champs, look solid.

The 19-1 Lady Clippers have twin, 1,000 point-scoring senior all-stars Meg and Amy Barao and this dynamic duo is on a post-season mission. Westwood in the 900-pound gorilla in Division III but you never know what can happen in 32 minutes.

Ice Hockey

In hockey, Hingham was under Super Eight consideration, but a 2-2 tie to Marshfield and a non-league loss 2-1 to Brockton pretty much wiped out the Harbormen's FleetCenter plans.

But with the Harbormen pack in the regular group, they should be considered the favorites to win the Div. II crown. Last year they lost in the finals and have most of their top players back.

As for Division I, Silver Lake rolled to their third straight post-season berth under coach Bill Donovan. But they will be on the road against Brockton in the pre-lims and will have to get hot in a hurry. Division I is really deep and the Lake might not have enough to go far.

In Division II, Marshfield may be have been rebuilding earlier this year, but they have 200-point scorer Evan Crockford and could put a scare into a few teams. They are hot after tying Hingham and devouring Sandwich.

And in Division III, this may finally be the year for the Hanover Indians and coach Jim Sylvia.

The Indians easily skated through the South Shore League this winter and could have the numbers to win the South title and beyond in the post-season.

Junior Chris Carr, a former Catholic Memorial player, has 40 goals for the Indians.

Hanover's past tourney problems have been reliance upon one or two top lines. That works in the early rounds, but as the tourney grinds on, you can't keep doubling shifting three guys. There's only so much gas in the tank.

Scituate is also back in Division III after last year's wondrous tourney run. But Peter Cooney and the Sailors don't have the horses they did last year.

Anyway, all you BC grads, take the Indians and the points. They are the closest thing to a lock in hockey.

21st Annual Road Race By-the-Sea and Road Walk

The Cohasset Rotary Club would like to announce that the 21st Annual 10K Road Race By-the-Sea and Walk will be held Sunday, April 6.

This year's race is under the direction of Tom Gruber and Roy Fitzsimmons. The proceeds go to the many intown projects that Rotary supports. More than 800 runners are expected from all over New England. The start of the road race will be at 1 p.m. from the Cohasset Common. There will be free T-shirts and refreshments for all registered runners.

The road walk starts at 10 a.m. from Sandy Beach. The race is sanctioned by USATF-NE. Applications are available at Curtis Liquors, Good Sport, Noble's Camera Shops or from the Cohasset Rotary, P.O. Box 36, Cohasset, MA 02025.

The deadline for pre-registration is April 1. Pre-registration fee is $12. Post-registration fee is $15. For race questions, call Austin Lyne at (617) 383-6550. Residents are urged to restrain dogs and to discourage children from skateboarding or riding bikes along the route since they present hazards to the runners.

If you would like to join or address the membership of Rotary, please send a note to President, Cohasset Rotary Club, P.O. Box 36, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Vermont lodge highlights famous family's history

By Joanne M. Coletta-Levine

STOWE, Vt. — Vermont's hills are alive with the sound of music.

Most people are familiar with Rodgers & Hammerstein's "The Sound of Music," but what many do not know is that the von Trapp family — the inspiration for the movie — has made Stowe, Vt., their home since the early 1940s.

The Trapp Family Lodge, described as a mountain resort in the European tradition, has been open to visitors since 1948. Johannes von Trapp, the youngest of the von Trapp children, is now president of the family-run lodge.

"We attract a huge cross-section of the population," said von Trapp. "Families, couples, people from close by and far away."

He said some people are familiar with the family's history, while others are not: "There are some people who would like to see all the children lined up at the door of the lodge; that's the image they have of it."

While echoes of "Edelweiss" will not be heard at the lodge, the history of the von Trapp family can be easily experienced by visitors.

"We deal more with the history of my family rather than the film myth," said von Trapp. "It was our home, not Hollywood."

Those familiar with the story remember it well. Maria was a young nun who fell in love with a widowed Austrian aristocrat, Baron Georg von Trapp, who had a large family of his own. Maria and Georg married in 1927, and the entire family eventually fled from Nazi-occupied Austria in 1938. They supported themselves through singing engagements in Europe and the United States, calling themselves the Trapp Family Singers.

While on tour in 1941, the Trapp Family Singers traveled to Stowe, where the countryside reminded them of Austria. Maria named the old farmhouse they purchased "Cor Unum," which means "One Heart." They continued touring until 1956, all the while calling Stowe their home.

"We have a room on the third floor which is the family living room. It has portraits and a painting of the family tree. (Visitors) can get a good feel of the history there," said von Trapp.

He also said that the main sun room includes a series of paintings taken from a children's book about the family.

With their own strong feelings about family, the von Trapps believed it was important to make the lodge a relaxing and enjoyable place for other families to visit.

"I think it's a great place for families. There's over 2,000 acres to tire the kids out," said von Trapp.

He said that the Trapp Family Lodge is the kind of place where you can do everything, or nothing at all.

"You can do absolutely nothing but enjoy the view, or you can enjoy cross-country skiing on our many trails, downhill skiing on Mt. Mansfield, play on the four clay tennis courts, mountain biking, and swimming."

The Trapp Family Lodge the home to the top cross-country ski center in America. Designed by Johannes, it has terrain suitable for every level of skier or snowshoer. "This is a total cross-country facility with over 60 kilometers of trails," said von Trapp.

After "Snow Country" magazine named the Trapp Family Lodge the "finest cross-country ski resort in the United States," von Trapp said, "We were the first to open a cross-country ski center in the United States, in 1968 when most people had never heard of the sport. As a family we loved to cross-country ski, and wanted to share it with our guests. It is rewarding to me personally to see people going out on our trails and having as much fun as they do. You feel you've done something useful."

'I think it's a great place for families. There's over 2,000 acres to tire the kids out.'

The "Cabin in the Woods" is a favorite destination for skiers. There, they can stop and get warm by a fire while enjoying hot chocolate and lunch.

"Mt. Mansfield is a short distance away," said von Trapp. "It's the highest mountain in Vermont, and an easy place for hiking."

Other activities at the lodge include croquet, shuffleboard, special programs for children, and workshops for adults. "In April we have maple-sugaring that families can come and learn more about," he said.

"We have just a wonderful mountainside location with beautiful meadows, the herd of highland cattle with baby calves in the springtime," said von Trapp. "There's great harmony in this glorious setting."

During the spring and summer months, the cross-county trails become trails for guided nature walks where walkers and hikers can enjoy the wildlife and flora that call the forest and meadows home, said von Trapp.

In recent years, the lodge has experienced updating and renovation. "We've done complete redecorating of all the rooms, the interior is much nicer. We also have a new sugar house and ski center," he said.

The Trapp Family Lodge, which features 93 guest rooms and 100 time-share guest chalets, is about a three-hour drive from Greater Boston. For more information on the Trapp Family Lodge, accommodations, and activities, call (800) 826-7000, or visit http://www.trappfamily.com on the World Wide Web.

Florida spas offer fitness and family fun

By Marci Bailey

A new breed of spas caters not only to the whole person, but the entire family. In addition to the traditional exercise programs, massages and facials, popular resort spas offer activities for children and significant others who might not be as enthusiastic about the spa experience as you are.

Spas fall into three broad categories. As their name implies, destination spas are the point of the entire trip — to travel to the spa and soak up the healthy culture and cuisine. Day spas, bridging the beauty salon and spa businesses, are the fastest-growing segment of the industry. Finally, resort spas offer traditional spa programs, but feature a variety of other diversions.

Resort spas are enjoying a surge in popularity. These facilities fit the bill for spa-goers reluctant to leave family and friends at home, according to Kim Marshall, spokeswoman for the International Spa & Fitness Association. "I think (resort spas) really answer what the market is looking for," Marshall says.

Spa-Finders, a travel agency specializing in spa vacations, reports that 59 percent of spa-goers travel with friends or family. The agency calculates the average spa stay as 5.9 nights, with rates ranging from $72 to $840 nightly. About 75 percent of spa vacationers are women.

For spa-goers who want to be get fit and be pampered while making the rest of the family happy, several Florida resort spas have an answer. With spa services offered a la carte at each resort, guests can customize their programs. Amusement parks, golf courses, and the beach offer welcome diversions for kids and significant others. And better yet, all three are within a short drive from major airports.

Tell your kids you're vacationing at a spa, and wait for the groans. Tell them the spa is part of Walt Disney World, and watch them pack. The Buena Vista Palace Resort and Spa fulfills fantasies for parents and children alike. Located in the Walt Disney World Village, resort guests can indulge in a massage and visit Mickey Mouse in a single morning.

When it opened last May, the Buena Vista Palace offered the first spa in central Florida, according to Laura M. Mancine, public relations manager. The settings and amenities echo the trend toward luxury resort spas, with the focus on pampering and relaxation in addition to health enrichment. The 10,200-square-foot, European-style spa and fitness center boasts a lap pool with resistance jet stream, a wealth of fitness equipment, body treatments, facials, massages, and hydrotherapy.

Save the surrounding theme parks for family fun; while you indulge at the spa, the younger set can enjoy the Palace's Kids' Stuff activity program for ages 4-12. If Space Mountain isn't enough of a thrill for the kids, they can enjoy activities like Dive-In Movies, where kids can watch films while floating in an inner tube; game shows; and Banana Rama, featuring banana-themed games and dinner. Parents can enjoy a worry-free massage knowing that college-trained staff are supervising the activities. Fees are $5 per hour per child, with a small discount for siblings.

For those who can't leave work behind, the Buena Vista Palace recently installed a direct phone system that allows guests to receive faxes directly into their rooms. In-room speakerphones afford the ability to conduct business conference calls, and entire families can tell their grandparents about the fun.

'I think (resort spas) really answer what the market is looking for.'

In addition to 1,014 rooms and suites, 65 specially designed Spa EverGreen guest rooms, offer a smoke-free, odor-free environment. The rooms feature filtered tap water, an air filter system, non-allergenic pillows and blankets, and dye-free bathroom tissue, towels, and linens. There is a $15 surcharge for these rooms. The Palace is located within walking distance of shops and restaurants at Disney's Pleasure Island, home to five restaurants of its own.

If it's not the kids you're trying to occupy, hand your golf-crazed partner a brochure for the PGA National Resort & Spa. The resort, located in Palm Beach Gardens, is home to five 18-hole tournament golf courses and a 15,000-square-foot spa. The spa's signature is the relaxing "Waters of the World," a collection of mineral pools with salts imported from around the globe.

Guests can get in the swim at the Sanibel Harbour Resort & Spa.

If you feel the need to work hard before relaxing in the waters, take advantage of individualized health and fitness training, including a nutrition consultation and personalized take-home exercise program. The spa also offers lifestyle enhancement services. In the Stress Management Consultation, guests can explore alternative ways of coping with stress. The Wellness Lifestyle Consultation helps guests explore to better achieve their goals, resolve problems, and enhance their quality of life.

While you find inner peace, your golfing partners can find their peace of mind on the links. Golfers can stroll the greens of the Champion Course, host to several tournaments, including the annual PGA Senior Championships. After opening in 1981, the course was redesigned by Jack Nicklaus in 1990.

After buffing and golfing, guests can select from six resort restaurants, featuring cuisine from seafood to salsa, and retire to one of 339 guests rooms or 80 cottage suites.

For those looking for sand and light surf, head to the Sanibel Harbour Resort & spa on Florida's Gulf Coast. The resort occupies Punta Rassa, where the Caloosahatchee River meets the Gulf of Mexico. At 40,000 square feet, Sanibel Harbour Resort & Spa is the largest of the three, and was chosen by Conde Nast Traveler readers in November as one of the top 10 U.S. spas.

Spa services are offered a la carte or as part of resort packages that allow guests to choose spa services based on a point system. If massages and facials have not relaxed you enough, try the Swiss showers or BETAR Relaxation Experience. In case you wondered, BETAR stands for the Bio Energetic Transduction Aided Resonance. But by the time you've finish a BETAR session, you're unlikely to care much about that or anything else, for that matter. A disc jockey queues up your favorite music — jazz, classical, New Age, or rock and roll. Then lie on a bed inside what looks like a copper jungle gym, and let pulses of the bass in the music provide a relaxing massage.

Guests already relaxed enough can enjoy the beach or nearby attractions like Thomas Edison's winter estate, or the Shell Museum on Sanibel Island. A Kids Klub program is available to entertain youngsters ages 5-12. The resort features 320 hotel rooms, suites, and full-service condominiums, as well as three restaurants.

Kitchen Tour Set

The South Shore Community Center is sponsoring a dream tour of some of the most unique kitchens in Cohasset Friday, March 7, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. The tour consists of four fantastic kitchens, and free samplings from some of the finest caterers on the South Shore at each home.

A free shuttle service will depart regularly from the lightkeeper's residence to the homes. At the lightkeeper's residence there will also be free coffee and sweets along with a wonderful variety of kitchen ware, crafts, and antiques for home enthusiasts.

Advanced tickets may be purchased at the center or by calling the center at (617) 383-0088. Tickets are $15 per person in advance, and $20 per person the day of the tour.

Babysitting will also be provided at the center's nursery school for $2 per child for up to two hours. Daycare reservations must be made in advance by calling the center.

The South Shore Community Center is a nonprofit organization founded 54 years ago dedicated to a wide range of educational and entertaining programs for infants to seniors. Programming ranges from aerobics to gym dandy for toddlers, gourmet cooking to cooking for kids, nursery school to continuing education. For more information or a free program schedule call (617) 383-0088.

It's Happening

Annual Spelling Bee is March 5

The annual Cohasset Education Foundation Spelling Bee will be held in the high school cafeteria Wednesday, March 5, from 6:30 to 9 p.m. Curt Collins, the high school principal, will moderate the event.

The round robin single elimination format will give every team a chance during each round until the field is narrowed to a grand prize winner. At least 25 teams will vie for the grand prize of 30 day passes and free physical evaluation at Cohasset's Fitness First Plus. Second prize will be gift certificates to Tosca's of Hingham. Special award prizes will include gift certificates to Buttonwood Books. The competition proved fierce last year and the triumphant soccer club team will be returning to defend their title.

This year come early to enjoy a special treat for at 6:30 p.m. a gourmet menu will be offered by Denise and Gary of the Silver Spoon, Cohasset Village's specialty Restaurant. So bring your hungry family and dine on a fare ranging from gourmet hot-dogs to home baked calzones, lasagna and vegetable rollups. The Silver Spoon has gained a well-deserved reputation for tasteful quality since its opening last year and one look at the scrumptious array of home baked desserts should convince even the fussiest palate.

Last year's event was a raucous and freewheeling affair highlighted by costumes and a spontaneous audience. This year for added excitement the CEF "Paris Pour Deux" trip raffle winner will be drawn at 9 p.m. Continental Cablevision will be capturing the show for delayed broadcast on Cable Channel 3.

So Bee prepared, support your team and help raise money for a great cause: Cohasset's new language lab. The festivities start at 6:30 p.m. with competition beginning at 7 p.m. sharp. All contributions and fees are tax deductible. Cohasset Education Foundation, Box 224, Cohasset, 02025. Questions can be directed to Pam Speed at 383-2572 or the CEF hotline at 383-2833.

Festive Dinner to Benefit Carousel

A six-course seasonal gourmet menu created by chef Doug Seaver and music by the Joe Micarelli Jazz Trio will highlight the festive dinner to be held at the Tosca restaurant in Hingham to benefit the Friends of the Paragon Carousel Monday, March 10, at 7 p.m.

"Last year Ed Kane put on a beautiful evening with delicious wines. The dinner was sold out and some disappointed carousel supporters were turned away. We are excited that Ed has offered us the opportunity for another wonderful party and we encourage people to make their reservations soon," said Susan Fleck, president of the Friends.

Guests at the dinner will have the first glimpse at the magnificent carousel horse most recently restored by James Hardison, Paragon Carousel artisan. The horse, the 24th of 66 horses to be restored, will be moved to the restaurant to reign over the festivities.

Proceeds from the dinner will go toward meeting the Challenge Grant offered by the Massachusetts Historical Commission to keep the carousel in Hull and complete its restoration. Tickets are $100 per person ($55, tax deductible) and may be obtained by calling 740-0080 or 925-0472.

Improving your home may not be wise business move

By Amy K. Barrett
WORTH MAGAZINE

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

My parents always told me: "Never own the most expensive house on the street."

I assumed the maxim was a matter of tact and style. But it turns out to be sound real estate advice to keep in mind when renovating your house.

Building a two-story addition or a new kitchen may boost the value of your house, but it can be a potentially costly investment that makes it harder to sell if all the other houses on the block go for less. Renovations may be invaluable to your family's quality of life; they are not necessarily good financial investments.

"Don't think about doing an addition and getting your money back unless you start off with the smallest, least expensive house in the neighborhood," said Paul Maxim, project designer at Case Design/Remodeling in Bethesda, Md. If your house has fewer bedrooms than others in the area or if it doesn't already have a family room, then a two-story addition could pay off.

Most people have the following priorities when buying a house: Location, the amount of space in square footage, and, of course, price. A brand-new kitchen or additional living and family rooms are often secondary priorities.

While making the house more expensive, making your place a luxurious nest may attract professional types who have more money than time to spare and, hence, will pay extra for creature comforts. But for the most part a more expensive house means that you lose out if someone down the block is selling theirs for less.

That's not to say, however, that all work on your house is money down the drain. When it comes to renovations, less is more — to use another wise adage. By making less expensive — yet tasteful — alterations such as repainting and refinishing counters, for example, you have a better chance of getting back the money you put in. "Homeowners who remodel wisely can count on recouping much or all of their investment — and often more — when they resell their homes," said Remodeling Magazine in its "Cost vs. Value" report, which shows how remodeling projects affect the houses' resale values.

So how do you improve your house and not lose money? Instead of building a new kitchen, for example, simply update your appliances, especially those avocado green and harvest gold ones from the 1970s. Paint walls and cabinets, and replace counter tops and floors.

"Minor kitchen and bathroom upgrades will give you the best return on your money," said Maxim. "In a kitchen you should spend from $4,000 to $10,000, and in a bathroom spend $2,000 to $4,000." Those costs are a lot easier to recoup than, say, the $25,000 you would have spent building a kitchen from scratch.

And instead of building an addition onto your house, you may be able to get extra mileage out of your attic and basement by giving them a facelift.

The cost of materials can be another source of overspending. Granite kitchen counters, brass faucet handles, and certain ceramic tiles, though nice touches, are expensive. Researching the wide array of synthetic materials available for lower prices would be worthwhile — and it doesn't have to mean giving up your aesthetic. One of Maxim's customers who renovated five houses he owned in Rockville, Md., adding solid brass hinges and pine wood doors, had to file for bankruptcy. The high-end materials added $8,000 to the cost of the $140,000 houses and frightened away prospective home buyers.

'Don't think about doing an addition and getting your money back unless you start off with the smallest, least expensive house in the neighborhood.'

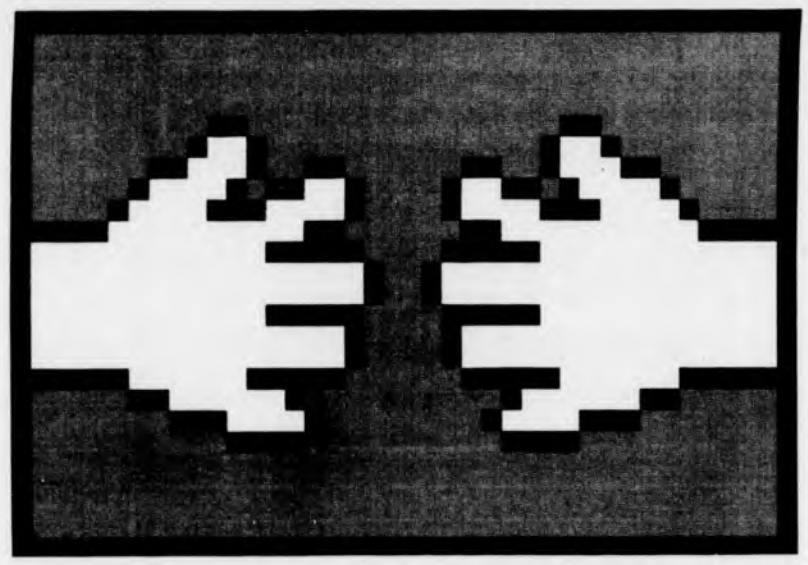
Paul Maxim
Case Design/Remodeling

Still, renovations are rewarded differently, depending on the part of the country in which you live. In Austin, for example, home owners get an average 126 percent return on a two-story addition, while people in Boise, Idaho get back a little over half of the cost, according to the 1996-97 "Cost Vs. Value." Redoing your whole kitchen is probably worth it when you live in Washington, D.C., because on average you reclaim 136 percent of the cost when you sell the house. The Remodeling Report can also help you assess the average cost of various remodeling jobs in your area. Call (202) 736-3418 for more information on how to get a copy.

No matter how much remodeling costs, or how much you lose or gain when you sell your house, you can always save on taxes. Anything you do to increase your house's life, or to change its use or appearance counts as an improvement, and can be added to the "cost basis" of the house. When you sell the house, the cost basis is subtracted from the price of the house, and you are taxed only on the difference.

Don't confuse improvements and maintenance, though. "If you repaint your interior, that's maintenance. If you put in wood paneling, then you have changed the nature of the walls, and that's an improvement," said professional accountant Walter Deyhle.

And don't in your renovation enthusiasm forget to keep up the outside of your house — retiling the roof, replacing the house's siding, repainting, etc. The view from the curb matters when you're trying to sell a house.



Plus, the outside is the protective skin of the house, keeping everything safe inside. "A guy who doesn't take care of his roof — well, you canbet he doesn't take care of anything else in the house," said Maxim. "That old saying, 'You can't judge a book by its cover' — well, I guess that isn't true."

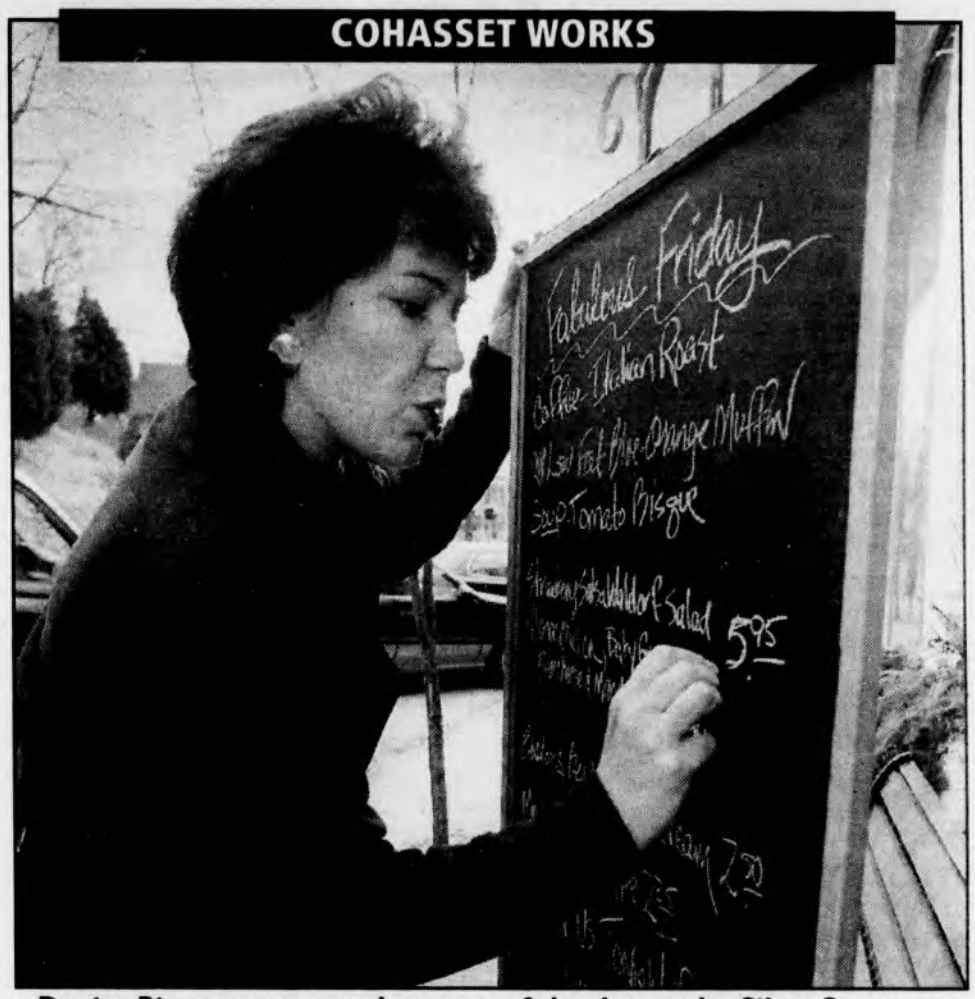
Wright on Tufts' Board of Overseers

Norman R. Wright, president of Mahoney & Wright, Allied American, a Boston-based insurance agency and brokerage firm, has been appointed to Tufts University's Board of Overseers for athletics. He resides in Cohasset.

Tufts' overseers are national and international leaders from business, academia and other fields who provide assistance and guidance to the university's president and board of trustees. A 1957 graduate of Tufts College of Liberal Arts, Wright is a life member of the Tufts Alumni Council and has been active in the Jumbo Club, the university's athletics booster organization. As a student at Tufts, Wright majored in economics and was a standout fullback and linebacker and a member of the basketball, track and golf teams.

Mahoney & Wright, which was acquired by Allied American Agency of Natick last year, was founded in 1926 by Wright's father-in-law, the late Joseph W. Mahoney, who graduated from Tufts in 1924.

How to Create More Business



"Leading Questions – How to Network" is a free seminar which outlines how to work with current and future business contacts to identify new clients. The seminar is part of an ongoing series presented by The Leads Network, a business-to-business networking organization.

The free seminar details how to include networking as a cost effective tool to expanding sales leads. Business executives can choose either of two dates for this seminar: Friday, March 14, from 8 to 9 a.m. or Friday, March 28, from 8 to 9 a.m.

Both seminars will be held at the Days Inn, Route 228, 850 Hingham St., Rockland. A complimentary continental breakfast will be served.

Seating is limited. To reserve seating or for more information, call Judith Peacock at 749-2606.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
THE TRIAL COURT
THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT DEPARTMENT
Norfolk Division

Docket No. 97E0012-PP1

To Robert Davenport and James Michael Davenport of Cohasset and the Town of Cohasset and to all other persons interested.

A petition has been presented to said Court by Vincent Sestito of Dorchester, Mass. in the County of Suffolk representing that he holds a part or share of certain land lying in Cohasset in said County of Norfolk and briefly described as follows: a certain lot of land being contiguous with land known and numbered as 135 Sohier Street, Cohasset, Norfolk County, Massachusetts, as further described on an unrecorded plan entitled "Plan of Land Sohier Street, Cohasset, Mass. June 12, 1996. Scale 1"=40'. Eng. Surveyor: Neil J. Murphy, Assoc. P.C. 231 C.J.C. Highway Cohasset, MA 02025. Owner: Estate of E.E. Sestito, P.O. Box 338, Cohasset, MA 02025", a true copy of which is annexed hereto, consisting according to said plan of 4.1 acres of land more or less, and bounded and described as follows:

SOUTHEASTERLY along Sohier Street, three hundred six and 00/100 (306.00) feet;

WESTERLY by land owned by Robert V. and Barbara T. Davenport, one hundred sixty-one and 00/100 (161.00) feet;

SOUTHWESTERLY along land owned by Robert V. and Barbara T. Davenport, one hundred twenty-five and 00/100 (125.00) feet;

NORTHWESTERLY by land of Philomena and Barbara A. Conte, two hundred ninety-five and 00/100 (295.00) feet;

NORTHEASTERLY by land of Town of Cohasset, one hundred ninety-two and 00/100 (192.00) feet;

SOUTHEASTERLY by land formerly a New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Right of Way, three hundred ninety-four and 00/100 (394.00) feet; and SOUTHEASTERLY by land now or formerly owned by John E. and Patricia A. Conway, two hundred ninety-six and 41/100 (296.41) feet.

Being a portion of the real estate property described in the deed from John M. Bready to Elena E. Sestito dated November 28, 1968, recorded with Norfolk Registry of Deeds in Book 4589, at Page 329; see also Estate of Elena S. Sestito, Norfolk Probate Court No. 93P0905-E1 setting forth that he desires that pursuant to the third clause of Elena E. Sestito's will, that he be granted so much vacant land on Sohier Street in Cohasset...as meets lot requirements for building a home. And praying that partition may be made of all the land aforesaid according to law, and to that end that a commissioner be appointed to make such partition of all, or any part of said land which the Court finds cannot be advantageously divided.

If you desire to object thereto, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham/649 High St. P.O. Box 269, Dedham, MA 02027-0269 before ten o'clock in the forenoon on the nineteenth day of March 1997, the return day of this citation.

Witness, David H. Kopelman, Esquire, First Justice of said Court, this seventh day of February 1997.

STUDENT OF THE MONTH/Corey Sullivan

Corey Sullivan serves as a positive role model for students in grades seven and eight. We nominate her for student of the month for the following specific reasons.

During the months of November and December, Corey rehearsed and participated in the Boston production of The Nutcracker. Practicing ballet 12 hours per week is part of her normal routine. She also practices playing her clarinet and participates in the school band. Corey also enjoys tennis.

In addition to these demanding extracurricular activities, she made the high honor roll during term 1 and continues to maintain a a high academic average in all her subjects. Personally, she displayed a high degree of humility and cooperation and asked for no special considerations during this demanding time. In addition to the above, her unassuming and pleasant nature make her a candidate for Student of the Month.

— Grade Seven Team.

Norfolk County Engineers is a Bright Spot

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

When town officials needed to locate the exact property lines for the Hagerty property, they called on the Norfolk County Engineers to survey the site. When selectmen wanted to survey the town common with the intention of widening North Main Street to accommodate more parking, they called the Norfolk County engineers.

At a time when Governor William Weld is pushing to abolish county government, the Norfolk County engineers stand out as an example of one of the benefits of regional public service.

"You don't hear much about the county engineers, but they do a lot of work for Cohasset," said selectmen Chairman Merle Brown. "We don't have our own town engineer. We can call on the engineers to help us with any type of public project."

Brown said the town has used the county engineers

MBTA Cancels Cohasset Village Station

Mitigation Concerns Aired at Train Forum

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

Supporters of a new commuter rail station in Cohasset Village will have to take their fight to the floor of town meeting. At a Greenbush mitigation forum held Thursday, Feb., 27, Andrew Brennan, manager of environmental affairs for the MBTA, said the T would plan only for a Route 3A station because selectmen opposed the Village site.

There is not a need for the T to take on a fight over a station in Cohasset Village.'
— Andrew Brennan, MBTA.

"There is not a need for the T to take on a fight over a station in Cohasset Village," Brennan said. "The T will only plan for a station on Route 3A at the Barry Waste Services site."

But some residents in the audience clearly still wanted the station built in the Village. Even Dean Rizzo, chairman of the town's mitigation committee, said he personally supports the Village site.

Shaw's Plaza Moves Along

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

"Shaw's mountain" — a three-story high pile of rubble — in the former Cushing Plaza on Route 3A will be coming down bit by bit soon, officials say.

And behind it, the public will be surprised at just how far along construction of the new shopping center is.

By mid-April, plans are to move Buttonwood Books, the Cohasset Consignment Shop, BayBank, Walgreens and The American Image beauty salon into their new retail spaces where work is now underway on plumbing and electrical wiring.

The 40,000-square-foot supermarket will be the last piece of the puzzle and will open this summer, Shaw's spokesman Bernie Rogan said.

Most of the work on the septic system at the site has been completed with the exception of the leaching beds which will be constructed under the new parking lot at the front of the plaza.

Cohasset's Week

Hagerty Committee Reverses Lobster Lab Vote

The proposed Lobster Lab for the Hagerty house off Parker Avenue was dealt another blow Monday when the Hagerty Property Committee voted 5-3 not to support it.

Last month, in a close vote the group backed the proposal.

Three voting members were absent for Monday's vote, including Fritz Pfaffman and chairman Alfred Moore, who both supported the proposal previously.

Vice Chairman Veneta Roebuck said the vote followed a working session Monday in which members looked at site drawings depicting a recreational area with overlays with and without the house.

Roebuck, who had previously voted in favor of the lobster lab use for the site said she changed her mind because of questions about the adequacy of parking and the use of federal and state grant money. She is concerned that grants may come with strings attached.

Roebuck pointed out that the town bought the harborfront 2.2 acre site four years ago with the idea that it would become a passive recreational area for all townspeople to use. Although she backs the concept of a marine research facility, she no longer believes the lobster lab fits into recreational plan the voters had in mind when they okayed purchasing the parcel.

In a majority vote, selectmen decided last month not to back the lobster lab proposal which is on the town meeting warrant.

But town meeting voters will have the ultimate say later this month on the fate of the lobster lab. Cohasset Lightkeepers Corp., a non-profit group, has offered to lease the house from the town and refurbish it. The lobster lab is the brainchild of health board member Kevin Ulmer, a marine biologist, who would serve as director of the marine research facility.

Students to Serve on D & A Committee

Anthony Bramblett and Jami Butman, both sophomores at Cohasset High School, were appointed to the town's Drug & Alcohol Committee this week.

Selectmen made the appointments. The students, who asked to be appointed, also had the backing of D&A committee chairman Craig Muir.

"We are deeply devoted to supporting the Drug & Alcohol program and its purpose," the students wrote. "And with any good cause, great leadership is required to obtain results. It is our opinion that student involvement is required to procure student interest in the program."

Farmers' Market to Return

The Farmers' Market, which is sponsored by the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, will be back on Thursdays in the village this spring but in a new spot. The Market will be on the town common near the veterans memorial.

Selectmen approved the organizers' request to close off Howard Jason Road in the common from 3 to 7 p.m. on market days.

The second annual Harvest Folk Festival will be Oct. 9 on South Main Street in the village.

The Farmers' Market is part of an on-going effort to revitalize the village. The Chamber of Commerce and interested merchants and residents. are leading the effort.

Sara Murphy gives her son Christopher a push on the swing behind the community center.

March is Red Cross Month

Selectmen endorsed a notice this week proclaiming March as Red Cross Month.

Beer, Wine at Zinnia's

A second restaurant in the village has obtained permission for patrons to bring their own beer and wine during the dinner hours.

Zinnia's follows The Silver Spoon which won approval last month from selectmen. Neither establishment holds a liquor license and for both places the addition of alcohol, which customers supply themselves, is being allowed on a six-month trial basis.

Upcoming Meetings are Noted

The following meetings have been posted outside the town clerk's office at town hall:

- Board of Health, 7:00 p.m., March 11.
- Conservation Commission, 7:30 p.m., March 6 & 20.
- Drug & Alcohol Committee, 7:30 p.m., March 12.
- Harbor Committee, 7 p.m., March 6.
- Recycling Committe, 7:30 p.m., March 13.
- School Committee, 7:30 p.m., March 6, AV room at the high school.
- Selectmen, 7:30 p.m., March 10.
- Sewer Commission, 6:30 p.m. & 7:30 p.m. March 12.

Crystal Spray Takes Cohasset Schools Aboard

By Kerry Herlihy
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Cohasset schools plan to take part in the educational centennial circumnavigation, reenacting Joshua Slocum's epic voyage around the world titled, "Voyage of the Spray." With $15,000 needed and final approval by the school committee awaiting, the development of this educational adventure moves forward.

The project, established through a cooperative partnership including the University of Alabama, is teacher-centered, as opposed to traditional student-centered, with a mission to improve education by expanding experiential learning. The premise is that teachers are the center of the educational process; administrators guide the process; parents and community facilitate and students are the product.

The first phase of the project is currently under way at Winter Island in Salem, where a replica of Slocum's Spray, Crystal Spray, is being constructed. An expert team of shipwrights are building the vessel as an in-house project. The second phase of the project is the voyage by teachers from all over the world who will sail the replica vessel, Crystal Spray. This voyage will start from Boston this summer and end in Newport, R.I., approximately three years from now.

Teams of three teachers are assigned a specific three-week leg of the trip of which they are physically on the ship as crew members. During the rest of the Crystal Spray's trip, the team will assist the students with the Spray's travels and findings through the integration of multimedia activities which include Internet projects, periodic electronic field trips via satellite up-links, and video and documentary programs coordinated by the University of Alabama's Center for Communication and Educational Technology.

Teachers from all over the world will sail the replica vessel, Crystal Spray. This voyage will start from Boston this summer and end in Newport, R.I., approximately three years from now.

Lessons incurred from this voyage will be interdisciplinary, focusing on social studies, math, language arts and science.

The Cohasset team will include Robert Bergquist from the Deer Hill School, Ken Cisnaros from the Osgood School and David Magnussen from the high school. These teachers will have a state-of-the-art Tiger computer in their classrooms for the duration of the trip. The Tiger computers decode digital messages sent from the Spray. This form of communication will allow the teachers to communicate with their classes while they themselves are on the voyage. The teacher team is preparing to present specific lesson plans and potential learning outcomes at the next school committee meeting in order to receive final approval for participation.

The $15,000 cost of involvement in this project must be raised as soon as possible.

"As soon as we have the money, we can secure our spot on the voyage. Therefore, we will be searching all options for funding immediately," said Bob Bergquist, teacher at Deer Hill.

"When our spot is secured we will begin the process of determining what leg we will be sailing on and when that will take place. I have been involved with this project for more than a year and a half so hopefully I will have some pull on which leg we are assigned," he said.

The Cohasset Education Foundation has agreed to partially fund the project.

"The board was sold by the fact that the voyage will be applicable to all grades in each school. We were also happy to learn that the project covers a two-and-a-half-year time span and is not just a three week investment," said Mike Hurley, President of CEF.

Bergquist hopes students will participate in the fund-raising.

"We would like to involve the students with raising the money to create ownership of the project and to introduce the reality of what a project like this costs," said Bergquist. Specific plans for fund-raisers have yet to be made public.

Volunteers needed to sit on town boards

Interested citizens are needed to serve on the drug & alcohol committee, the mosquito control committee, the Osgood resuse committee and the town history committee. Please call the selectmen's office at 383-9900 for more information.

Car Solutions

TUNE IN, NOT UP

▶While most older consumers have grown up with the notion that an annual tune-up of a car's engine is good practice of preventive maintenance, very few late-model cars with engine performance problems can benefit from a tune-up. It may also come as a surprise to many that, when a car does not run well, the solution does not necessarily rest with having it tuned-up. The reason behind this rests with the fact that most cars built since 1981 have computerized fuel and ignition systems. Thus, the solution to their engine performance problems is usually more complex than simply having a tune-up. Late-model cars that do not run well usually require sophisticated testing procedures referred to as diagnostic checkups. These checks require the use of diagnostic instruments by trained automotive technicians

▶Understanding computer technology both in a car and in automotive repair equipment has become necessary for a top-notch shop. At SOUTH SHORE CHEVROLET-GEO (383-9090), we stand out among automotive shops because of our efficiency, accurate diagnoses, and first-quality work. You'll never have any regrets once you bring your car to us because we won't let you out the door until you're happy with our services. We welcome your questions--we're here to answer them. We're at 828 C.J. Cushing Hwy., Rte. 3A (open Thurs. eves).

HINT

Modern cars require a simple procedure referred to as a maintenance tune-up, which basically includes replacing spark plugs, air and fuel filters, and testing the spark plug wires, as well as visually inspecting various other components.

PUBLIC NOTICE

TOWN OF COHASSET, MA
COHASSET SEWER COMMISSION

PUBLIC MEETING

A Public Meeting has been scheduled by the Sewer Commission to provide information and solicit responses from concerned residents regarding sewer warrant articles to be presented at the upcoming Town Meeting. The proposed warrant articles include the approval of a revised Amended Final Judgement with the State; the design and construction of the proposed Central Cohasset Wastewater Collection System; funding issues for the North Cohasset (Straits Pond) Wastewater Collection System; a related Intermunicipal Agreement (IMA) with the Town of Hingham; and a limited on-site wastewater management system and homeowner loan program. Other warrant articles for discussion will be the implementation of additional Infiltration/Inflow repairs to the existing collection system and the development of new Sewer Use Rules and Regulations for the management and support of the future wastewater system expansions and improvements. Copies of the warrant articles and related exhibits may be examined prior to Town Meeting at the Office of the Town Clerk at the Town Hall, and at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Norfolk County Engineers

for a large number of public projects, including a study of the corner of Beechwood and Doane Streets, a study for the widening of King Street, a sidewalk connector study for North Main and Ripley Streets and surveying work in the flood control area.

"Without the county engineers we would have to hire an engineering firm to do the work, which is very costly," Brown said.

John Paronich is in charge of the Norfolk County Commissioner's Engineering Department. Paronich is a registered engineer and a registered professional land surveyor who has worked in the engineering department for the last 40 years.

Paronich oversees all county engineering projects with an assistant and a team of nine field workers.

"The engineering department was established in 1925," Paronich said. "Its basic purpose was to make highway surveys and layouts. The county commissioners can legally lay out streets, even over rail road crossings. Now we primarily focus on land surveys to establish property lines."

Over the past two centuries the engineers have laid out some of Cohasset's oldest streets and a few newer ones: Hull Street, Jerusalem Road, Forest Avenue, Atlantic Avenue, Ripley Road, Elm Street, Border Street, Beechwood Street, Doane Street, Church Street, and King Street which was laid out by the county commissioner's in 1813.

The county commissioner's have records on property lines that date back to 1793.

Paronich said Norfolk County is a huge area comprised of 28 communities that stretch from Avon to Wrentham. Two communities in the county are non-contiguous to the other communities: Brookline and Cohasset.

Field crews are assigned to jobs in communities on an as-needed basis, Paronich said.

"Usually the board of selectmen from one of the county communities will make a request for our assistance," Paronich said. "The county commissioner's consider each request and ask me for my recommendation."

Selectman Peter Pratt said that Cohasset probably gets more work per capita from the county engineers than any other town in Norfolk County.

"We're just too small to have a full-time engineering department," Pratt said. "The Norfolk County Engineers have immediate access to all surveying records. In 80 to 90 percent of the jobs they do for us they can access baseline charts and records for reference."

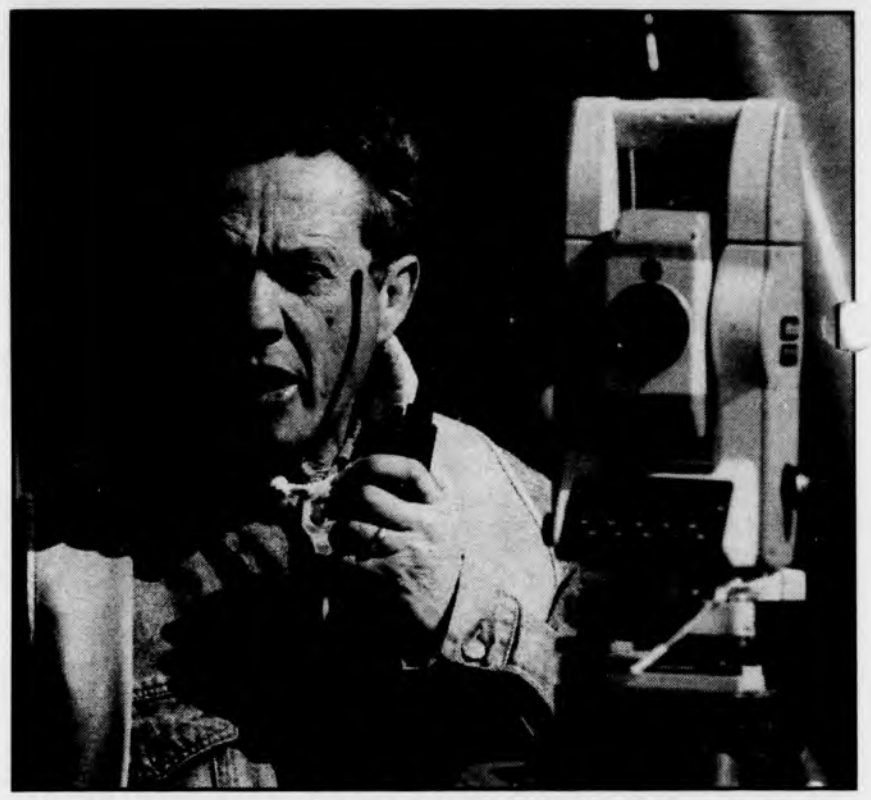
Pratt added that Henry Ainslie, a former Cohasset selectmen, is the Norfolk County Administrator and has provided "wonderful guidance and support to the town."

Pratt is critical of county government in general, although he thinks the engineers are one of the few good services the county provides.

"My criticism of Norfolk County is it has done little or nothing in terms of providing regional government," Pratt said. "The Norfolk County Engineers are wonderful, but we only use them about a half-dozen times a year."

Towns do not pay any fees for the engineers' work, although each town in the county pays an annual assessment.

Cohasset paid $65,486 in county taxes in FY96, Pratt said. The engineers generally do small surveying jobs that would cost the town $1,000 to $5,000 per job. Pratt said the only other useful service the county provides is inmate work details from the sheriff's office, and the registry of deeds.



Paronich said he thinks it's all but certain that the state will abolish county government and the engineers office, especially with the disastrous fiscal problems plaguing Middlesex County.

"The state has privatized so many things, I just can't see them taking us over, especially with all the cuts in the Massachusetts Highway Department," Paronich said. "What most concerns me about the abolition of county government is the good people here who will lose jobs and the status of our records. These records could end up in the state archives building at Columbia Point."

Paronich said that if the records end up under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of State's office, communities distant from Boston would have a hard time accessing those documents.

If the Norfolk County Engineers are eliminated, the town would have pay private engineering firms to survey property lines for the town. Pratt said the town needs to take a close look at what the county is giving Cohasset for its money when the time comes to either support or reject county government in the future.

"Cohasset should do a cost-benefit analysis to see what we get from the county," Pratt said. "We certainly don't get $65,000 in engineering work and prisoner details. Norfolk County is pretty much laggard in addressing regional issues in my opinion."

'Pay-Per-Bag' Forum, March 13

The Recycling Committee will hold a second public informational meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, March 13, in the town hall auditorium, on the "pay-per-bag" program planned to be implemented in Cohasset later this year. The committee held its first informational meeting Feb. 20.

"We are holding this additional meeting to provide an additional opportunity to explain the 'pay-per-bag' program to interested residents, and to answer questions about the program," said Arthur Lehr, chairman of the recycling committee.

In the 'pay-per-bag' program, people pay for only the amount of refuse they actually dispose of, instead of the current flat fee, which would be eliminated, said Lehr. Since there is no charge to bring recyclables to the town Recycling Transfer Station (RTF), residents can save money for themselves and the town by separating their recyclables, he said.

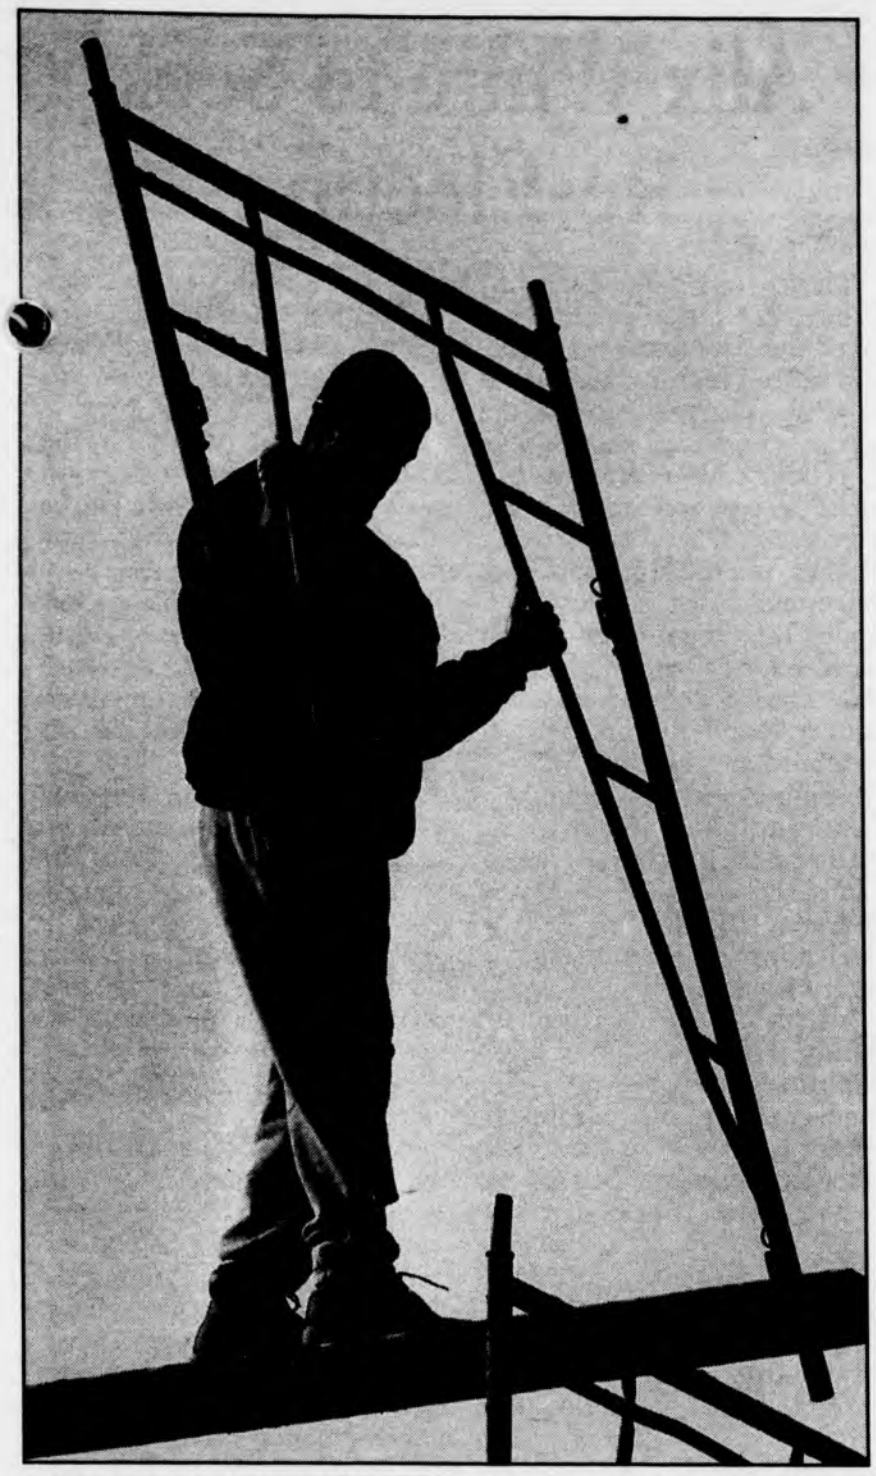
REAL ESTATE UPDATE

SELL AS-IS OR UPGRADE?

QUESTION: Should I rehab my home for extra profit before putting it on the market, or is it best to sell it as-is?



ANSWER: Most often, a seller finds that the cost of improving a home will end up costing a lot more money than the increased market price would bring.

Major improvements in a home, just for the purpose of getting a higher selling price is an "iffy" situation. Final costs almost always outstrip original estimates as do time estimates and extreme living inconvenience. All in all, it's usually a better practice to price the home in its present condition and let the buyer make the improvements.

Shaw's Plaza

Some of the excavation material that makes up Shaw's mountain will be used as fill to bring the base elevation of the parking lot up, said John McGrath, a project engineer with Tedeschi Realty Corp., which is building the plaza.

The septic system, which includes units that recirculate waste water through filters purifying effluent before it reaches the leaching field, is taking advantage of new technology and will alleviate the problems that have plagued the shopping center. In the past, the board of health repeatedly threatened to close down the shopping center because of the failed septic system at the site.

Rogan, who did not have any architect renderings available, said the finished Shaw's will look very much like the store off Route 139 in Hanover with brick and clapboard exterior and mansard roof front.

He explained that the typical Shaw's is 65,000 square feet and costs about $9 million to construct, including refrigeration, lighting, other equipment and computers. He did not have figures for the Cohasset Shaw's, which is considerably smaller due to space limitations at the site.

Betsy Detwiler, owner of Buttonwood Books & Toys, said she is looking forward to moving into the new retail space and is working with a designer on the lay-out.

She praised Shaw's for being so accommodating during the transition at the plaza.

"I knew it would take a big company like Shaw's which could afford to do (rebuild) the plaza properly," she said.

"Shaw's has been nice to work with, they are good landlords."

Built in the 1950's, the shopping center which originally housed an A&P Supermarket, has had a troubled history in recent years. Several years ago, its owners, Buildner's Holding Co., went bankrupt and the Old Stone Bank took the property over. When that bank failed, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation took control. Shaw's later bought the plaza.

The new supermarket will generate 225 part- or full-time jobs. Headquartered in East Bridgewater, Shaw's currently owns about 90 stores.

CHL Land Court Trial on Cable

The first two days of the Land Court trial on the Cohasset Heights landfill (CHL) suit to overturn the Cohasset Water Resource District will be broadcast in its entirety in four showings back to back on Cohasset local cable station Channel 3 from 6 p.m., Friday, March 7, through about 10 a.m., Monday, March 10.

The first showing of the entire two days, of the total of about nine hours of the trial held Feb. 13 and 14, will be from Friday 6 p.m. until about 3 a.m. Saturday morning, and will be followed by a 30-minute tape on the "pay per bag" program planned for Cohasset residents.

The tape will then rewind and show the entire 9-1/2 hour video again starting at about 4 a.m. Saturday morning, 3 p.m. Saturday afternoon, and the last showing is estimated from 1 a.m. to 10 a.m. Monday morning (times are approximate).

In the lawsuit, CHL alleges that the line of the Water Resource District was improperly drawn to include about 3 to 4 acres of CHL's proposed "Area V" expansion. Landfilling is prohibited in the district to protect the integrity of local water supplies.

The town of Cohasset contends that the district line was drawn to include Area V because water from that area drains toward the Sohier Street wells, an emergency water supply for the town. CHL contends that Area V does not drain toward the wells, and that the wells are not a legitimate water supply well.

The players at the trial are as follows: Judge Peter Kilborn, Cohasset attorneys Janice Rowan and Michael Leon, CHL attorneys Anton Moehrke and John Beling. CHL's witnesses are, in order: CHL owner Paul Barry, Steven Gioisia and Peter Dillon. Cohasset's witnesses are in order, Camp Dresser McKee (CDM) engineer Jeff Dierks (who helped establish the district) and CDM engineer Bob Weimar, who was in charge of designing the district for the town.

The trial continues Monday, March 24, when Cohasset will complete the testimony of Weimar and call its last witness, Tom Cook. Then, CHL may call Barry again for some brief rebuttal. The trial, which was expected to last only two days, will probably not last more than three.

Alix White to Seek Re-Election

Health board member Alix White, 224 Jerusalem Rd., has taken out papers to seek a second term. Hugh J. Morgan, 24 Bow St., plans to run for the school committee, and George E. Haley, 119 Pleasant St., seeks a seat on the library trustees.

Also in the running are: Selectman Peter Pratt, 75 Ripley Rd., for re-election; and Kathleen A. Ofsthun, 45 Fair Oaks Lane, for the school committee; Ralph Perroncello, 10 Pleasant Lane, for the Cohasset Housing Authority; Anne C. Bowdoin, 131 Nichols Rd., Patience C. Towle, 180 Lamberts Lane, and Agnes McCann, 104 Doane St., for re-election to the board of library trustees;

Joseph P. McElroy, 59 Windy Hill, for for school committee; Raimund G. Vanderweil, Jr., 500 Jerusalem Rd. for reelection to the board of sewer commissioners; Alfred S. Moore,Jr. 101 Fair Oaks Lane, for reelection to the planning board; Anne C. Bowdoin, 131 Nichols Rd., for reelection to the board of library trustees; Michael C. Patrolia, 15 Cushing Rd., for reelection to the board of assessors; and Mary K. Muncey, 377 S. Main St., for reelection to the recreation commission.

School Committee members JoAnne Chittick and Jim Kirk are not seeking re-election. Recreation commissioner Ted Carroll also said he will step down at the end of his term this spring.

Nomination papers for the May 3 Annual Town Election are available at the town clerk's office and must be turned in by March 17.

The following positions will be available: Selectmen — one for three years; School Committee — two for three years; Trustee Paul Pratt Memorial Library — three for three years; Assessor one for three years; Board of Health — one for three years; Cohasset Housing Authority — one for five years; Planning Board - one for five years; Recreation Commission — three for five years; Sewer Commission — one for three years; and Water Commission — one for three years.

Wednesday, March 19, is the last day to register for the Annual Town Meeting and Annual Town Election. Registration forms are available at the Town Clerk's Office, the Cohasset Post Office and the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. This form may be mailed or hand-delivered to the clerk's office but must be received or postmarked on or before the deadline.

AROUND TOWN/Sallyann Chatterton

Don't Miss Cohasset Web Page Discussion!

Mark your calendars now if you are interested in the Cohasset Web Page! There will be a demonstration and discussion forum at the Community Center March 12, at 5 p.m. The meeting will end at 6 p.m. unless you are so enthralled that you do not wish to leave! Jim Laggrotteria, Wayne Sawchuck and Bob Martin hope to encourage the participation of a large number of volunteers to make the Web Page a reality as quickly as possible. They will show you an outline of the Web Page as well as a graphic example of what information can be promulgated through the Internet. They really hope that you will join them!

Here is some great news from Arizona State University! Megan Fahey, daughter of Elaine and Brian Fahey, has been named to the dean's honor list for the first semester. Megan is planning a major in business management and a minor in Spanish to pursue a career in the women's sports industry. Way to go. Megan!

Last Sunday was the break-up dinner for the CHS gymnastic team, and what an event it was! Three super gals were honored at the event, Megan Pratt, Jodi Cowill and Erica Hettstrom. All three are seniors, and all three were varsity gymnasts for six years! They were (and are) super, dedicated, wonderful young ladies, and they will be a bright star wherever their paths take them!

Meanwhile, when you see any of the above mentioned, be sure to thank them for giving so much of themselves to our enjoyment, and wish them the best for their futures!

Neely Wakeman, a junior at the Holderness School, has been voted the co-captain-elect of that school's varsity field hockey team. This fall Neely was a key member of the team that went 8-4-1, won a central New England Lakes Region prep school league championship, and qualified for post season tournament play. It was Holderness' 11th Lakes Region field hockey championship in the last 12 years. Neely Wakeman is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel H. Wakeman of Cohasset.

Kudos go to Jemilah Y. Afshar who was recently named to the dean's list at Boston University for the fall semester! Keep up your good work, Jemilah!

Caitlin Stansell will be quite busy this week as she competes in two state ski championships. In addition to the Mass State Finals held Wednesday, she traveled to Gunstock ski area in Laconia, N.H. Saturday and Sunday, March 1 and 2 (hopefully she skied like gangbusters!). Caitlin is a freshman at CHS and a member of the Buddy Werner Racing Program and has competed in New Hampshire this season.

More skiing news, the CHS ski team is sending three of its members who qualified for the Mass. State Ski Championship to Berkshire East ski area in Charlemont. Freshman Caitlin Stansell finished first overall for the girls in the small school league and freshman, Liz Myers, finished 10th in the league. Senior Bobby Stansell finished third in the small school league for the boys. We are anxious to hear how these skiers did in the statewide competition!

Kudos go to Jemilah Y. Afshar who was recently named to the dean's list at Boston University for the fall semester! Keep up your good work, Jemilah!

Another standing ovation, this time for Kristin Lee Niessink, daughter of Deborah and Jan Niessink, who was named to the dean's list for the fall 1996 semester at Saint Michael's College in Colchester, Vt. Kristin is a sophomore biology major.

Colby College sends us word that Chloe J. Chittick, Class of 2000 and daughter of Stanley and JoAnne Chittick, was named to the dean's list for outstanding academic achievement during the fall semester of the 1996-97 academic year. We applaud you and your efforts, Chloe!

From Westfield State College Dr. Robert A. Martin, acting senior vice president for academic affairs at Westfield, has announced that Lori Gallant achieved dean's list for the fall semester. Lori's major is psychology.

A tip of the hat to Joe Slotnick, who is a member of the Vassar College men's basketball team. Joe is the team's leading rebounder, and against N.Y. Polytechnic he recorded a season high 16 rebounds.

Ann Dane, a sophomore majoring in biology at the University of Rochester, has been named to the fall 1996 dean's list for academic achievement. Congratulations!

We surely have a lot of students to be proud of, be sure to let them know that during spring break!

Please give me a call with your news, don't forget!

THE GOLDEN AGE OF TRAVEL

Sixty can be a golden figure when it comes to travel, because that's the number of birthday candles it usually takes to be eligible for the countless discount and special deals available today for seniors. Many airlines, hotels, cruise lines, and attractions offer reduced-price packages for the 60-plus traveler. Special restrictions may apply, such as traveling during off-peak times, so it's essential to get all the facts and plan ahead. One of the most delightful discoveries many seniors make is the beauty and grandeur of the United States. With the time to enjoy the countryside at a leisurely pace and away from the high tourist season, many of the nation's national parks make magnificent vacation destinations. Tours via bus and train, tailored specifically for mature travelers, are available virtually coast to coast.

Our pledge to all travelers who come to us at SCITUATE HARBOR TRAVEL, from the young to the young at heart - we will provide the best service possible for every client we represent. We will never lose sight that our honesty, loyalty, understanding, accountability, and creativity are what make us so different from other travel agencies. Time to get away? See us first at 53 Cole Parkway, Scituate Harbor. Our services are free, yet will save you time, money, and aggravation. PH: 545-4281 or 800-354-2720.

HINT: Sixty is the most common age that discounts kick in, but some are available to people as young as 55, and others not until 65 or older.

Obituaries

Suzanne L. Chor

Suzanne L. Chor, whose life spanned the 20th century, died Saturday, Feb. 1, at the Queen Anne Nursing Home in Hingham at age 96.

Mrs. Chor was born in 1901 at Rochefort-sur-Mer, France. Educated in Royan, France, she was among the first class of women to be admitted to technical school. In 1919 she went to Paris and worked as a draftsperson for her cousin, Auguste Rateau, inventor of the multicellular turbine and centrifugal pump. At the Liberation of Paris in World War I, she marched with the jubilant throng down the Champs-Elysees.

At age 23 she came to the United States. She worked in Chicago as an industrial designer and was an amateur actress in French plays at the Goodman Theater. During the Great Depression, she supported herself and her young son from her first marriage by giving private French lessons.

In 1938 she married Herman Chor, a psychiatrist and neurologist, and had two more children. During World War II she followed her husband, then a commander in the U.S. Navy, to naval bases at Mare Island, Calif., and Margate, N.J. She returned to Chicago in 1943 when he was stationed at Pearl Harbor.

After Dr. Chor's untimely death in 1960, she resumed her teaching. A vigorous and independent woman, she continued working until age 89. She was a member of the Saddle & Cycle Club and the English-Speaking Union.

In 1990 she moved from Chicago to the Cambridge Homes in Cambridge, Mass., then to Queen Anne Nursing Home to be near her daughter. In robust health until her final year, she died of old age.

She leaves two sons, Pierre L. Noble of Concord, Calif., and Philip N. Chor of Chicago; a daughter, Jacqueline M. Dormitzer of Cohasset; a brother, Pierre Lemerle of Nice, France; seven grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren.

A private prayer service will be held at St. Joseph's Villa in Cohasset and burial will take place in Chicago.

Celia Tiffin

Celia (Hopkins) Tiffin, wife of the late Kenneth C. Tiffin, died Feb. 15 at her home in Cohasset. She was 95.

Mrs. Tiffin was born in Greenfield, New Hampshire, and was a long-time resident of West Newton and Holliston before moving to Cohasset in 1984. She graduated from Cushing Academy in Ashburnham and from Miss Pierce's School in Boston. After her schooling, she taught in the Barnstable school system until her marriage in 1924 to Kenneth C. Tiffin, a Boston attorney.

For many years Mrs. Tiffin and her husband raised Great Dane dogs and were active in several organizations involved in the breeding and showing of pure-bred dogs. She was a licensed judge for the American Kennel Club, and traveled widely in the United States and abroad with her husband judging dog shows.

Mrs. Tiffin was a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Mayflower Society, the National Huguenot Society and the Atlantic Chapter, Number 28 of the Eastern Star, Francestown, New Hampshire. She was a member of the New England Historical & Genealogical Society, and was also active with the Greenfield, New Hampshire, Historical Society.

She leave two sons: Jay H. Tiffin of Belleair, Florida, and James B. Tiffin of Hingham. She was the sister of Frances H. Bristol of White River Junction, Vt. and the late Ella H. Pool. She also leaves seven grandchildren and six great grandchildren.

A memorial service was conducted February 22 at the Hingham Congregational Church. Interment in Greenfield, New Hampshire, was private. Arrangements were by the Downing Cottage Funeral Chapel, Hingham.

Donations may be made in Mrs. Tiffin's memory to the Hingham Visiting Nurse Association, 10 Downer Ave., Hingham 02043.

Ten Minutes for Walk-ins

Selectmen set aside 10 minutes at 8 p.m. on their meeting nights to address any concerns from members of the public who have issues that are not on the agenda.

If the matter cannot be handled briefly, it will be placed on a future agenda, selectmen said.

Spiritual Journeys at First Parish

Two 20th century figures, one Jewish, one Christian, are regarded as heroic by millions of people around the globe. Sunday, March 9, the Rev. "Jenny" Rankin, interim minister of the First Parish (Unitarian-Universalist) in Cohasset, will preach on "The Spiritual Journey of Anne Frank" in the meeting house on Cohasset Common.

"The Spiritual Journey of Oscar Romero" will be her sermon topic Sunday, March 16. Anne Frank's story is well-known; Archbishop Romero was murdered 15 years ago this month in El Salvador. The services start at 10:30 a.m. Child care is available in the parish house across the street from the meeting house.

EDITORIALS & OPINIONS

New Numbers, New Deadlines

In an effort to increase service, we have a host of new telephone numbers here at the Cohasset Mariner.

And we're going to move our deadlines up so community copy can be processed earlier.

The Cohasset Mariner office in Hingham can be reached through our new number, 383-8139, and each member of the staff here has a line assigned just to them (see box below).

Sounds complicated? It does, but with cellular phones, pagers and FAX machines — multiple numbers to reach people have become a way of life.

With the new phone system, when you call the Cohasset Mariner with circulation or classified advertising questions, we can transfer you to someone who can help you. Those of you who called us at the Hingham office in the past, know that we often had to take your number down and have someone get back to you.

An exciting development is that we can now be reached by e-mail. Our e-mail address is: mary.ford@cnc.com.

Now, this is the hard part.

Our deadlines are being moved way up to facilitate production at our headquarters in Marshfield. Most of you know that the Cohasset Mariner is part of Mariner Community Newspapers, which publishes 14 weekly papers.

Community copy — that which is submitted by you — goes down to Marshfield to be typeset and proofread before it gets into the system. Because of the quantity of copy, it's become increasingly difficult to get it processed fast enough to meet the press deadlines for the various papers.

So, starting Friday, March 14, community copy must be at the drop spot at Cohasset News by 8 a.m., for the following week's paper, which will be the March 20 issue.

This means we're changing our deadlines from noon, Tuesday to 8 a.m., Friday. Please strive to have your notices about happenings about town in a week ahead of time.

Will there be exceptions? Of course, there will be. If something occurs over the weekend, or if there's an obituary or letter-to-the-editor — we can be flexible. But most of you know about your bottle-and-can drive, concert, or school event well ahead of time. We need those notices by 8 a.m. on Friday.

Here at the Cohasset Mariner, we hope with earlier deadlines and a new telephone system that we'll be better able to serve you.

Train Concerns Aired

To the Editor:

As an observer at the MBTA meeting at your town hall Thursday, Feb. 27, I listened intently to the MBTA and their approach for easing the effects of the Greenbush train through your town. Certainly Andrew Brennan (MBTA) and Barry Faulkner (Severup) have mastered the mitigation process by avoiding as much detail as possible, and using the federal government to their advantage. But who really was taken advantage of? The Jan. 30 issue of the Scituate Mariner referenced a letter from the T that Robert Egan, design and construction manager, is the new Greenbush liaison to all communities* as of Jan. 10. Are all of Andrew's promises history?

In the MBTA's remarks, they stated the trains will run Saturdays. The environmental department wants to have bicycle access to Wompatuck State Park on the weekend. This changes many factors not discussed like the noise and vibration estimates, pollution impacts, traffic impacts, the schedule as originally presented .... So how many runs will they make Saturdays? Monday through Friday they are currently proposing 24 runs per day? If they are including Saturdays, what about access to the coastal beaches Sunday or late night run for freight?

There was extensive discussion about the lack of mitigation of noise and vibration for commercial properties in the village area because the Federal Railroad Administration (FRA) does not require it. This project is not being built with federal funds, only our state tax dollars. It does not seem unreasonable to up the standards.

Standards seem to change from town to town to fit the MBTA such as the traffic light issue at the 3A station which was raised at the meeting. Hingham's Nantasket Junction station also located on Route 3A, about 1-1/4 miles away which has entrances off Route 3A, is being designed today with traffic signals on Route 3A at the intersection of Summer Street.

What about the whistle ban the MBTA is designing the project for? Are you aware that the Federal Railroad Administration (FRA) states that at grade crossings (where track intersects roads) where train whistles are banned, the likelihood of grade crossing crashes is 84 percent greater than at similar crossings where train horns are routinely sounded. It's like eliminating the sirens of fire trucks, ambulance or police cars. Also, collisions between trains and motor vehicles are 11 times more likely to result in fatalities than collisions between two motor vehicles on highways.

I was amazed that the price of the project that Andrew Brennan is representing is $215 million but he does not have the authority to spend $1.5 million to aid in the flood control. The cost to the town and its residents is going to be far greater than $1.5 million. I recommend when you go to your legislators you do not ask for their support to negotiate the $1.5 million, ask them to stop the waste of $215 million. Both Mary Jeanette Murray and Bob Hedlund have stated their opposition to the project; let's get them to put their words into actions.

What was not mentioned at the meeting was the effects of diesel pollution will have on our communities especially in light of the EPA's recent press release (1/31/97). "A typical locomotive can produce as much nitrogen oxide in one year as 3,000 passenger cars. Smog causes serious respiratory illness and exacerbates asthma attacks in children. Particulate matter has been associated with cancer and premature death." The MBTA intends on at least four diesel locomotives operating daily on the Greenbush line, now including Saturdays. According to the MBTA's own documents (SDEIR), the Greenbush project intends to remove only 1,330 cars from the Southeast Expressway. The math indicates the locomotive pollution will be nearly 10 times greater than the cars removed (3000x4=12,000 vs. 1,330 cars).

Editor's note: Andrew Brennan, environmental affairs manager at the MBTA, continues to manage the environmental review of the Greenbush project. Robert Egan, who has worked extensively on the Middleboro and Plymouth lines of the Old Colony restoration project, was named design and construction project manager on Greenbush in January. Mr. Egan has been interacting more with Scituate lately as that town deals with complex design issues surrounding the lay-over facility and large Greenbush station.*

Cohasset Village Station

"In the eyes of the mitigation committee, the Village station is dead," Rizzo said. "But it's not a dead issue for me as a resident of Cohasset."

Brennan said the T was merely following the wishes of the board of selectmen.

"I don't know what more I can do," Brennan said.

The forum was the town's official response to the MBTA's Greenbush mitigation plan. The Cohasset mitigation committee handed Brennan a three-page letter from selectmen listing several areas where the T's plan fails to adequately address the town's concerns.

But Brennan said the T's mitigation plan was only a first draft.

"This is very much a document in motion and that draft is our first stab at mitigation," Brennan said. "We want to hear everyone's concerns and make changes based on that. We assume this is going to change a lot. Even the drawings of the station are conceptual."

The mitigation committee brought up several areas of concern during the four-hour meeting. Rizzo said the town would like a traffic light installed at the train station to allow traffic to safely turn left against the traffic flow onto Route 3A.

Route 3A is a state highway and the Massachusetts Highway Commission has jurisdiction over signals and upgrades on the road. Brennan said traffic volume on 3A is not high enough to warrant a signal.

"Massachusetts Highway Commission sets the standards and our read of their regulations is the traffic flow on Route 3A does not meet their requirements for a signal," Brennan said.

Brennan added that the T would install the light if Mass. Highway approved the request.

Rizzo also asked Brennan to cancel plans for a drop off/pick-up area on North Main Street. The mitigation committee wants the T to have a drop off area only on Route 3A.

"The drop off area on North Main would leave us without one clear artery in town." said mitigation committee member Michael Dick.

Brennan said the T was under a directive from Secretary of Environmental Affairs Trudy Coxe to maximize pedestrian and bicycle access to all commuter rail stations.

"I feel the solution is worse than the problem," Brennan said. "I'm concerned that if we don't build the drop off area, people will use it on their own anyway."

Rizzo said the town would also like the T to reconsider closing grade crossings at three private roads-- Lincoln Lane, Castle Lane and Sestido Lane. Rizzo said the T's plan would inhibit emergency access to the three private roads.

The T plans to close the grade crossings to reduce the likelihood of train whistles blowing to alert traffic. Federal regulations require conductors to blow train whistles at all grade crossings unless alternative safety measures are installed.

The closed grades would force residents of the three roads to access their streets from complicated alternate routes.

Brennan said the T could keep the crossings open and still prohibit whistles by installing median barriers at the three streets. Median barriers are nine-inch high curbs that run down the middle of the road 100-200 feet back from the grade crossing and prevent cars from driving around the crossing gates.

Brennan said the T would examine alternatives to closing the grade crossings.

Rizzo also asked Brennan to provide an alternate access route for Rocky Lane. There is only one access road for Rocky Lane, which has a grade crossing. If a train derailed or broke down at the Rocky Lane crossing, emergency vehicles would not have access to homes on the street.

The mitigation committee asked Brennan to extend noise and vibration mitigation to all businesses affected by the trains. The T currently has different noise and vibration thresholds for businesses and homes.

Brennan said the T only mitigated businesses that were highly sensitive to noise and vibration. He added that a contact lens-grinding company and The South Shore Art Center may qualify for mitigation because both are sensitive to noise and vibration.

Selectmen Peter Pratt asked Brennan to pick up part of the cost of a flood control project in the James Brook basin (see sidebar).

Rizzo asked Brennan to relocate the Strawberry Parfait restaurant because the track alignment would inhibit access to the business and trains would pass too close to the outdoor dining area.

"I'll have to really look at this for a while," Brennan said.

Brennan also rejected arguments that the reestablished rail line would adversely impact rare plant and animal species.

"You're assuming there is a loss of species and we disagree with that presumption," Brennan said.

Brennan asked members of the mitigation committee to provide documentation specifying which rare species would be hurt by the rail line.

Brennan urged residents to stay involved in the mitigation process and continue to bring their concerns to the T.

"There is a lot of time and opportunity to make changes based on what you hear at these meetings," Brennan said.

MBTA Cool to Request for Flood Control Funds

At last week's Greenbush mitigation MBTA Manager of Environmental Affairs Andrew Brennan would not agree to share the cost of a flood control project in the James Brook basin with the town.

Last October's record rain storm left much of downtown Cohasset flooded as rain water poured out of the flooded James Brook basin.

Selectmen Peter Pratt pointed out that once the T reestablishes its right of way on the rail bed, the town will not be able to reconstruct culverts that would relieve flood waters. Pratt said the T will also make the problem worse when it begins displacing wetlands for tracks.

Pratt said the town has applied for $1.5 million in federal assistance to implement a plan to prevent future flooding. Pratt added that the T should pay at least $500,000 of the $1.5 million project, and work with the town on an integrated solution.

"Your flood control problems go beyond our immediate right of way," Brennan said. "I can make mitigation decisions, but I don't have $1.5 million in leeway."

Brennan said members of the mitigation committee would have to meet with MBTA General Manager Patrick Moynihan to negotiate for flood control money.

Mitigation Consultant Possible

Selectmen are pondering the possibility of hiring a consultant to deal with the MBTA on mitigation issues surrounding the return of the train. They also plan to see if other Greenbush towns would be interested in retaining a joint consultant.

They said they'd address the issue following town meeting.

But in the meantime, they feel that interim town administrator Ed McCann should be the town's point man on mitigation issues.

Barbara Anglin, 56 Spring St., who atttended the selectmen's meeting on Monday suggested the town hire someone "who would be paid and be impartial."

Anglin's comments followed discussion on the petition, which is floating around town, asking selectmen to reoopen the village station issue. The MBTA says the village station is dead unless selectmen, who recently voted that the station should be on Route 3A, change their minds.

Town mitigation committee chairman Dean Rizzo, who is vice president of the Chamber of Commerce, came under fire for being one of the driving forces behind the petition.

Selectman Peter Pratt said it "pains him to see Rizzo as a petitioner" and suggested that Rizzo was pushing a personal agenda which "sets a troubling precedent."

Rizzo assured the board that he is able to remain neutral in mitigation matters that affect the town.

Backers of the village station plan to present their petition at the selectmen's meeting March 10.

ALS is Most Valuable Service

To the Editor:

The article in the Feb. 27th issue of the Cohasset Mariner — "Everyone Benefits From Advanced Life Support" has prompted me to reaffirm how very valuable this service is to the region.

How immensely grateful my husband and I are for the prompt response of the EMT's on Sept. 23, who recognized the seriousness of my situation and immediately called the trained paramedics from the South Shore Hospital's ALS. Because of their skills they in turn called the Med-Flight helicopter to take me to the Brigham & Women's Hospital in Boston where a team effort saved not only my life but our daughter's as well.

How fortunate we are that our towns had the foresight to work with the South Shore Hospital to develop an emergency medical service to the region by providing trained paramedics to the towns, at little cost to the respective communities. Help arrived within minutes on Sept. 23 with the result I have my life back and am on the road to recovery. And baby Claire is doing well.

We would also like to extend our gratitude to the entire community of Cohasset for their prayers and assistance with meals, well wishes and constant support in this most difficult time of our lives.

Keep Station on 3A

To the Editor:

Ten years ago, my wife and I relocated to Massachusetts from Texas. We were not familiar with any of the South Shore area and discovered Cohasset after making a wrong turn off 228. We immediately fell in love with the village including the churches, common area and downtown businesses. Both of our children have since arrived and we have realized that Cohasset is an excellent and safe town to raise children offering them many opportunities.

As local business owners, we discuss frequently the difficulties of the village businesses. The successful appear to be "destination" locations offering specialty types of merchandise and survive because customers are willing to drive to the village and make purchases that are not readily offered elsewhere. Examples might be Flemings, the Children's Exchange, Cards and Shards, or the French Memories Bakery.

Recently, a new petition has been circulating to locate the proposed train station in the village. While on the surface it would appear to be beneficial to the revitalization of the village businesses, we have received feedback from other businesses in towns with stations that overall the businesses have not increased significantly, and in many cases the commuters have hurt businesses making them inaccessible by parking in their customers spaces. Also, the commuters as a whole are in a hurry to leave and don't normally patronize the local businesses.

Another significant drawback to a downtown station is the impact on the character of the village and common area. We cannot accommodate 350 additional cars for parking in this area without impacting the essence of our village.

However, our greatest concern lies in the safety of a downtown station. We already are contending with the high-speed rail, do we also want 350 cars plus drop-offs emerging from the shortest-possible-commuter route to the station? Their routes would include most of the neighborhood streets and pass near all of the schools at the same time our children are walking and riding their bikes to school. Also, in the summer months the commuters will be leaving Cohasset through many of our neighborhoods when the children are outside playing.

Let's keep our neighborhoods safe and maintain the character of our village by locating the station on 3A as originally proposed.

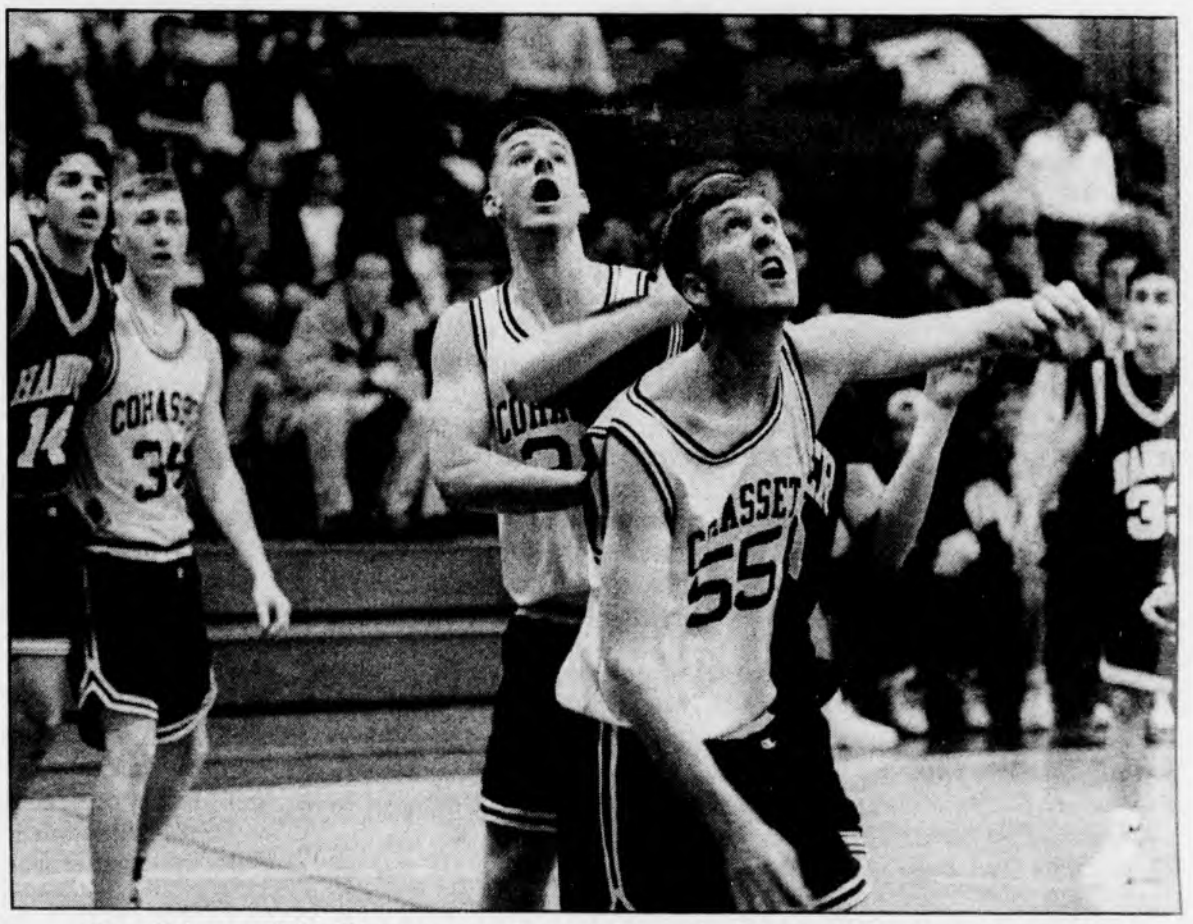
Skippers Bounced by Bishop Feehan

CHS Closes Tourney Run with 64-58 Loss

By Jim O'Sullivan
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Cohasset High Skippers' basketball season ended last Friday with a dramatic loss to Bishop Feehan in the second round of the state tournament. Cohasset displayed great talent and heart in the game however, playing one of its best games of the year.



Senior, three-year varsity player, and team leader Ryan Bishop fought for 15 points and South Shore League All-Star J.L. Williams battled for 14. Raheem Shepard, a sophomore, played the best game of his brief varsity career, contributing 10 points on offense and very aggressive defense.

However, the Skippers were overmatched by Feehan's Casey Carney, who poured in 28 points, three below his season average. Filled by a capacity crowd, the gym was downright steamy and contributed to the game's drama. Seeded number nine in the South Sectionals, Cohasset gave Bishop Feehan a healthy run for their money.

Burke Davis got the Skippers on the board with a free throw and Jamie Buick nailed a foul line jumper. Bishop went up and under for a bucket, then had a dunk called back on the next possession. The big guy got it back, though, when he hit a reverse lay-up. Paul-Michael Quintin scored his first points with a three-pointer and Williams sank one as well. Davis snared a rebound and pushed it ahead, going coast-to-coast for the lay-up in traffic. Bishop hit a lay-up and Brian Kilroy's crisp ball movement resulted in Pat Hurley draining a trey. Kilroy played tough defense in the paint and helped contain Feehan's explosive offense, but they still forged ahead. Despite a bucket from Bishop and a three from Williams, Cohasset trailed 25-34 heading into the locker room.

Williams started the second half with a three and Shepard pulled Cohasset within four with a pair of lay-ups. Quintin knocked down a freebie and Shepard did the same. Bishop tore down an offensive board and laid it in for two. Davis banked one high off the glass and Bishop hit a key basket in traffic to

Skippers Trap Greater New Bedford Bears 68-43 in Tourney Opener

By Jim O'Sullivan
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Cohasset High Skippers took Greater New Bedford by storm last Wednesday, romping over the Bears in an emotionally charged Division III preliminary round game.

Paul-Michael Quintin (23), Ryan Bishop (15), and J.L. Williams (15) led the Skippers in their 68-43 rout. The game was ended with 53 ticks still left on the clock when few Cohasset fans were involved in a ruckus in the stands. Despite its shortened time, the victory went in the books for the Skippers.

The two teams came out relatively even for the first few minutes, as Cohasset played its trademark stifling defense but was off in their shooting. Paul-Michael Quintin hit a three, though, and Williams followed with a jumper. Bishop displayed his ever-widening arsenal with a smooth pivot move and a lay-up in traffic, knotting the score at 9-9.

Williams up-faked and made a quick drive to the hole for two points, then knocked down the jump shot to push Cohasset in front of the Bears by four. Pat Hurley picked off a pass and laid it in at the other end for a pair, and Bishop swished an eight-foot jumper, a shot which seemed to hang in the rafters before deciding to come down. Senior floor general Burke Davis stepped in the lane and took a charge, further firing up the Skippers. Cohasset capitalized when Williams knocked down a trey, giving the visitors a 20-11 edge.

Jamie Buick nailed a pull-up jumper from the foul line and Quintin sank a three, then a pull-up of his own. Williams tossed in his second trifecta of the evening and Davis followed with one of his own. Quintin closed out the half with four free throws, giving Cohasset a 37-17 lead at half-time.

Bishop got on the board first in the second half, muscling his way to the rim for two. Davis hit a lay-up and Williams hit yet another three. Greater New Bedford finally scored after what had been an 11-0 Skipper run, beginning before half-time, but Quintin responded with a steal and lay-up. Quintin nailed a three and the Bears' outlook was bleak. Brian Kilroy and Raheem Shepard came off the bench to provide an inside presence for the Skippers and worked effectively. Good ball movement got the ball into Bishop's hands and the big man capitalized, collecting another bucket.

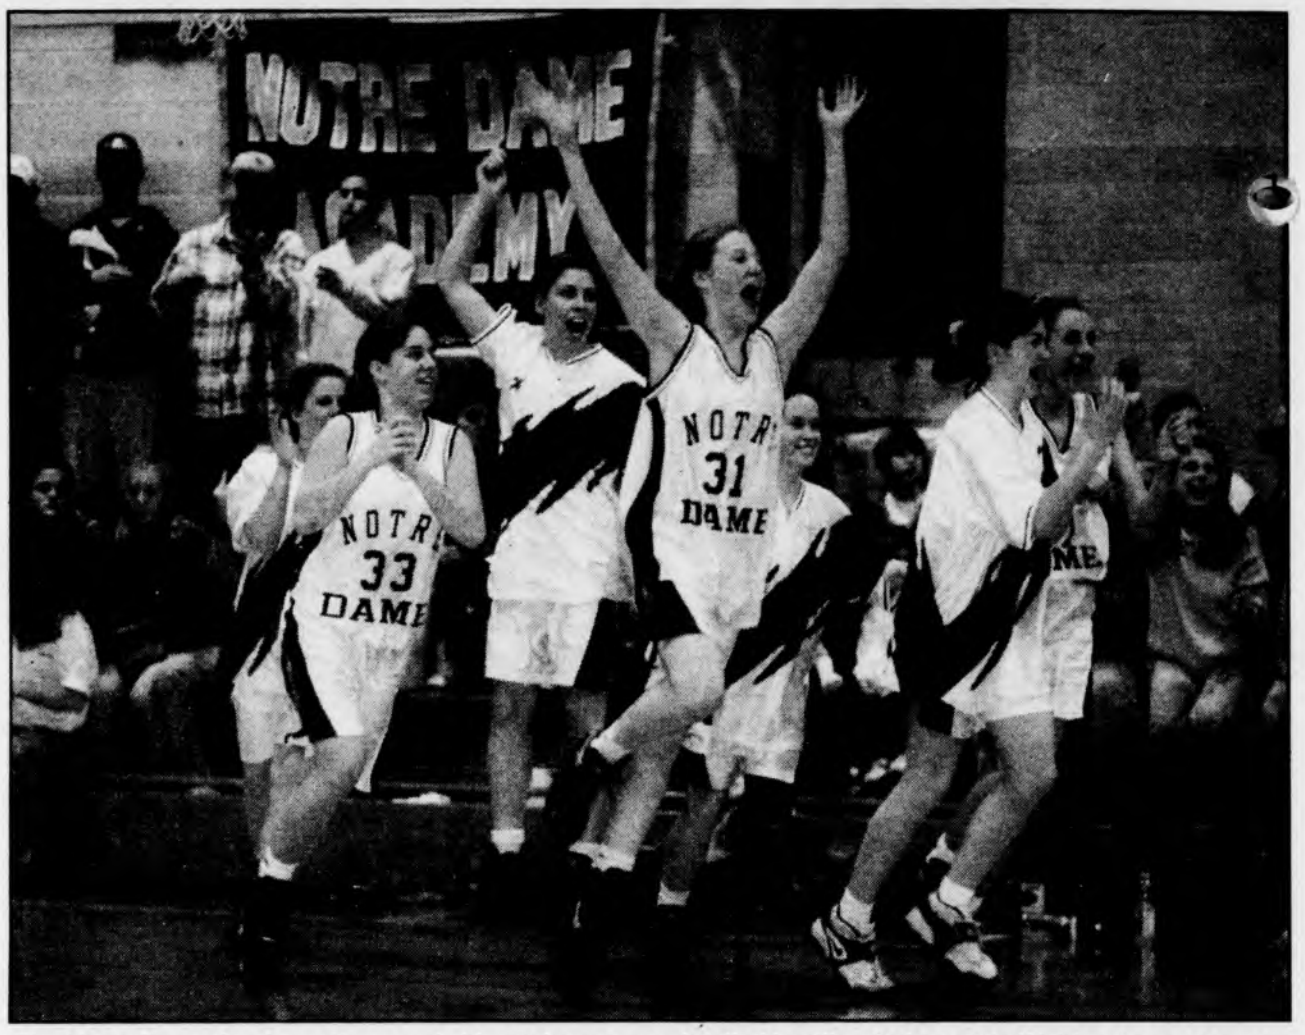
Sally Hamill's 26 points leads NDA Over Silver Lake

By Danielle Thibeault
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The first round of the Division I Girls' Basketball Tournament was a success for Notre Dame with a big win over Silver Lake, but with the advancement to the quarterfinals, the team couldn't seem to take control and surpass Braintree.



Notre Dame faced Silver Lake (seeded 11th) on Feb. 26 at their home court, ready to play.

With a starting team of Sally Hamill (26 points), Liz Brustin (four points), Nicki Reilly (14 points), Joanna Logue (12 points) and Jess Bradbury (seven points), NDA took the first possession and began the contest. Hamill controlled the floor and stumbled Silver Lake's defense with passes around the perimeter. Reilly, Brustin and Logue managed to take the majority of the rebounds, and the Cougars scored almost all their points in the first half on break-aways. Hamill sank the outside shots, including a couple of three-pointers, and Colleen Manning came in, exerting tremendous hustle to aid the team.

Unfortunately, Brustin found foul trouble with 5:35 left to play in the first half, but was replaced by freshman Colleen Kennedy (two points) who took over the point position for the remaining 4:47. NDA finished the half with a losing score of 30-35 after giving up their 10-point lead as a result of careless fouls and missed inside shots.

The second half against Silver Lake was a struggle, as the girls couldn't work the ball inside and make layups. Kennedy subbed early and showed her excellent ball-handling skills. The team got their act together with 11:41 remaining, with Bradbury, Logue, Reilly and Hamill stealing the ball. Katie McElaney came into the game and contributed to the number of steals as well. Silver Lake found foul trouble early, forcing NDA to the line many times. With 6:32 to play, NDA started to lose control, resulting in only a two-point lead. With 10 seconds left, Bradbury fouled the best shooter for S.L. on a three-point attempt. Only two of the shots were made, and both Reilly and Logue were fouled with five seconds remaining, resulting in a 64-59 victory for the Cougars. The girls worked their hardest and deserved the win.

Notre Dame then faced the Braintree Wamps at Braintree High for the quarterfinals. With the same starting five, the team began slowly, and didn't pick up the pace until the second half. In the first half, they started off with a man-to-man defense and kept the score to a minimum. Although the girls committed a lot of turnovers, their outside shots seemed to find the net. Hamill (12 points) and Kennedy controlled the offense against a press, but couldn't complete their passes.

The Notre Dame Academy Cougars, led by Cohasset guard Sally Hamill, rolled to a big Division I state tourney win over Silver Lake. Here the NDA team charges onto the court in celebration.

The lead for NDA was lost with 2:49 remaining in the first half as the girls were not able to penetrate Braintree's defense and work the ball inside. The small amount of steals that NDA produced were made by Bradbury (nine points) and Kennedy, and the rebounds were ripped down by Reilly (nine points), Bradbury and Logue (six points). The first half ended with a score of 24-23, Braintree in the lead.

The beginning second half didn't look promising for the Cougars, making uncompleted passes and turnovers that affected the team's spirit. Logue and Reilly blocked Braintree's shots, exciting the crowd, but it wasn't enough to put NDA ahead. Bradbury continued to steal and was able to draw fouls, adding to the score. Hamill worked the ball outside and made a few three-pointers to decrease Braintree's lead by three points.

For the last five minutes of the game, NDA repeatedly stole the ball to keep Braintree from scoring, but couldn't make the shots on the break-aways. The game ended with Braintree winning 45-40.

The loss was a disappointing one for Notre Dame, but their season reflects the talent of the team. The girls are losing one starter, Jess Bradbury, and two other seniors, Nancy Ruscio and Kiersten Sullivan. Next winter looks to have a promising season, and hopefully a Catholic Conference Title as well. Congratulations to the team on a season well done!

NDA Track Update

March 1 brought about the All State Meet for NDA's indoor track team. Continuing their success, many of the girls qualified for the New England High School Championship to be held at Harvard University and the National Scholastic Indoor Championship, which is raced at the Reggie Lewis Center. Sarah Anderson placed 15th in the mile with a time of 5:41, while Courtney Paquette placed 16th in the 600 meter in 1:43.

The victorious 4x200 team of Talin Aprahamian, Amy Gabriel, Megan Cross and Jess Gogola placed eighth with a time of 1:49.31, surpassing their previous time by .82 seconds. The 4x800 team achieved personal bests, racing in 10:20, which was 14 seconds faster than last week. Alice Kirpas ran 2:34, Anderson ran in 2:30, Michelle Quinlan raced in with 2:42, and Burke finished with 2:33. The New England High School Championship and the Nationals will both be held March 8.

pull Cohasset within a pair, 42-40.

Shepard's great defense forced a turnover and Bishop popped in a fadeaway, but Feehan had scored eight in a row with just four minutes to go. Williams rained down a trifecta and Bishop sank one from the charity stripe. Shepard swished his first three-pointer of the season to pull the Skippers within three, 49-52 and the sparse Cohasset gathering was on their feet, while the raucous Feehan crowd looked on nervously. Bishop tore down a rebound and Shepard finished, making it 57-51 with 1:45 remaining. Williams muscled his way to the offensive boards, grabbed a rebound, and put it back for two.

Quintin played defense in Carney's shirt and tipped the ball to Davis, who finished, got fouled, and hit the free throw. The visitors trailed by only five with 55 ticks remaining. Davis nailed two from the line to pull within four with 30 seconds to go, but Cohasset had taken its last gasp. Despite gallant efforts by the Skippers, Bishop Feehan prevailed and moved on to the third round of the tourney. Tuesday night, Feehan, led again by Carney, slid by Rockland in overtime.

The game marked the end of the Skippers' season and drew to a close the end of magnificent careers for Matt Belson, Ryan Bishop, Burke Davis, Grant Emde, Brian Kilroy and J.L. Williams. Cohasset's seniors exhibited great class and leadership this year, along with an enormous amount of basketball ability.

Quintin scored his 20th point with some long-distance marksmanship and his twenty third in the same way. Bishop's runner in the paint fell, and he earned a trip to the line for a freebie, which he sank. He widened the Skipper lead to 62-38 with two more free throws. Buick pitched in a pair from the stripe and seniors Matt Belson and Grant Emde stepped up to get in the Bears' faces with some ferocious defense. Justin McNamara, Andy Hamilton, John Kasameyer and Eric Wenmark all provided the Skippers with good defense, and McNamara, Hamilton, Emde and Kasameyer all hit free throws while Jamie DeMichele directed the offense.

The game ended with a disturbance in the stands and the teams were herded into their respective locker rooms. Bishop pointed out that the four Cohasset rooters involved were four of the most faithful Skipper fans and had been to most of the games.

The bus ride home was a raucous one, and players and coaches alike were pleased with their performance.

RECREATION NOTES

Indoor Golf Lessons

The Cohasset Recreation Department, in conjunction with the Scituate Recreation Department, will accept registrations via phone for adult indoor golf lessons, scheduled to begin Thursday evening, March 6.

Lessons are five weeks in duration, meeting one hour weekly and cost $65 per person. Classes are limited to eight individuals maximum in size and registrations are accepted on a first enrolled basis. Should you require use of golf clubs for the classes, indicate this at the time of your registration and we will loan you clubs for the classes free of charge.

To register call the Cohasset Registration Department at 383-6791. Mr. Dan Neary will be the golf pro teaching this session, which will be held at the Cushing Elementary School, off Route 3A, Scituate.

Class times are 6 and 7 p.m.

Summer Employment

The Cohasset Recreation Department is currently accepting applications for playground program counselors for their seven-week day camp program.

Candidates should have demonstrated experience working with children in a structured setting. Employment is for seven weeks, from June 30 through Aug. 15 plus a one-day orientation during late June. CPR certification is mandatory and the recreation commission will conduct a course during late June for those who need CPR certification.

Openings exist for both the pre-school half-day program and the 5- to 12-year-old, full-day programs.

The recreation commission conducts a seven-week day camp structured program for children 3-1/2 through 12 years of age.

Should you be interested in applying, call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at (617) 383-6791 for an application or further information.

Fourth-Graders Impersonate Famous Americans of the Southeast

Monday and Tuesday, Feb. 10 and 11, the Dixieland Diner was open for business and schmoozing in Mrs. Horrigan's fourth-grade classroom. A project done in collaboration with Miss Henry and her fourth-graders produced a delightful gathering of important characters from the American Southeast who met for breakfast and shared information about each other. Parents and friends joined student impersonators for presentations, conversations and delicious breakfast food in the morning hosted by the two teachers who spoke with lovely southern drawls.

The diner was lively with colorful guests. Davy Crockett opened things up and told the group that he preferred the open woods of Tennessee to the congressional meeting rooms of Washington, D.C. Dolly Madison told of her adventures, loves and losses, and her wonderful dinner parties. Elvis, Loretta Lynn, Dolly Parton and Louis Armstrong made some fine music. Helen Keller and Rosa Parks described their triumphs over adversity. Martin Luther King was articulate and inspiring. Past presidents Jimmy Carter and Abe Lincoln, and statesman Patrick Henry conferred over strawberries in orange juice. Military figures Robert E. Lee, General Stonewall Jackson and General Douglas MacArthur told of the honor of military service.

Athletes Muhammad Ali, Jessie Owens, Jackie Robinson and Bill Russell were on hand. Seminole Indian Sequoya and educator Booker T. Washington discussed reading and writing. Authors Peal Buck, Tennessee Williams, Lilian Hellman and Margaret Mitchell shared breakfast with Kit Carson. It was an incredible gathering of outstanding Southeast Americans enjoying fine food and sharing their life stories. Everyone enjoyed themselves and learned things they had never known before and will remember for a long time.

Greek Comedy on Stage

The Cohasset Drama Workshop will present the play "The Twin Manaechmi," a Greek comedy, under the direction of Nigel Cracknell, an exchange teacher from England. The cast includes high school students John Crowley-Buck, Jerry Cogill, Kelly Tufts, Meredith O'Hayre, Mike Kearney, Holly Brennock, Justin Golden, Grace Gardner, Stephen Reynolds, Jenny Chastain, Alex D'urso and stage manager Jacque Hurley.

The show will be at 7:30 p.m. Friday, March 14, and at 2 p.m. Sunday, March 16, in the senior study at the high school. Tickets are available at the door for $4.

This show marks the acting debut of several of the cast members and will be Mr. Cracknell's only directorial venture while in the United States this year. Please come to

DRUG FACT

"Our children need to hear a clear and consistent no-use message about marijuana — that it is illegal, dangerous and wrong. Research tells us it limits learning, memory, perception, judgment and motor skills, and it damages the brain, heart, lungs and immune system. Marijuana is not a 'soft' drug."

Guest speaker is Joe Hajjar, proprietor of the Yard Rock Cafe in Quincy. Hajjar also organizes the annual City of Presidents Blues Festival, which will celebrate its fifth anniversary this year. Hajjar will share the rewards he has experienced as a volunteer in the city of Quincy and the value he sees in business and community partnerships as a way to build strength and unity within a community.

In other business:

- Jim Sandell, of Carr, Lynch & Sandell Associates, will present the results of the Village Design Charrette weekend, which took place in December.
- Presentation of proceeds from our annual auction held in November. Organizations to receive contributions will be Harborfest, Appalachian Service Project, and Veterans of Foreign Wars – VFW.
- Recap of 1996 and goals for 1997.

Cohasset Pool Best Design

Massachusetts-Aquaknot Pools, Inc. of Weymouth has won a bronze in the 1996-'97 International Design Awards Competition sponsored by the National Spa and Pool Institute (NSPI).

The pool, featuring a blue stone terrace, and an attached spa, is located in Cohasset. This year's NSPI International Design Awards Competition featured 772 entries from all regions of the U.S. as well as seven different countries around the world competing in the 52 categories. Winners were determined by a panel of judges, made up of pool and spa industry professionals and representatives from related fields.

The award was presented to Aquaknot Pools, Inc. during NSPI's EXPO '96 in Phoenix, Ariz., Nov. 20, 1996. This is the second consecutive year Aquaknot Pools, Inc. has received this award, a first for any New England company.

Mass.-Aquaknot Pools of Weymouth won a design award for this Cohasset pool.

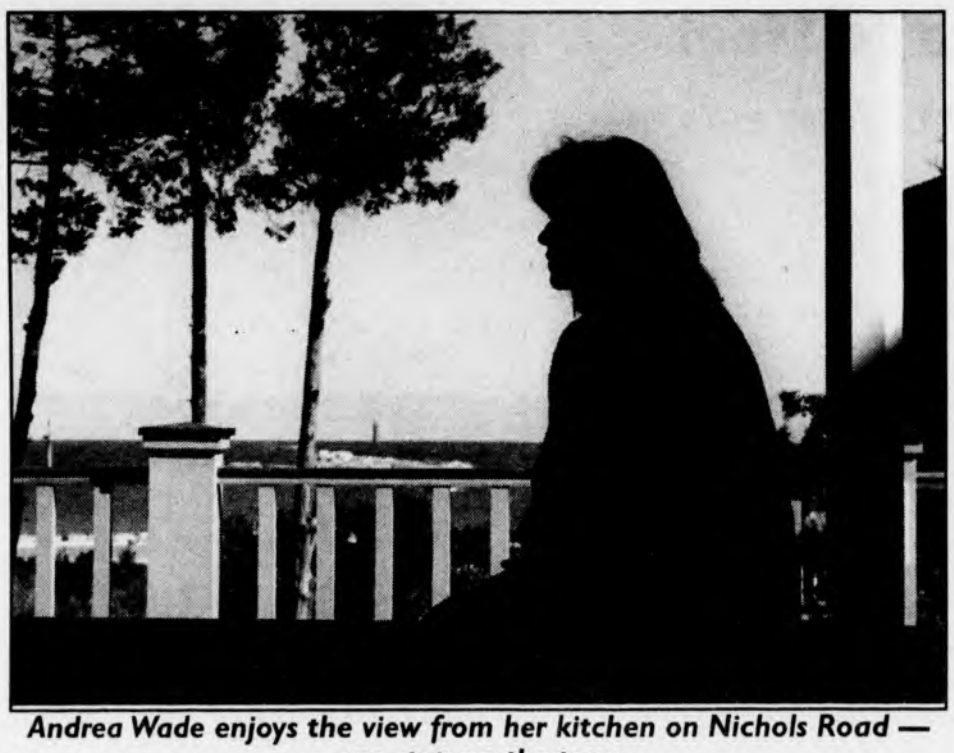
Annual Easter Egg Hunt

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct the 20th annual Easter Egg Hunt, for children three through 11 years of age, Saturday, March 22, at noon, Deer Hill School field.

The Easter Bunny and helpers will be on hand. There also will be live animals at this year's hunt, as well as the other attractions.

Children will be divided into three separate chronological groups:



Group 1, Ages 3 and 4 (with parent); Group 2, Ages 5 to 7; and Group 3, Ages 8 to 11.

Please bring a small paper bag or container for your candy.

Individually wrapped chocolate eggs will be scattered about the designated areas. In each group some of the eggs will be wrapped with masking tape that will have a number on the tape. Should you find one of the numbered eggs, hold on to it as you will receive a prize from the Easter Bunny.

This year's program sponsors are Cohasset Rotary Club, Veterans of Foreign Wars — Post 9146, American Legion Post #118, the Cohasset Police Association and the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce.

Rain date will be on Saturday, March 29, at noon, Deer Hill School field.

Andrea Wade enjoys the view from her kitchen on Nichols Road — one stop on the tour.

Kitchen Tour Set

The South Shore Community Center is sponsoring a dream tour of some of the most unique kitchens in Cohasset Friday, March 7, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. The tour consists of four fantastic kitchens, and free samplings from some of the finest caterers on the South Shore at each home.

A free shuttle service will depart regularly from the lightkeeper's residence to the Flints' family kitchen where Donna Morgan and Arlene Ferreira of Country House Antiques and Interiors will display some of their wares and to the Kupsc home where Karen O'Brien of Bloomingdale's will be decorating. Shuttle buses will be available to take tour members to two kitchens on Nichols Rd.

Advanced tickets may be purchased at the center or by calling the center at (617) 383-0088. Tickets are $15 per person in advance, and $20 per person the day of the tour.

Babysitting will also be provided at the center's nursery school for $2 per child for up to two hours. Daycare reservations must be made in advance by calling the center.

Cruising Lecture to Benefit CHS ExCeL Program

Saturday, April 5, at 8 p.m. at St. Stephen's Church, Walton Hall, the Cohasset Yacht Club will present an illustrated slide and chart lecture by Bim Holt who cruised for four weeks on the Hudson River, Erie Canal, Lake Ontario, St. Lawrence Seaway, Richelieu River and Lake Champlain.

All proceeeds will benefit the ExCeL alternate school program at Cohasset High School. The ExCel (Experimental Center for Learning) program is an interdisciplinary accredited program for students in grades 10 to 12 offering unique marine experimental activities and traditional coursework in science, social studies and English. Students may enroll in the program for one, two or three years. Course work includes field studies and lab work in fundamental principles of oceanography, physical science, navigation, aquatic environmantal science and nautical science. Outdoor activities include learning to crew and care for a traditional pulling boat. Students also learn the fundamentals of boat building by working on current wooden boat projects.

This is the second year that the Cohasset Yacht Club has presented an illustrated slide cruising lecture open to the public to benefit the ExCeL program. Advance reservations may be made by telephone before April 1 by calling Meg Bertolami at 383-2968, $8 for adults and $4 for students under 18. Unreserved tickets at the door will cost $10 for adults and $5 for students under 18.

How to determine true value of a growth fund

Edited by Amy K. Barrett
WORTH MAGAZINE

Meet Cisco Systems, a manufacturer of computer-network equipment, and Pfizer, a drug company. The first ended 1996 with a price-to-earnings ratio of 47, the other with a p/e of 29. Which was the best buy?

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

Well, Cisco's higher p/e means investors were willing to pay more for Cisco's earnings ($47 for every $1 made in the last 12 months) than they were for Pfizer's ($29 for every $1). In fact, they paid some 60 percent more. Does that mean Pfizer was cheaper and hence the better buy — or, perhaps, that Cisco shares were too expensive?

Valuing growth stocks is not so formulaic. Investors rightly go to p/e's when they are trying to determine if a stock is a bargain. Some investors — especially beginners — make the mistake of viewing a stock's p/e as an independent statistic, a rating system in which high numbers are bad. But it takes a lot more consideration to evaluate growth stocks to see if they are fairly valued.

Many Wall Street analysts calculate how reasonably priced a growth stock is by looking at the p/e ratio: Is it less than the rate at which profits have increased? The conventional wisdom is that a stock whose p/e is much lower than the company's profit growth rate may be undervalued by the market — and, hence, will soon rise. And vice versa for a stock whose p/e far exceeds the rate of profit increase.

"The 'p/e to growth' is certainly a fine tool, because it gives you a way of trying to trade the company's valuation relative to the growth," says Claudia Mott, director of small-company research at Prudential Securities. For example, Cisco traded at a steep 47 times its earnings, but in fiscal year 1996, its profits increased 93 percent from fiscal 1995. Meanwhile, Pfizer's p/e was 29, while its earnings per share rose 20 percent from last year. So the simple conclusion seems to be: Buy Cisco, snub Pfizer.

But not so fast. "It's hard to get a simple answer when you're searching for the fair value of a growth stock," says Alfred Kugel, senior investment strategist at Stein Roe & Farnham in Chicago, which manages almost $7 billion in mutual funds. Here's the caveat: Stocks with high p/e's and robust earnings expansion often can't sustain their rocket-like performance. A company cannot maintain 80 percent profit growth forever. And when investors get even a hint that profit growth is decelerating — you should realize this is not the same as a decrease in profits — many sell the stock with a level of skepticism comparable to the level of enthusiasm they had when they bought it. Consequently, high-p/e stocks tend to be more volatile investments. "No one company can grow at 40 percent in perpetuum. I don't care what they sell; they can't maintain that forever," says Kugel. "The profit growth rate will probably be cut in half eventually."

Take the example of 3Com, one of Cisco's competitors. 3Com announced February 10 that sales of its network equipment were slowing. The price of 3Com shares dropped, and the stock's p/e went from 44 at year-end to 24 by February 19. Apparently, that sort of decrease is not unusual for high-p/e stocks. A 1978 study by William Beaver and Dale Morse in Financial Analysts Journal shows that the highest p/e's fall by more than a half over one year, and by roughly two-thirds over two years.

Because decelerating profits can drastically change stock prices, it's necessary to stay informed about a company and about analysts' expectations. Of course, an announcement like the one from 3Com about slowing sales may suddenly change the outlook. But it's always a good idea to keep abreast of analysts' expectations of future earnings — that is, whether a company's profit outlook is strong enough to maintain its price. I/B/E/S International and Zacks Investment Research are good resources.

According to the earnings estimates collected by Zacks, for example, Pfizer will increase earnings per share by about 17 percent this year, and as much again in1998. Pfizer investors are willing to pay for a p/e higher than the growth rate because they hope for steady and dependable growth. The opposite is true right now for Cisco; investors who are paying for a p/e that is lower than profit growth run the risk that the earnings rate will falter. "Big companies with a steady rate of growth are the most sought-after in the market right now," says Kugel.

While there is no simple equation to determine whether a growth stock is fairly valued, the same forces are working on all stocks in an industry. Thus, comparing a company's p/e to that of its peers is a good idea. If Pfizer's p/e was far above that of other drug companies, it might signal that something was out of whack.

"Looking at a p/e relative to an industry is a good type of bogey," says Mott. "Keep in mind, though, the company's expectations of growth in relation to that of other companies of their kind." The challenge, for investors and analysts alike, is getting a more complete picture of future earnings growth.

The real story behind stock split decisions

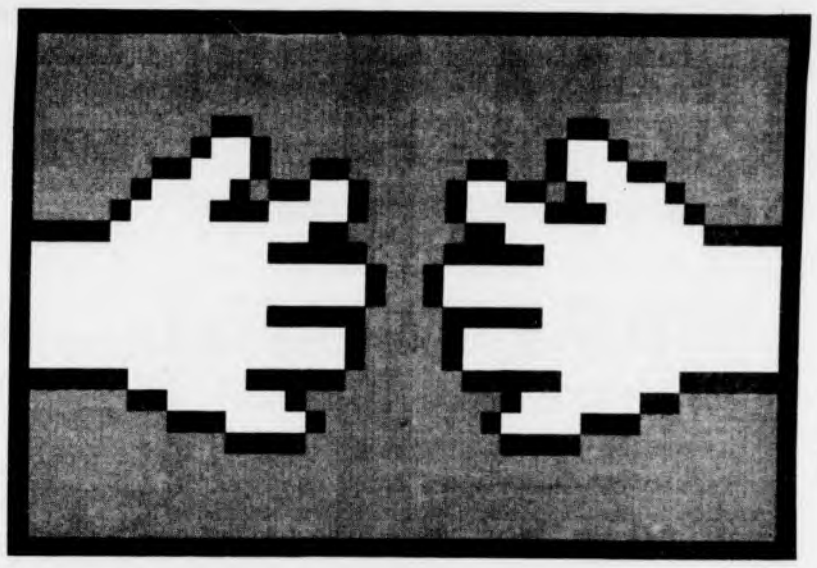
By Bradd L. Cuppels

Everyone would like something for nothing but, unfortunately, this seldom happens.

However, many investors are under the misconception that when a company splits its stock or announces a stock dividend, shareholders receive something for nothing. Another widely held notion is that a stock split signals an imminent and dramatic rise in the price of the stock. While it's conceivable that this might occur, more often than not, nothing of the sort takes place.

A stock split simply is the dividing of a company's outstanding common shares into a larger number of shares. So, for example, a company could issue you two, three, four, or more shares for every one you currently own. This sounds pretty lucrative until you learn, for example, that the $60 share you formerly owned has been replaced by two shares, each of which is worth $30.

There are several reasons why a company's board of directors may decide to split the firm's stocks. For example, this may happen if the price of a stock is so high that individual investors seem to have lost interest in it, and have stopped buying it. For some psychological reason, investors seem to prefer cheaper shares. Thus, a stock trading at $50 generally will attract far more investors than one selling for $100.



What about stock dividends? Again, these dividends don't represent a gift of something for nothing. They are dividends paid in common shares, rather than cash; also, they may be paid to shareholders in lieu of a regular cash dividend.

A company's board of directors may decide to declare a stock dividend when it wants to conserve cash, yet allow shareholders to benefit from the firm's higher earnings. If you own 100 shares of a company which declared a 10 percent stock dividend, you will receive a certificate for 110 shares. Following the dividend declaration, the market will adjust the trading price of the company shares accordingly.

Public Notices

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
THE TRIAL COURT
THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT DEPARTMENT
Norfolk Division

Docket No. 97E0012-PP1

To Robert Davenport and James Michael Davenport of Cohasset and the Town of Cohasset and to all other persons interested.

A petition has been presented to said Court by Vincent Sestito of Dorchester, Mass. in the County of Suffolk representing that he holds a part or share of certain land lying in Cohasset in said County of Norfolk and briefly described as follows: a certain lot of land being contiguous with land known and numbered as 135 Sohier Street, Cohasset, Norfolk County, Massachusetts, as further described on an unrecorded plan entitled "Plan of Land Sohier Street, Cohasset, Mass. June 12, 1996. Scale 1"=40'. Eng. Surveyor: Neil J. Murphy, Assoc. P.C. 231 C.J.C. Highway Cohasset, MA 02025. Owner: Estate of E.E. Sestito, P.O. Box 338, Cohasset, MA 02025", a true copy of which is annexed hereto, consisting according to said plan of 4.1 acres of land more or less, and bounded and described as follows:

SOUTHEASTERLY along Sohier Street, three hundred six and 00/100 (306.00) feet;

WESTERLY by land owned by Robert V. and Barbara T. Davenport, one hundred sixty-one and 00/100 (161.00) feet;

SOUTHWESTERLY along land owned by Robert V. and Barbara T. Davenport, one hundred twenty-five and 00/100 (125.00) feet;

NORTHWESTERLY by land of Philomena and Barbara A. Conte, two hundred ninety-five and 00/100 (295.00) feet;

NORTHEASTERLY by land of Town of Cohasset, one hundred ninety-two and 00/100 (192.00) feet;

SOUTHEASTERLY by land formerly a New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Right of Way, three hundred ninety-four and 00/100 (394.00) feet; and SOUTHEASTERLY by land now or formerly owned by John E. and Patricia A. Conway, two hundred ninety-six and 41/100 (296.41) feet.

Being a portion of the real estate property described in the deed from John M. Bready to Elena E. Sestito dated November 28, 1968, recorded with Norfolk Registry of Deeds in Book 4589, at Page 329; see also Estate of Elena S. Sestito, Norfolk Probate Court No. 93P0905-E1 setting forth that he desires that pursuant to the third clause of Elena E. Sestito's will, that he be granted so much vacant land on Sohier Street in Cohasset...as meets lot requirements for building a home. And praying that partition may be made of all the land aforesaid according to law, and to that end that a commissioner be appointed to make such partition of all, or any part of said land which the Court finds cannot be advantageously divided.

If you desire to object thereto, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham/649 High St. P.O. Box 269, Dedham, MA 02027-0269 before ten o'clock in the forenoon on the nineteenth day of March 1997, the return day of this citation.

Witness, David H. Kopelman, Esquire, First Justice of said Court, this seventh day of February 1997.

Thomas Patrick Hughes
Register.

DEPARTMENT OF ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION
WATERWAYS REGULATION PROGRAM
Notice of Request for Interim Approval pursuant to 310 CMR 9.10
Waterways Application Number W96-7324

Notification Date: February 5, 1997

Public notice is hereby given of the application by Francis D. Collins to maintain an existing pier, ramp and float at 404 South Main Street in the municipality of Cohasset in and over the waters of the Gulf River. The proposed use of the structures is noncommercial docking and boating access to navigable waters and is a water-dependent project.

The Department will consider all written comments submitted within 30 days subsequent to the "Notification Date" in order to decide whether to grant Interim Approval. A public hearing may be held upon request by the municipal official. Furthermore, a municipality, ten citizen group or any aggrieved person that has submitted written comments may also petition to intervene to become a party before the close of the comment period. Failure to submit such petition will result in the waiver of any right to an adjudicatory hearing. Further information regarding this application may be obtained by contacting the Division at (617) 932-7600. Plans and documents for this application are on file with the Department for public viewing at the address below. Written comments should be addressed to: J. Sprague, DEP/DWW, 10 Commerce Way, Woburn, MA 01801.

Studds Honored For Service to 10th District

Former Congressman may Teach, Write

By David Wolcott
COHASSET MARINER

After more than two decades of running through airports, Congressional hearings, countless chicken dinners, speaking engagements, and press conferences, former U.S. Congressman Gerry Studds said the time has come for him to take a breather.

Just don't dare call this respite a retirement.

"I am not retired," Studds stated emphatically while greeting well-wishers at a brunch held in his honor Sunday at the Pembroke Country Club. "I'm just stepping back, taking a little breather, enjoying life and getting ready to change gears."

The testimonial, sponsored by the Democratic CoOp-8 group, brought together supporters and some of Studds' former peers to honor the Cohasset native who did not seek reelection in November.

Studds is taking a break from the political game for the first time since he was initially elected to represent the 10th Massachusetts Congressional District in 1973.

Guests at the brunch included U.S. Senator John Kerry and the man who succeeded Studds, U.S. Congressman William Delahunt, D-Quincy. They were joined by representatives from the towns in the CoOp-8 organization — Duxbury, Weymouth, Cohasset, Hull, Hingham, Norwell, Scituate and Marshfield.

Other faces in the crowd included former 10th Congressional District candidates Ian Bowles and Philip Johnston.

During his time in office, Studds forged a reputation as a staunch defender of the environment and those who make their living from the sea.

He was praised his dedication to projects such as the cleanup of Boston Harbor and the redevelopment efforts at the Quincy Shipyard.

> 'Rather than any particular legislative accomplishments, I'd just like to be remembered as a person who worked hard for the 10th District.'
> — Gerry Studds.

"In our hearts, you and I will always think of Gerry Studds as our congressman," said Delahunt. "He earned the respect of everyone that he worked with during his time in office. In 24 years on the job he gave this district every ounce of strength that he could exact."

Sen. Kerry also spoke in glowing terms about Studds, saying "there are few voices in Congress as elegant and connected to the people of his district as was Gerry Studds."

Studds, who is gay, talked openly about his new life outside of the world of politics, which includes the homes he shares in Boston and Cape Cod with his partner in life, Dean, and the newest addition to their family, a six-month-old puppy named Bonnie.

He thanked those in attendance for their work during his 12 terms in office as well as for their support during both the good times and the bad.

"God knows we've faced challenges, both personal and professional," said Studds, noting that support for him in the district never wavered.

He singled out a Portuguese celebration parade in New Bedford during a time of "personal challenge" in 1983, as a particular sign of the support he has received. That year Studds was censured by the House for having had sex 10 years earlier with a 17-year-old male congressional page.

"We had no idea what to expect or what was going to happen, but we were prepared for the worst," said Studds. "All I was wondering was what to wear and would it go well with tomatoes."

His fears proved to be unfounded, Studds said he was warmly greeted by the thousands of people at the event, especially one elderly woman in particular who tried to beat a man with a sign he was holding that demeaned Studds.

Gerry Studds

His candidness and communication with his constituency is what Studds hopes to leave with people.

"Rather than any particular legislative accomplishments, I'd just like to be remembered as a person who worked hard for the 10th District," said Studds. "I have always enjoyed my relationship and candor with the people of this district and I hope that I was able to return their dedication.

"I think that we were are able to make a difference," Studds went on to say. "We were able to do things that some said were impossible.

"It really was one hell of a ride."

Studds said he hoped some of his future projects will include political consulting and writing, as well as some potential teaching opportunities.

'Let's Get Growing'

It's that time of year again to start thinking about spring planting, so "Let's Get Growing," The Norfolk County Conservation District, a non-profit volunteer organization serving 28 towns in Norfolk County, is sponsoring its annual shrub, tree and plant sale/fund-raiser. Funds from this event are recirculated back into the county through hazardous waste collection days, scholarships, camperships and environmental grants.

To receive this informative brochure and order form listing more than 40 spring plants, including a mail-back form to attend a workshop with horticulturist Mike Nelson as speaker covering plants sold in the brochure and other valuable topics pertaining to spring planting, send a 32 cents stamp with your name/address to the Norfolk County Conservation District, 400 Main St., Tree Sale, Walpole, 02081.

Deadline to attend workshop is Feb. 28.

Deadline to-order from brochure is March 21.

Door Not Shut on Village Station

540 Sign Petition for Independent Consultant

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

Proponents of the village train stop have an article on the town meeting warrant directing selectmen to put the question on the station location before town election voters but that may not be necessary.

Selectmen Chairman Merle Brown, who has been consistent in opposing the village station, said in a telephone interview Tuesday he would not object to putting a non-binding train station question on the ballot.

"I've not closed the door. If there are enough people who want it (ballot question)," he said.

Monday selectmen accepted a petition signed by 540 people asking them to hire an independent consultant to evaluate the pros and cons of both station locations but did not say they would act on the request.

Two Take Out Selectman Papers

Pratt Won't Seek Second Term

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

With only a few days left for candidates to file papers for seats in the May 3 town election, Peter J. Pratt, 41, has announced he will not seek a second term on the board of selectmen.

Pratt was running unopposed. But his decision to withdraw his candidacy has created some excitement. By the time the town clerk's office closed Wednesday, Wigmore Pierson, 123 Atlantic Ave., and Diane C. Sullivan, 708 Jerusalem Rd., had taken out papers for the open selectman's seat.

Pierson hosts a weekly talk show Pierson to Person and sits on the historical commission and town history committee. Sullivan, a former selectman, has led the charge against higher water rates and for taxpayer sewer subsidy for north Cohasset residents.

Costs of Septic Plan Unveiled

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

Members of the health board provided detailed cost analysis for a town-wide on-site waste water management program at the final septic workshop Tuesday evening.

The plan would establish a $13 million state- and town-funded loan program, as well as a $265,000 annual maintenance component. The money for the program would be borrowed through a Proposition 2-1/2 override and interest-free state loans.

If town meeting voters approved the plan, the money would be borrowed in increments over a 14-year period and take a total of 34 years to repay.

Cost projections provided by health board member Kevin Ulmer estimate that the average Cohasset tax payer would pay $104 a year in additional taxes — about $3,559, over the 34-year period to fund the program. Ulmer based his figures on a home with an average value of $308,000.

Participants in the program would pay an annual users

Cohasset's Week

POW Service is Planned

Selectmen approved a request his week from Raymond Buckley to allow the Dept. of Mass. American Ex-Prisoners of War to conduct a memorial service May 20 at Veterans Memorial Park in the harbor.

The service will be part of a three-day convention for the veterans group during which Buckley will be installed as commander.

Church Request on Hold

Selectmen are cool to a request from Cohasset Community Church to use the town hall auditorium to hold services on a six-month trial basis from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sundays starting March 30.

The church currently uses town hall from 7 to 8 p.m. on Friday evenings.

Selectmen will ask the church to seek alternative locations in town. They also look into the propriety of using a town building for church services.

Selectman Michael Sullivan also pointed out that to commit to that amount of time would preclude anyone else who comes along from using the town hall auditorium on Sundays.

Ambulance Billing Update

The town billed for 21 ambulance transports last month for a total commitment of $7,662.13.

So far this fiscal year, which ends June 30, the town has collected $79,249.78 and has commitments of $92,490.41. Payments that are collected for ambulance service are applied to invoices from all previous fiscal years as well as the current year. Commitments are for those transports occurring in FY'97.

State Recycling Grant

State Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, announced that the town of Cohasset received a grant from the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs to help increase the community's recycling rate. EOEA and the Department of Environmental Protection awarded Cohasset a Municipal Recycling Grant for a total of $4,726. Funding for the state grant comes from the Clean Environment Fund, the repository for unclaimed deposits on beverage containers.

"Recycling is a 'green' industry that is very serious in Massachusetts. Recycling supports over 10,000 jobs in the state and generates more than $600 million of economic activity each year. Everyone involved realizes how important it is that we do our very best to ensure a healthy future," Hedlund said.

Hedlund stated that Cohasset had received a grade of "A" on the 1997 Municipal Recycling Report Card for recycling 31 percent of its municipal solid waste. The town received an "excellent" for the amount of effort displayed in developing the recycling program.

"I would also like to extend congratulations, along with the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs, to Arthur L. Lehr, who was designated as the Outstanding Recycler for 1996 in Cohasset. His work and the efforts of the entire town of Cohasset are setting the example for the entire South Shore," said Hedlund.

'Pay-Per-Bag' Forum, March 13

The Recycling Committee will hold a second public informational meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, March 13, in the town hall auditorium, on the "pay-per-bag" program planned to be implemented in Cohasset later this year. The committee held its first informational meeting Feb. 20.

"We are holding this additional meeting to provide an additional opportunity to explain the 'pay-per-bag' program to interested residents, and to answer questions about the program," said Arthur Lehr, chairman of the recycling committee.

In the 'pay-per-bag' program, people pay for only the amount of refuse they actually dispose of, instead of the current flat fee, which would be eliminated, said Lehr. Since there is no charge to bring recyclables to the town Recycling Transfer Station (RTF), residents can save money for themselves and the town by separating their recyclables, he said.

Village Station Supported

Paul S. Barry III of Barry Waste Services and Recycling Co. wrote to selectmen to support the proposal of a village MBTA station.

"It will help spur economic growth in our downtown village area as well as limit vehicle traffic," Barry wrote. "If one of the main aims of reinstating the MBTA Greenbush line is to take people out of their cars, then the station should be in a centralized walkable location."

Barry Waste Services, 110 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., is at the former Winter Garden skating rink site which the MBTA plans to use for the Route 3A train station.

Pratt, 75 Ripley Rd., said he has accepted a job offer this week which will not afford him the time to devote to serving as a selectman.

"I feel badly about it, but I signed a new retention contract just yesterday afternoon," Pratt said Tuesday.

"This offer came through to me and is not something I can put aside."

He described the commute and new responsibilities of the position, which is with an international electronic publishing firm based in Burlington, as significant. Pratt said he was not at liberty to divulge the name of the firm.

Potential candidates have until 7 p.m. March 13 to take out nomination papers and until 5 p.m. Monday to return them with 50 signatures.

Pratt, who served on the board of water commissioners from 1983-86, said he hoped to stay involved in town government especially with the harbor dredging and James Brook flood control projects, which he spearheaded.

He also plans to lobby hard for a town manager form of government at town meeting. A citizens' petition article which will be before town meeting asks the town to move to a more managerial form of government. Pratt is the sixth member of his family to serve on the board of selectman in the 227 years of Cohasset. He is the son of the late Burtram J. Pratt, a former selectman.

Election Supper is March 20

The Beechwood Congregational Church is holding its Election Supper Thursday, March 20, at 6:30 p.m. This supper has been a church tradition for more than 75 years. Dinner, beverage and dessert will be served family style. All candidates and the public are welcome to attend. Reservations are necessary. Call 383-1298 for reservations and ticket information.

Village Station

train station should be located — either in the village or on the highway — started in the meeting and spilled out into the hallway continuing later in the town hall parking lot.

And pleas from Selectman Peter Pratt during the meeting that the town should focus the larger mitigation problems surrounding restoration of the train were not heeded.

Lincoln Bloomfield, 37 Beach St., led the charge by village station supporters.

"On behalf of 540 concerned citizens and virtually all the village merchants, we ask the board to review the question of the site of the train station.

"We're asking you to reopen the decision you thought you had made," he said.

Village train station backers charge selectmen, who voted for the Route 3A location last fall, did not make an informed decision based on fact but were swayed by a non-binding straw poll held in the lobby of October's special town meeting. The results of the poll were 3-1 in favor of the Route 3A site. They say a village station will help revitalize the downtown area.

The petition asks selectmen to keep their final judgement on a station location open until all relevant facts about traffic patterns, parking, aesthetics, impacts on adjacent property, and effects of local businesses and residents are analyzed.

Donald DeMichele, 264 Jerusalem Rd., an opponent of the village site, presented an analysis gleaned from the voter list of those who took part in the straw poll showing that those who back the Route 3A location come from all over town and were not just residents in the village area.

"This is one reason for not engaging a consultant," he said.

DeMichele also described potential parking and traffic problems if the station was in the village.

Lincoln said that was all the more reason to obtain an independent analysis.

"There are often two sets of facts on the same issue," he said.

Selectman Ronnie McMorris defended the board's decision-making process.

She said the final decision was not based solely on the straw poll but on many meetings with the town's citizen and staff mitigation committees, appointed to review issues surrounding restoration of the Greenbush train.

"In fairness to this board, we made an informed decision. We looked at the information," she said.

Resident Sue Cunningham who grew up in Manchester-by-the-Sea, displayed a map she drew of that town's village and said she had talked to shop owners and merchants there who said their village station does not help business.

Her remarks were in sharp contrast to a letter to Dean Rizzo, vice president of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, from Manchester-by-the-Sea's executive secretary stating the village station is viewed positively and brings people to the downtown business district. The letter was included with the petition and other letters praising downtown stations.

Lincoln said citizens must be confident that all the facts were reviewed regarding station sites or divisiveness over the issue would continue to fester.

"You need to lance this boil, boiling in town," he told selectmen.

The MBTA says it will plan only for a Route 3A station because selectmen opposed the village site.

Selectmen directed interim Town Administrator Ed McCann to refer the petition to the town clerk to ascertain how many of the signatures belonged to residents.

Brown explained that he wanted the signatures verified for comparison purposes because only registered voters could participate in the straw poll last fall . He said he objects to the town paying $10,000 to $20,000 for a study on the stations and thinks the MBTA should pay for it.

School Budget Increases by 5.6 Percent

By Kerry Herlihy
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The school committee made cuts in the proposed school budget last week to reach the advisory's 5.6 percent recommended increase bringing the total expenditure to $7,591,137.

School Committee chairman Ralph Kidder made clear to the public at the last meeting that despite the increase, Cohasset is still a bargain.

In order to reach the 5.6 percent increase from last year, $25,000 had to be cut from the previous plan to keep the town in a better free cash situation. The two areas from which the cuts were made are the school water budget and teachers' salaries. The water budget was reduced by $9,000. This was possible due to the town's decision to open a separate account to pay for the towns' water bills.

According to Town Accountant Michael Buckley, the water department is "paying" the town $15,000 for administrative services — money that will be used to pay next year's water bills.

The teachers' salary budget was brought down by $16,000. There will be no reductions in salaries but anticipated changes in staff. For example, when a teacher retires and is replaced by a new teacher, that teacher will make less money than the teacher who retired was making.

The schools do have the option to go back to the advisory committee during the school year to request money for this area if necessary.

The biggest decrease in the budget falls into the areas of equipment acquisition. The new technology plan has not yet been finalized and therefore factored into this area. The complete technology plan is set to be presented to the town during the next school year.

Supt. Stephen Hart and School Committee Chairman Ralph Kidder made a point to emphasize the cost of quality.

"We tend to get caught up in the money when we need to remember why we are here, we are investing in the future. There is a cost to achieved our goal and continue to be competitive," Hart said.

Ralph Kidder discussed the need to look at inputs and outputs.

"Cohasset's output is far above state standards making us one of the top school systems in the state. Cohasset's rank is high but our spending is relatively low," Kidder said.

Hart closed the meeting by thanking all of those who had invested their time and energy into the budget planning.

"It is a lot of hard work and requires many hours of deliberation. I thank everyone involved," Hart said.

Joe St. John: Cohasset's Own 'Patron Saint'

By Mary S. Earon
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

As St. Patrick's Day draws upon us and green seems to be everywhere, one can't help realizing that the enduring legends of the Irish are told all over the world. True stories, however, survive not in myths, but in work ethics and consciousness, qualities that aren't always commemorated.

While the work of Joe St. John in Cohasset in the late 1800s and turn of the century was fairly low key, it was his consciousness and sense of ethics that made him an extraordinary addition to this town. It just so happened that he was Irish.

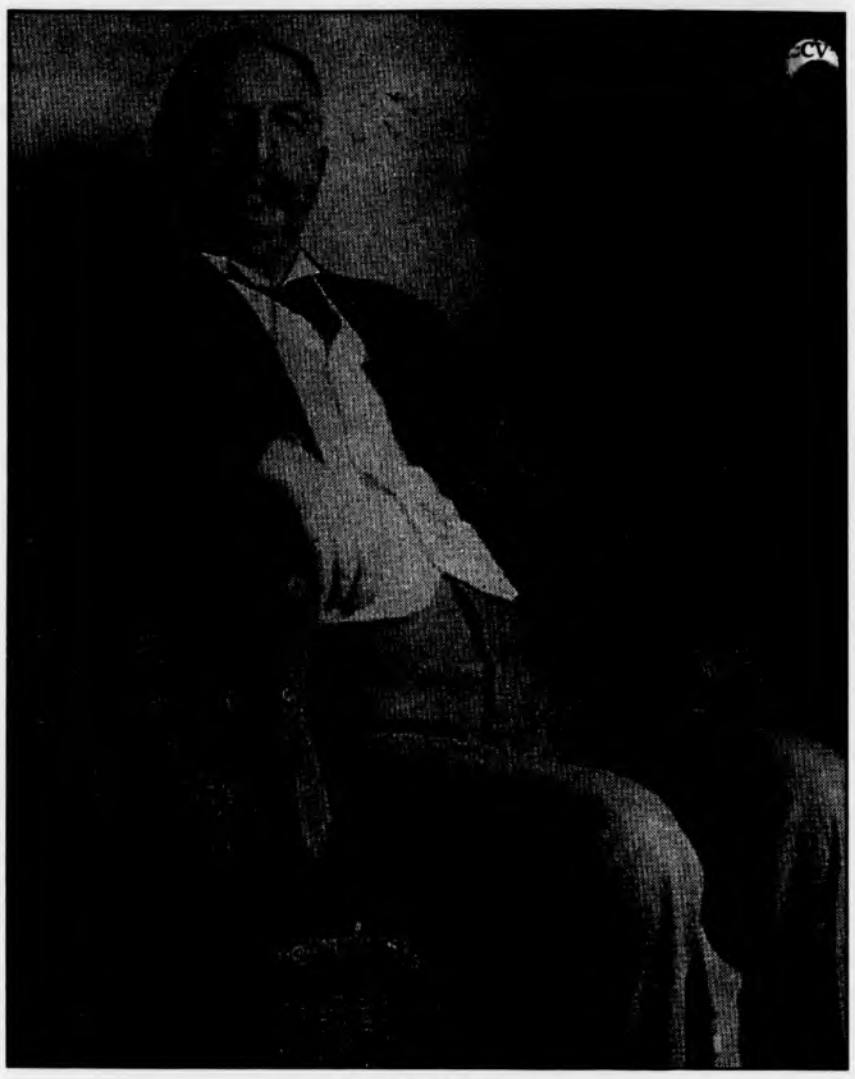
Joe St. John arrived in Cohasset with his father, James, and his four brothers and sisters before the beginning of the potato famine in 1845. The family originated in Dublin, but had sailed to Newfoundland before arriving on the Massachusetts shore. There, they met the Brennock family, the other oldest living family in Cohasset, and decided to follow the Brennocks to Cohasset. Before they set sail, James' wife died of illness, and the family buried her in Newfoundland. Grief stricken, but determined to make a new life where there was opportunity for him and his children, James St. John sailed for Cohasset. Once here, James opened a tailor shop on Parker Avenue and the family settled into their new life.

In October, 1849, the Brig St. John, a famine ship from Galway, Ireland, coincidentally carrying the same name as Cohasset's St. John family, crashed approximately two miles off the coast of Cohasset, killing all but about 20 men, women, and children aboard. One survivor, a single woman in her 30s named Mary Kane Cole, had come across the ocean to start a new life. Mary, upon surviving the wreck, married James St. John, who was now in his sixties, and became stepmother to Joe and his siblings. (Sixty-five years later, in 1914, Joe would officiate at the unveiling of the Celtic Cross, a monument purchased by the Ancient Order of Hibernians and placed in the Central Cemetery at the gravesite of those killed in the wreck of the Brig St. John.)

Joe grew into a young man who tried his hand with many things at first, including captaining a ship. He was well-liked and respected in Cohasset, and was known to say that he loved this town and would do anything for it.

Joe met and married Catherine Roche, a Cohasset girl whose family lived at the juncture of Atlantic Avenue and Jerusalem Road. The house was a small cottage, situated in the Little Harbor marsh. During the Portland Gale of 1898 many years later, the house was picked up by wind and water and carried across the road, onto Pleasant Beach, then into the sea.

Joe called Catherine his "Irish Rose." Together, they had six children, two boys, Jim and Charley, and four girls. One daughter, at 16, chose to swim in the ocean in March. She developed complications and died. Ironically, it was Pleasant Beach that she swam off, the same beach which her grandmother's house had been swept onto.



Despite the setback of his daughter's death, Joe St. John remained a caring and productive citizen of Cohasset. He opened St. John's General Store on the land that is now the bus (box) stop. His building ran along side of the Common up to St. Stephen's Church.

St. John's General Store sold hay, grain, flour, groceries and fancy goods. Those customers who couldn't pay for their goods in cash bartered with Joe. He and his son, Jim, made deliveries with their horse and wagon.

Joe St. John brought the first telephone to Cohasset. It was installed on the second floor of his building above the general store. Joe requested that his telephone number be 15, to coincide with his home and store address of 15 South Main St.

Clarence Barron made frequent visits to the St. John General Store. He would pull up a barrel, and sit for long respites, discussing stock investments with Joe and cutting long slices of cheese off the round with the knife he always carried. Although he would encourage Joe to invest in stocks, Joe felt the only investments worth making were in land.

The Town Fathers came to the store one day and asked Joe if he would consider selling the land that his building was on. They were interested in taking down the buildings on the Common. True to his statement that he would do anything for Cohasset, Joe sold the land to the town for $1, and moved his store and family across the street. The building he moved into was built by Luther Stevenson, purchased by the Tilden family, then sold to Joe. The front faced South Main and the back faced Parkingway and the railroad tracks. The sideyard was Stagecoach Way. It was a very large house, with a fireplace in almost every room. Joe fixed the general store up in the back of the building, and lived with his family in the front.

The first Catholic Mass in Cohasset was held in the Brennock's house, one that stands today on a hill across from The Chart House Restaurant on Border Street. When the need and desire for an established Catholic church was voiced, Joe St. John gave church officials the land for the first St. Anthony's Church and its rectory to be raised on. The name became St. Anthony's and not St. Patrick's as a result of a coin toss — heads, the Portuguese choice of St. Anthony's; tails, St. Patrick's for the Irish. The Portuguese won.

It is interesting that a man who only believed in land investment never made much of a profit at it.

In an eventual barter exchange with a town resident who was a customer at the general store, payment to Joe for a large and long standing bill was 93 house plots in Edgartown. Upon Joe's death, the plots were bequeathed to various relatives, including his daughters in Cohasset, who never married. Over several years, the amount of unpaid taxes on the land grew insurmountably, and the daughters let the land in Edgartown go. The St. John descendants were never to see it.

Turn of the century Cohasset was like paradise, according to the late Tess St. John, Joe's youngest daughter. She told of sitting on the rocks with her friends on Atlantic Avenue, watching the beautiful carriages arriving from Boston for the summer. The occupants in the carriages spent the summer months in the many large homes along the shore. Most of those homes are now gone.

The wealthy mixed with the fishermen. The Irish were welcomed, which was not the case in other towns and cities then. There were not a lot of people living in Cohasset then, but everyone got along.

Through hard work, the St. John family became comfortable. Jim St. John helped his father in the general store and Charley, the family "dandy" rode around the Common in his high-wheeled buggy.

Anastacia (Stacey), another daughter, graduated from Cohasset High School in 1887. It was a graduating class of six. Stacey became Cohasset's Postmistress and an active member of the Women's Sufferage Movement, marching for the first vote for women .

Joe St. John, patriarch, lived until he was 93. In his later years, he would sit by the window in his general store, watching the trains come and go, the people getting off and on. Joe knew everyone, and everyone knew and loved him. He was buried in St. Paul's Cemetery in Hingham because there wasn't a Catholic cemetery in Cohasset even then.

Joe St. John lived a commemorative life. From Ireland to the shores of Massachusetts and the town of Cohasset, Joe brought a wonderful gift, the willingness to give generously of himself to what he believed in: And, he believed in Cohasset. He insisted on giving back to the town all that living here afforded him. It appears that Joe could have accumulated great wealth for himself and his family. He chose instead to help establish the look and feel of a town that its people could be proud of and comfortable in. It was the luck of Cohasset that he was ours.

Cohasset's Top Gun Lacrosse Players are Lacks and Kahn

Here is some great news about two super CHS athletes! They made the Fleet Center this winter. Saturday, March 1, lacrosse co-captains Jim Lacks and Ely Kahn, led a South high school all-star team against the North in the annual high school indoor lacrosse game sponsored by Top Gun Lacrosse.

Lacks took the opening face-off for the South stars, who played before a crowd of 8,000 which also saw the Major Indoor Lacrosse League Boston Blazers take on Rochester.

Goalie Kahn brought the crowd to its feet when he went end-to-end, and scored on the North goalkeeper midway through the contest. There was a Cohasset angle to the pro game as well: former Cohasset High junior varsity lacrosse coach Tom Carmean scored the winning goal for the Blazers in overtime, and was named the game's MVP. How about that!

Lacrosse season starts next week, we have just given you good reason to attend as many as you are able to — you'll be in for an exciting time indeed!

I received the nicest note from Sherry Pratt-Craig, Glenn Pratt's sister who lives in Maryland. Dec. 29, the Pratt family got together, not only to celebrate the Christmas season, but to celebrate their parents' 50th wedding anniversary. Eddie and Eileen Pratt traveled up to Cohasset from Florida where they are now living (and enjoying it very much). The celebration was held in Bancroft Hall, at the Lightkeepers House. Glenn Pratt was there with his children, his brother Vaughan traveled over from the Philippines with his wife Dolly and their three sons, Dustin, Jay and Adrian. Sherry and her husband Jim and daughter Karen came from Maryland. They also had friends from Vermont, N.H., and Washington, D.C., attend the celebration, and all agreed that the party was just grand! They all want to thank the friends and relatives from Cohasset that helped them party! They all had a great celebration, and want to wish their parents a wonderful 50th anniversary one more time! We all extend our best wishes to of course! We're also glad that you shared this banner occasion with us!

Wake Forest University has announced its dean's list for the fall semester, and two Cohasset students achieved the required 3.0 grade point average. They are Tafana

Alma Fiore of 3 Ripley Rd., a member of the freshman class, and Kristin Jeanne Grassey, 20 Ledge Way, a senior. We take our hats off to both of you studious young ladies and want you to know that we are proud of you!

We also heard news from the UMass/Dartmouth — Michael A. Figueiredo, a Biology/Marine Biology major, and Jessica L. Snow, an accounting major, made the dean's list for the fall '96 semester! Congrats to both of you!

UMass/Amherst also announced the names of students who qualified for the Dean's List for the fall semester. They are John W. Kinchla of 12 Hillside Dr. and Adam M. McNamara of 470 King St. Good work, gentlemen!

Everybody loves a good love story, right? Well, we have one for you right now! Lots of folks will remember Jamie Hoffman, the son of Joe and Joyce Hoffman. Well, he lives on the Cape and he and his fiance made the newspaper down there with their love story/engagement for Valentine's Day.

It seems that Jamie and Kristen Seay went to Paris as a part of Kristin's college course that involved spending two weeks in France — on their first night in Paris they were strolling along chatting about how the title character in the movie "Sabrina" advises people to find a bridge to call their own. On Le Pont de Notre Dame, the couple stopped in an alcove jutting out over the Seine River. As they watched twilight gather over the city of love, Jamie asked Kristen, "How about this bridge?" When she asked why she should remember that particular one, he reached in his pocket and pulled out his grandmother's engagement ring and proposed! Jamie and Kristin will be married on May 16, 1998 — won't they have a nice story to tell their children and grandchildren!

Come to the Cabaret

Members of the First Parish Church in Cohasset are putting the finishing touches on this weekend's gala performances of Cabaret '97. The Friday night performance is sold out, but tickets are still available for Sunday, March 16 at 4 p.m. This is a wonderful opportunity to introduce children to the music of 'those fabulous fifties' and reminisce about the time when crew cuts and crinolines were the norm. Child care will be available during the performance, reservations required. Light refreshments will be served. Call the church office at 383-1100 for further information.

Palm Sunday Organ Recital

As part of its Music at St. Stephen's Recital Series, Max Miller, chairman of the organ department at Boston University, will present an organ recital Sunday, March 23, at 3 p.m. Featured composers will include Bach, Widor, Mendelssohn and Samuel Barber.

Dr. Miller is past dean of the Boston Chapter of the American Guild of Organists and has recorded for both Boston Records and the Musical Heritage Society. Currently he is organist at St. John's United Methodist Church in Watertown.

The church, located at 16 Highland Ave. in Cohasset, has handicap access and plenty of parking in the village lot. For information call (617) 383-1083.

WALKers Join the Fight Against MS

The National Multiple Sclerosis Society will kick off its biggest fund-raising event of the year — the MS WALKS — April 12 and 13, with people from all parts of the state joining in the fight against multiple sclerosis. Channel 5 meteorologist Dick Albert, the 1997 WALK Chair in the Commonwealth, expressed his appreciation to the people of Massachusetts walking to help those with MS.

MS, a chronic disease of the nervous system, wears away the control you have over your body. Symptoms may range from numbness to paralysis and blindness. MS is most common in young adults, usually diagnosed between the ages of 20-40. More than a third of a million Americans are affected by this disease.

The 1997 WALKS, sponsored by WCVB Channel 5, the Tab Newspapers, Mix 98.5 radio, Couples and Sunburst Holidays, will take place in 15 communities throughout the state April 12 and 13, including Cohasset.

This year, more than 6,000 individuals and 450 teams are expected to join the WALKS, helping to raise more than $600,000 to support the mission of the society: ending the devastating effects of multiple sclerosis. Teams come from corporations, small businesses, churches and civic groups, giving co-workers and friends a chance to have fun while helping those affected by multiple sclerosis.

For information on joining the fight against multiple sclerosis by walking, forming a team or volunteering at a WALK site, call the Massachusetts Chapter at (800) 493-WALK.

Train Mitigation

The emotional issue about whether or not the Greenbush train should be restored has been supplanted by an equally emotional one on where the station should be located.

Those on both sides of the station location have legitimate concerns that deserve a fair hearing.

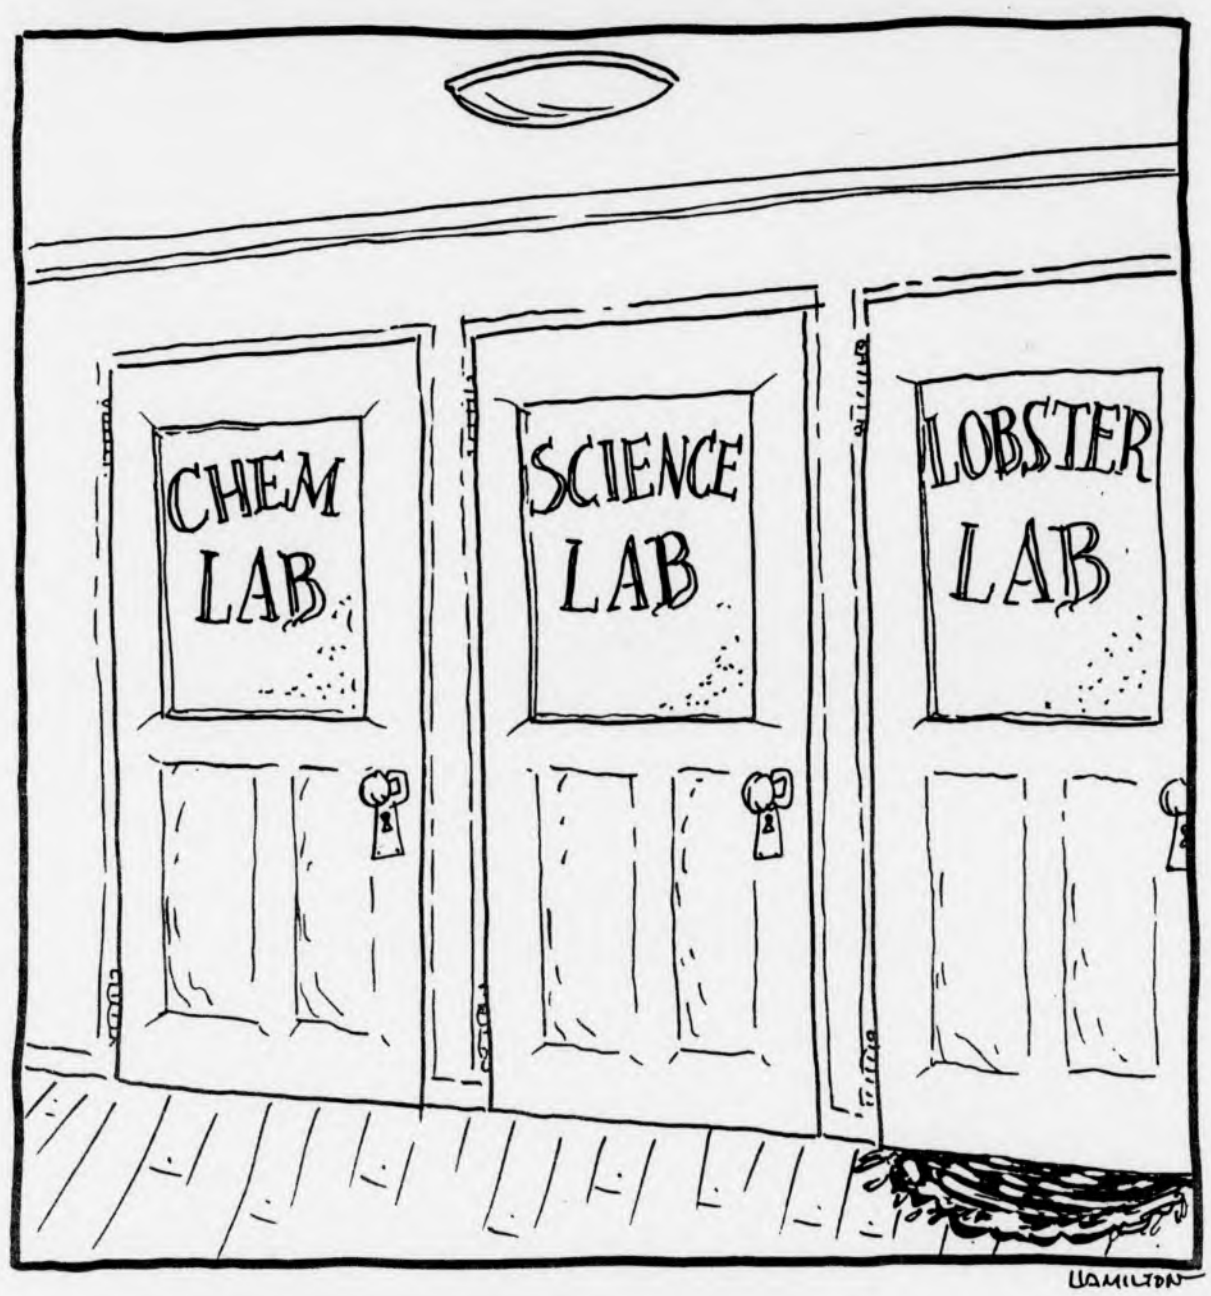
But in the debate over placement of the station, the larger issue of train mitigation has been drowned out.

Selectman Peter Pratt tried to raise that point this week but his pleas went unheeded in a meeting that almost became derailed when representatives from both sides of the station issue tried to press their points.

Several weeks back selectmen talked about hiring a regional consultant to deal with the MBTA on mitigation matters that affect Cohasset, such as noise and safety. They planned to talk with other towns about joining in.

But Scituate and Hingham are way ahead of Cohasset. Hingham's mitigation man is Alexander Macmillan, the former Historical Commission chairman; and in Scituate, James Hunt, a member of the planning board, is that town's point man. Both these men are regulars at selectmen's meetings where they update their boards on what steps the MBTA is or is not taking.

It's also important to remember that while Greenbush towns have a lot in common — the train affects them all differently. Hingham's Lincoln National Register Historic District and town Square are bisected by the tracks and Scituate has the problems surrounding the lay-over station.



While Cohasset's mitigation committee is working hard reviewing the MBTA's plans and holding public meetings on the project — selectmen should move quickly to designate someone to be the town's direct link to the T.

Macmillan is paid for his services in Hingham; but Hunt is not in Scituate. Both men aren't afraid to take a hard line and are effective negotiators.

Perhaps Cohasset could solicit the help of one of its planning board members in this task. It's important that this matter be resolved quickly so the town is in the best bargaining position with the T.

And for the station location? Selectmen need to provide leadership on this issue. They should carefully consider all arguments and make a decision on what's right for the town. It's a tough call. Let's hope they are up to the challenge.

Station Consultant Should be Hired

To the Editor:

I was in attendance at Monday's Board of Selectmen meeting to give support to those who were presenting 549 signatures petitioning for an independent consultant to be hired to evaluate which station location would best serve our community, 3A or Village.

Although the selectmen have already voted their sentiment on this issue, and admittedly it was a long shot to convince them to reconsider a Village Commuter Rail station, their treatment of those appearing before them was less than respectful.

Less than respectful treatment toward respectable elders and others in this community, who took the time to prepare a presentation for the board, is both a dreaded example of incivility and a resounding discouragement to all those who strive to contribute work and solutions for our town.

If the selectmen intended only to collect the petitions and not allow the group to have the customary 15 minutes of time when granted space on the official agenda, a phone call to inform the presenter would have been courteous. Instead this group, which had already agreed to a change of date at the selectmen's request, waited a long night in a hot, cramped hallway, only to be silenced and dismissed. However, the opponents to a hired evaluator and a Village stop were heard, once again, as if they were the ones who had respectfully requested time on the selectmen's meeting agenda.

We have a long road ahead to determine both questions and answers for our town relative to the commuter rail. No doubt there will be many differences of opinion along the way. The selectmen must set the tone and tenor of how people in this community can work through their differing opinions and ensure that one group does not usurp the time of another wishing to be heard by the Board of Selectmen.

I urge other residents to encourage the selectmen to set aside their personal views and private fears associated with the train and its Cohasset station and to please hire an independent evaluator to be part of the budget over the next three years. This consultant should address not only the question of where to locate the station, but to manage the other powerful issues that are inherent in the return of rail service to Cohasset.

Title V Keeps Septic Inspectors and Service Companies Busy

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

Most home sellers with septic systems fear that Title V regulations will force them to replace their septic systems for thousands of dollars at the point of sale. The state regulation forces home owners to perform a thorough septic inspection before selling their homes. If the system fails inspection, it must be replaced or repaired before the sale can be completed.

When home sellers need a Title V inspection, repair or replacement they turn to their local septic service company.

Several companies on the South Shore offer septic inspections, pumping, repair and replacement service. Many of these companies agree that Title V has generated a lot of additional business. Several companies also stated that the regulation's standards have also driven up inspection, repair and replacement costs.

Hingham's Executive Health Officer Bruce Capman said Title V has tripled the number of systems that are replaced annually in his town. Capman said 83 percent of the homes in Hingham have septic systems.

In Cohasset, Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik is working closely with the health board to develop a town-wide waste water management plan to comply with a state mandate to address more than 1,500 aging septic systems in the town. More than 90 percent of Cohasset's homes have septic systems.

Both men work closely with local septic service companies to ensure that the public health and safety is preserved. In both Cohasset and Hingham, all septic inspection companies must be licensed by the state and the local health board.

Janice Mahoney runs C. Spirito Inc., in Hingham, a septic inspection and service company, with her husband Michael Spirito. Mahoney said Title V has increased her company's business, while local regulations have driven up the average inspection cost.

"Title V is a state regulation, but local communities can implement even stricter guidelines," Mahoney said. "Cohasset and Hingham are more strict than the state. They require us to dig a hole the size of a large desk at each site to test the soil on-site. That adds $400-$500 to the cost of an inspection."

Mahoney contracts out some inspection services because of increased liability caused by Title V. Mahoney said her company has been involved in settlement claims because systems they inspected failed two years after the new owner purchased the property.

"We expect the liability to get worse with Title V so we use independent inspectors," Mahoney said.

Godzik said an inspection with a soil test can cost more than $1,000.

Mahoney said there are three main components to a Title V inspection. Inspectors test the solids box which traps solid waste, the distribution box which delivers filtered liquid to the leeching field, and the leeching field itself.

Capman said many systems do not pass inspection because the leaching field becomes clogged or backed up and will not contain or accept the liquid.

Mahoney said leeching field replacement is the most expensive portion of a failed system.

"All the cost of your system is in your leaching field," Mahoney said. "That's what you're trying to protect."

David Margett of E L Margett and Sons Inc., in Hingham said test holes are expensive because a backhoe is needed to excavate the soil.

"Soil evaluation is a deep observation hole excavated below the bottom of a system," Margett said. "Leeching fields can be six-feet deep and some cesspools are as deep as ten feet. We have to dig all the way to the bottom."

Sue Henrichsen is the office manager for Rosano Davis Sanitary Pumping in Norwell. She agreed that replacing leeching fields accounts for much of the high costs of septic system repair and replacement.

"If you need to contain a whole leaching field you're talking about building a new foundation," Henrichsen said. "There are so many variables per property that it's hard to generalize. You could hit ledge, which raises the price."

All three companies estimated their average replacement cost to be somewhere between $12,000 and $15,000. Most companies have a one to two week waiting list for inspections.

Capman confirmed that while he knows of systems that have cost in excess of $50,000, the average cost is closer to $12,000. He added that the most expensive replacement in Hingham cost $35,000, while he knows of one extraordinary case in Cohasset that cost $100,000.

Margett said that many of the more expensive repairs and replacements are shared systems that service apartment buildings and condominium developments.

If a septic system fails inspection, the home owner hires an engineer to design a new system which must then be approved by the local health agent.

"When it comes to septic system designs, the health agent is God," Mahoney said.

Once the design is approved, the home owner accepts bids from several companies to obtain the best possible price.

"The bidding process ensures that homeowners are getting a fair price," Mahoney said. "A lot of jobs are also repair jobs, which are less expensive than replacements."

Title V has also had an indirect impact on real estate sales according to Gail Bell, president of the Plymouth County Board of Directors.

"Title V has changed everything," Bell said. "So many people are unwilling or unable to sell because of the high costs associated with Title V that they are renting or building additions that don't trigger septic inspections. In some cases people rent their homes and buy another home somewhere else."

Bell said the regulations have forced Realtors to work closely with engineers, inspectors, and repair and replacement companies.

Henrichsen added that as long as Title V is around there will be more work for septic companies.

"We have expanded and allowed for several new employees to meet the increased demand," Henrichsen said.

Costs of Septic Plan Unveiled

fee of $177 for inspections, pumping and a manager.

Home owners would be responsible for all repairs.

At the center of the plan is a proposal for the town to fund 50 percent of the cost of septic system replacements, while also providing low-interest loans so residents with failed systems could borrow the remaining money from the town.

The town would establish a cost and maintenance program that would require all homes with septic systems to have a Title V inspection every seven years. Current Title V regulations require a thorough septic system inspection only when a house is being sold or expanded.

Homes would be ranked into four priority areas according to their proximity to water sources.

Homes in the program would also be subject to an annual function inspection to make sure the system is in good working order.

The management program would provide inspections and pumping for all 1,562 septic systems identified for inclusion in the program.

Ulmer provided a comparison of the amount a homeowner would save on a $16,000 replacement using the town's plan versus a bank loan. Ulmer chose the $16,000 figure because it is the same as the average hook-up fee in the sewer commission's $18.5 million management plan. He added that town records indicate that the average construction cost for a septic replacement is closer to $20,000. Under the plan, the town would loan half the cost of a repair to a maximum of $20,000 on a $40,000 upgrade or replacement.

If a homeowner borrowed $16,000 from a bank at five percent interest, the amount repaid with interest would be $24,400.

With the town's plan, the homeowner would pay half the replacement cost, $8,000, while borrowing the other $8,000 from the town at five percent interest.

The home owner would repay the town $12,200 with interest over 20 years, plus the $3,559 in additional taxes for a total of $15,759. Home owners in the management program would also pay the $177 a year user fee for 20 years, which adds an additional $3,540 for a grand total of $19,299 versus $24,400 for a bank loan.

However, homeowners would continue to pay the average $177 user fee after the 20 year loan period expired.

"There's no such thing as a free flush," Ulmer said.

Ulmer stressed that the $177 users fee is much lower than the sewer department's average $400 user fee. In addition, the health board's proposal addresses more homes than the sewer commission's plan.

Mel Waldfogel is a trustee at the Cedar Ledge Village condominiums. He wanted to know how the plan would affect condominiums with one shared system.

"We currently pay about $1,500 a year to maintain our system," Waldfogel said. "Would each unit owner have to pay $177?"

Health board Chairman Tom Cook said the rate structure had not yet been determined, but would probably be based on actual water usage.

Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik said several cost factors are not yet finalized. Godzik said it is unclear whether the town-wide plan would offer funding for engineering costs, which can cost several thousand dollars. He added that there are other costs associated with septic replacement such as landscaping which may not be covered by the plan.

Godzik said the one thing the plan does achieve is lower costs for the construction of a new system.

Waldfogel told the health board to keep in mind that many home owners would compare the plan to what they were currently paying before voting on it at town meeting.

At previous workshops some residents have criticized the proposed user fee as being two to three times higher than what they were currently paying for pumping.

Cook said the intent of the plan was to help ease the burden of Title V regulation on home owners through town-wide parity.

He added that the plan would also protect the town's water supply by replacing systems as they failed, rather than at the point of sale. The plan would also comply with the state mandate to address septic problems in town.

"If you are an on-site owner and think the town should be concerned with your waste water problems and you are interested in the tax base paying 50 percent of repair and replacement costs, you should be interested in this plan," Cook said.

Diane Sullivan praised the board for carrying out its town meeting request to formulate a plan for parity for home owners with septic systems.

Cook Critical of Lack of Communication

Health Board Chairman Tom Cook chastised selectmen Monday for not communicating with the board of health on the septic management plan.

"We've been proceeding with development of a plan, trying to solicit participation from the town and public.

"And there's been zero from this board until a month ago," he said.

The health board wants to incorporate all on-site septic systems in town into an on-going maintenance and inspection plan. Homeowners and businesses with septic systems would pay operation and maintenance fees, similar to sewer users, and be able to borrow money at low interest rates from the town to upgrade their systems.

Selectman Michael Sullivan defended his board saying it had concerns about the concept. He questioned why the plan went beyond what Title V, requires. Title V is a state law that governs septic systems requiring inspection and possibly upgrades when the property is sold or transferred.

The health board's $13 million, 14-year plan requires annual inspections and would put all septic systems on a pumping schedule. During the time span of the plan, all failing systems in town would be repaired or replaced.

Cook reminded selectmen that the health board was directed at town meeting to come up with a plan that provides parity for those with on-site systems. Sewer users will ask the town to pick up 50% of the cost of installing systems slated in north and central Cohasset through a Prop. 2-1/2 override this spring. Officials worry that the owners of 1,500 homes not on the sewers will not support taxpayer subsidy for sewers if there is no direct benefit to them.

Duffy Makes Wrestling History

Competitive Senior Wins First All-State Title

By Joe Reardon
COHASSET MARINER

Cohasset wrestling coach Torin Sweeney is looking at his elite grappler Kevin Duffy in a completely different light after the 135-pound senior put together the two best weeks in Skipper wrestling history.

Duffy has a will of steel and has the athletic ability and endurance to wrestler his opponent into complete exhaustion. And more than anything, Duffy hates to lose.

"What the last two weeks have shown me is that no matter who Kevin wrestles, he is going to be in for a tough match because no one can keep him down and he can score points from the bottom," Sweeney said.

Duffy used his fearlessness on the mats to capture Cohasset's first All-State individual title ever. Wrestling at Wayland High School in the finals, Duffy was pitted against the No. 1 seed, Division 2 champion Rich Gammons.

Duffy didn't panic when he fell behind 2-0 in the early minutes. An escape cut the lead to 1 and a second-period reversal gave him a 3-2 lead. Duffy then put the squeeze on Gammons, riding him hard for a solid two minutes, making it impossible for him to score and earning the distinction of being the best 135-pound wrestler in Massachusetts.

Duffy advanced to the finals by overcoming a 4-2 deficit to the Division 1 champion in the semifinals. He pinned Agawam's Jason Gean by using a roll move that is rarely seen in local competition. Duffy easily defeated North Attleboro's Rich Connoley in the quarterfinals, 5-0.

"One mistake against him and he's going to take advantage of it," Sweeney said.

The All-State championship was a mild surprise to Sweeney, but he was just as impressed with Duffy's second-place finish at the New England championships in Connecticut.

Duffy defeated a New Hampshire wrestler in overtime in the preliminary round, but found himself in a war with Tewksbury's Peter Allen in the quarterfinals.

Duffy held a comfortable lead, but it was Allen who came back to go up 7-6 in the final period. Allen, though, was taken by surprise when Duffy whipped him on his back with his leg roll and wound up with a pin victory.

Little did the crowd know that the match of the day was coming up in the semifinals. Duffy was to face Connecticut State champion Brendan Harrison, probably the most recognizable wrestler in the state. A tough competitor, Harrison boasted a 44-0 record and had plenty of experience having qualified for the New England finals twice before.

The locals weren't given Duffy much of a chance for victory. They figured he had a good run and his season would be over in six minutes at the most.

The locals were wrong.

Harrison ran out to a seemingly insurmountable 5-0 lead over Duffy, but like the wrestlers before him, had no defense against the Skipper grappler's devastating leg roll.

Duffy slammed Harrison to his back, forcing a 5-5 tie. He then went on to completely dominate Harrison in the third period. An escape followed by a takedown that put Harrison on his back was good for six points and a stunning 11-5 victory.

Six matches were taking place during the Duffy-Harrison tussle, but the crowd focused its attention on the two wrestlers. What was thought to be an easy victory for Harrison turned out to be the biggest upset of the afternoon — at least among the Connecticut wrestling fans.

"We were in Connecticut so everybody knew who Harrison was," Sweeney said. "It was the best match of the day."

Duffy had already garnered himself a second-place finish at worst. However, his competitiveness hadn't been met and he was raring to go at Connecticut's Tony Amadio in the finals.

Cohasset High wrestler followed up his All-State title with a tremendous second-place showing last weekend in the New England championships in Connecticut.

Amadio was the aggressor from the start and took the lead, which opened up to 8-3 in the final period. Duffy closed the gap to 8-7 with 30 seconds left and he was forced to take a gamble with time running out.

Duffy had to go for the takedown to pass Amadio, but he was unable to get him in the right position. Amadio was awarded three more points and the match ended 10-7. It was the first match Duffy came up on the short end all day.

Sweeney had no problem with the chance Duffy took in trying to pull out the victory. He said that at such a high level of high school wrestling, points don't always come easy and gambles have to be taken when trailing in the closing seconds.

"He fell behind so he had to take some chances," Sweeney said. "Kevin almost had him at one point."

Despite the runner-up placing, Duffy was disappointed with his meet. Sweeney hoped he would look back on the meet the following day and realize just what he had accomplished during the season.

"Kevin was disappointed that he lost, being the competitor Kevin is," said Sweeney. "He's a competitor and he's just not happy when he loses."

Justin Buckley also competed at the All-State meet, but a sore muscle in his back hindered his performance greatly. "He really was in a lot of pain and discomfort," Sweeney said.

Another honor was presented to an individual associated with Cohasset wrestling. Rick

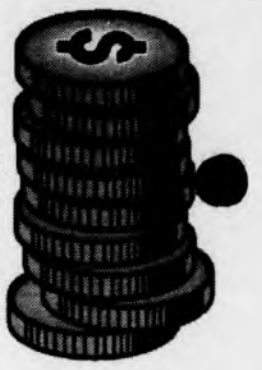
Fab Four Led Hoopsters Into Tourney

By Jim O'Sullivan
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER



Led by a talented nucleus of six seniors and complemented by seven hard-working juniors, and two sophomore phenoms, the Cohasset High basketball team put on a show this year. Whether they were bombing three-pointers from 20 feet or scoring at will from the low post, this year's edition wowed the fans and overwhelmed several opponents. Cohasset regained the South Shore League title this year after losing it to Scituate last season. The Skippers, the No. 8 seed in the Division 3 South Sectional tournament, advanced two-rounds deep, losing to top-ranked Bishop Feehan by a mere six points. Feehan would go on to beat Rockland in overtime, but lose to Bishop Stang in their next game, falling one game short of the EMass finals.

One of the reasons the Skippers were seeded lower than they had been in past years was the strength of their schedule. Four of their eight losses were to teams in a higher division, either Division 1 or 2. Unlike the NCAA Tournament, the seeding committee for the high school tournament does not place a great emphasis on strength of schedule, so Cohasset was robbed of a higher seed an, in effect, a home-court advantage in their first game. However, the Skippers showed no ill effects of this slight as they

Credit-card issuers who will go to bat for you

By Amy K. Barrett
WORTH MAGAZINE

Many consumers consider their credit cards enriching, if not flat-out necessary. They give us the spending power to buy a computer now, and pay it off over time.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

They are good for emergencies: when you have your car towed to safety, for example. And many cards automatically insure your purchases.

The important thing is that your credit card helps you at all times, even when something goes wrong with a purchase. It's easy enough to cancel your card and get a replacement if it's misplaced or stolen.

But what happens when you need to dispute a charge?

"Of course, you don't go into any sort of relationship thinking about the potential problems," says Ruth Susswein, executive director for Bankcard Holders of America, a consumer group based in Salem, Va. "Most people (looking at credit cards) think, 'How much is this going to cost me?' Their first concern is the rate and the fees. But what the companies are willing to do for them (should be) right up there."

For example, let's say that a $1,000 rug from Istanbul pops up on your monthly statement; you haven't bought a rug in the past five years, and haven't traveled out of the country in the last year. It's important to know if your credit-card issuer will investigate the matter swiftly and skillfully, or if the ordeal will force you to spend hours making phone calls and writing letters — tasks that could make your annualized percentage rate seem insignificant.

Fees and finance rates are the pillars of your credit agreement, and you can shop around and compare rates pretty easily.

One reason consumers may not factor in the handling of charge disputes is that no survey or study ranks card companies by that alone. Because each case tends to be unique, it is hard to judge the reactions of card companies in advance.

Your best bet is to go with those companies that win high marks for customer service — most likely, the ones that are best at investigating fraudulent charges and settling charges on goods that were never delivered or that arrived damaged. According to a study last year by J.D. Power and Associates, consumers favor AT&T Universal, Wachovia Bank, Optima, Bank of New York, and Citibank cards for their overall service.

There are other cards that also do a good job. "The only one I'm willing to single out is American Express, because customer service is something they pride themselves on," says Susswein.

The first chance a card company gets to show its colors is when you notify it of a disputed charge. Federal law requires that all card issuers investigate claims of fraudulent charges as long as the cardholder's complaint is made within 60 days of the date the erroneous charge first appeared on the statement. The card company has 90 days to look into and settle the matter. During the investigation, the company cannot make you pay the debt or charge you interest on it. You may be required to pay back interest at a later date, however, if the card company decides against you.

AT&T Universal requires that its customers protest a charge in writing. But it tries to help expedite the process by sending customers a form letter so they won't omit necessary information or delay until it's too late. American Express doesn't necessarily insist its customers refute a charge in writing. Often a phone call will get the ball rolling.

Having your credit-card company go to bat for you can make all the difference when you haven't received your purchase or when it arrives in less than good condition. Let's say that you did buy that $1,000 rug when you visited Istanbul recently, and that the merchant was supposed to ship it to you. The rug was charged to your credit card, but you never received it.

By law, you can't make a claim against the card company until you have first tried to settle the problem with the vendor. But after that, you can let the card do the talking.

The card company can ask the vendor's bank to reimburse it for the charge. The bank, in turn, would ask the same of the merchant — a process known as a charge back. American Express has an added advantage; it also acts as the merchants' bank, which means it can track the transaction more easily if there is a problem.

American Express doesn't require its customers to fight their own battles first.

For example, several years before Gregory Tarmin became an American Express spokesman, he bought a platter in Sicily, Italy, with his American Express card. He had arranged to have it engraved and sent to him in the States. When the credit-card bill arrived and he still hadn't received the platter, he called American Express. When American Express contacted the store owner for him, it found that the store had simply been backed up with orders. So Amex waived the charge until the item was sent.

What's more, it made follow-up calls to the store until the platter was shipped, and then alerted Tarmin.

Other credit-card companies may be just as conscientious. A note: Since a number of institutions issue Visa cards, customer service can vary.

Calling a customer-service agent and asking questions about protocol could help you find those companies that go the extra mile.

Go ahead, let them spoil you.

CREDIT CARDS

- The Federal Reserve said that, as of May 1996, total U.S. credit card balances stood at $444 billion.
- If your credit record is really poor, you can get a secured card, which is tied to your savings account.

- You can get fees lowered on your existing cards by threatening to switch.
- The absolute cheapest card is probably through your credit union.
- You can sign your dog up for a credit card. (American Demographics found a woman who did.)

21st Road Race By-the-Sea and Road Walk

The Cohasset Rotary Club would like to announce that the 21st Annual 10K Road Race By-the-Sea and Walk will be held Sunday, April 6.

This year's race is under the direction of Tom Gruber and Roy Fitzsimmons. The proceeds go to the many intown projects that Rotary supports. More than 800 runners are expected from all over New England. The start of the road race will be at 1 p.m. from the Cohasset Common. There will be free T-shirts and refreshments for all registered runners.

The road walk starts at 10 a.m. from Sandy Beach. The race is sanctioned by USATF-NE. Applications are available at Curtis Liquors, Good Sport, Noble's Camera Shops or from the Cohasset Rotary, P.O. Box 36, Cohasset, MA 02025.

The deadline for pre-registration is April 1. Pre-registration fee is $12. Post-registration fee is $15. For race questions, call Austin Lyne at (617) 383-6550. Residents are urged to restrain dogs and to discourage children from skateboarding or riding bikes along the route since they present hazards to the runners.

If you would like to join or address the membership of Rotary, please send a note to President, Cohasset Rotary Club, P.O. Box 36, Cohasset, MA 02025.

RECREATION NOTES

Indoor Golf Lessons

The Cohasset Recreation Department, in conjunction with the Scituate Recreation Department, will accept registrations via phone for adult indoor golf lessons, scheduled to begin Thursday evening, March 6.

Lessons are five weeks in duration, meeting one hour weekly and cost $65 per person. Classes are limited to eight individuals maximum in size and registrations are accepted on a first enrolled basis. Should you require use of golf clubs for the classes, indicate this at the time of your registration and we will loan you clubs for the classes free of charge.

To register call the Cohasset Registration Department at 383-6791. Mr. Dan Neary will be the golf pro teaching this session, which will be held at the Cushing Elementary School, off Route 3A, Scituate.

Class times are 6 and 7 p.m.

Summer Employment

The Cohasset Recreation Department is currently accepting applications for playground program counselors for their seven-week day camp program.

Candidates should have demonstrated experience working with children in a structured setting. Employment is for seven weeks, from June 30 through Aug. 15 plus a one-day orientation during late June. CPR certification is mandatory and the recreation commission will conduct a course during late June for those who need CPR certification.

Openings exist for both the pre-school half-day program and the 5- to 12-year-old, full-day programs.

The recreation commission conducts a seven-week day camp structured program for children 3-1/2 through 12 years of age.

Should you be interested in applying, call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at (617) 383-6791 for an application or further information.

Pre-School Program Coordinator

The Cohasset Recreation Commission is accepting applications for a pre-school program coordinator for their summer playground program for children ages 3-1/2 through 5.

Candidates should have experience working with pre-school age children and a degree in Early Childhood Education or related fields would be an asset. The pre-school program coordinator reports directly to the playground director and is responsible for program development and staff direction.

The position is for an eight-week period working 3-1/2 hours daily Mondays through Fridays. The rate of compensation is $8 per hour. Call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at (617) 383-6791 if interested.

Cohasset Little League Signup

The final registration for 1997 Little League Baseball will be held Saturday, March 15, from 9 to 11 a.m., at the Deer Hill School. All players (including players who are already on a major league team) must register. In addition to completing a registration form and paying the registration fee, parents are also required to provide a copy of the player's birth certificate.

Registration is open to all children who will be at least 5 years old by Aug. 1, 1997.

Call Mark or Lynne at 383-6413 with any questions.

Legion Signups, March 20

American Legion baseball signups will be held Thursday, March 20, at 7:30 p.m., at the George H. Mealy Post on Summer Street in Cohasset.

Athletes between the ages of 16 and 18, who reside in Cohasset or Scituate, are welcome. This meeting is mandatory, if you cannot come, please call Scott Arnold at (617) 545-1896. Hope to see you there.

Youth Lacrosse Players Needed

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse begins its second season this spring, and has just a few roster spots open for fifth- and sixth-graders. Registration for the program is limited to 30 participants, and 25 youngsters signed up during an enrollment period in the fall.

The Cohasset Youth Lacrosse program plays in the Massachusetts Bay Youth Lacrosse League, playing against other youth programs from around the area. In general, the team has a practice or a game twice each week, beginning in late March and running through Father's Day.

To be eligible to participate, a child must be in the fifth- or sixth-grade and must be able to supply their own equipment. The remaining spots on the team will be filled on a first-come, first-served basis. To sign up, call Coach Chuck Jaffe at 383-9858.

Little League Umps Needed

Umpires are needed for the upcoming Cohasset Little League season scheduled to start April 13. Senior citizens, adults, college students and high school students are encouraged to participate.

For more information, call Dennis at 383-6448.

EXTRA POINTS/Dave McKee

Hingham is the Hockey Team of the 90s

You can't argue with success.

And when it comes to high school hockey, the Hingham High program has established itself as the team of the decade on the South Shore.

This Sunday at the FleetCenter the HHS Harbormen will be playing for their third Division II state title of the decade (they won it all in '92 and lost in the finals in '96). And the Harbormen, who face off with North champs Newburyport at 2:15 p.m., are considered the favorites to win it all after their 6-1 dismantling of Franklin in the South Finals at BC last weekend.

But the HHS program is more than just winning on the ice. The Harbormen, led by long-time coach and Scituate resident Garrett Reagan, play the game the way it's supposed to be.

Consider the following:

•Not only do the Harbormen perennially win the Atlantic Coast League title, they also win the league's sportsmanship award. (They also received this year's James Mulloy Sportsmanship Award from the MIAA and the State Hockey Coaches Association.)

Reagan will not hesitate to bench a player or boot him off the team for dirty play or poor work habits. There's also no coddling or special treatment of the players at HHS. If you screw up, you're gone.

•The Harbormen get it done without relying on superstars.

Reagan uses up to four lines and three pairs of defensemen in every game. Quick shifts (30 to 45 seconds) keep up the relentless speed and fore-checking of the Hingham game. Like a Union General in the Civil War, Reagan and the Harbormen wear down their opponents through attrition and fresh troops.

There's no double shifting of top lines. And the players names are not embroidered across their jerseys. It's all for one and one for all.

•Hockey players want to play and learn at HHS.

Sure Reagan loses the occasional Hingham youngster to a private school like Catholic Memorial or Boston College High, but if a player wants to learn how to play winning hockey, Hingham High is the place.

And the word "mind game" doesn't exist with Reagan. If he has a problem with his team or with an individual player, he lets them know right way. He doesn't yell for the sake of yelling and if player hustles, no matter what his ability, he is on Reagan's good side.

•Modesty starts at the top.

Reagan shuns features, catchy quotes, gloating and predictions when dealing with the press.

Sure he's proud of the HHS program, but he knows that hockey is only a game.

After a victory, he goes out of his way to praise Hingham's opponents, no matter the final score. (He said Franklin would be the class of Division II next year after beating them over the weekend.)

And after a loss, he does not hide in the locker or wear a sour puss with the press. I'll never forget how accommodating and gracious Reagan was after losing last year's state final game to Springfield Cathedral. He thanked every reporter and answered each question thoughtfully.

I know a lot of coaches who are great when their team wins but if they lose, they blame the referees, the crowd, the timekeeper, their players, God, Gordie Howe, you name it.

Hoopsters Into Tourney

whupped Greater New Bedford in the Bears' home gym.

Cohasset did not start the season with great momentum, and actually had a losing record of 3-4 just after the New Year. From there, the Skippers embarked on an 11-game winning streak which did not end until they fell to the Carver Crusaders late in the season. One reason for the Skippers' run was the leadership of the seniors.

Co-captain Matt Belson, an All-Star in football and most likely in lacrosse this spring, played a different role on the hoops squad. Instead of being a starter, Belson came off the bench to give head coach Ron Ford some help on defense or just to provide a spark when his team needed it. A three-point marksman, an favorite, and also a member of the team's vocal quartet, the Fab Four, Belson helped keep his teammates in stitches.

Burke Davis is another comedian and member of the Fab Four, but he bore another title for the Skippers: Most Underrated. This hard-nosed point guard was called by Ford "fundamentally, the best defensive player in the program," no small praise considering the level at which defense is played by Cohasset. Davis, another co-captain, was always willing to nail the clutch three-point shot and made some spectacular passes during the year. He is one of three Skippers who will play college basketball next year.

Grant Emde was also underappreciated and underused this year. An intense, gritty player with boundless energy, Emde excelled at diving for loose balls and suffocating his assignment on defense. An All-Star centerfielder, Emde was a captain on this year's football team and carried his leadership into the basketball locker room. Although his game face is second to none, Emde's personality changed once the buzzer sounded and he happily took his place as a member of the Fab Four.

What team would be complete without a defense-rebound specialist? In steps Brian Kilroy, a 6-foot-2 senior who loomed as an inside presence this year. A la Dave Cowens, Kilroy seemingly eschewed offense, more content to focus on blocking a shot or tearing down a rebound. However, with great reluctance, Kilroy showed remarkable accuracy on his middle-range jumper. One of the hardest working players on the squad, Kilroy is the final member of the Fab Four.

It is difficult to compare J.L. Williams to any one player. After all, how many players are their team's second-leading rebounder and second-leading three-point shooter? Very adept on the offensive boards, Williams hit several key trifectas for Cohasset this year. Armed with these weapons and a superb on-the-court work ethic, Williams will take his game to the next level next season, undoubtedly playing college ball somewhere.

Finally, Ryan Bishop. A three-year varsity player, the 6-foot-8 center and two-time SSL All-Star, the team leader in rebounds and blocked shots, and nice guy. From my very first day on the job, Bish treated me with a great deal of kindness and friendliness. Now, maybe he just wanted his name in the paper, but I'm sure Bish knew it would get in anyway. Always forthcoming and honest (often hilarious) with a quote, Bishop will be sorely missed, not only by Cohasset basketball, but also by this reporter.

A corp of six seniors such as this always helps to push a team. This year's crop of guys was a versatile, personable crowd who helped guide the squad during the season. Next year's team promises a shocking nine returning lettermen. The Cohasset Skippers, fueled by memories of playing with this year's seniors, will most likely make some noise in the SSL next winter.

Wrestling

Rourke, a former Skipper wrestler who took fourth in the All-State meet in 1985, was awarded the MIAA's Division 3 Coach of the Year Award.

Sweeney said Rourke was deserving of the award and also credited the work his other coaches put in this season and past years. Doug Sheerin, a volunteer coach, has been a huge asset to the program. Sweeney did say the assistant Peter Buckley would be tough to replace. A Cohasset assistant for the past three years, Buckley recently announce this was his final season.

BUSINESS NOTES

Cohasset Plaza Fiesta for the March of Dimes

Saturday, March 15, throughout the day, most Cohasset Plaza businesses will be offering special deals and in-store events, along with a variety of interesting fund-raising activities to raise money for the March of Dimes. The Easter Bunny will be on hand to pose for free candids.

The event was organized by Valerie King of King Jewelers and her marketing adviser Nancy Murray Young to help boost mid-winter business while supporting a worthy cause.

To help make the day a successful fund-raiser, King is offering store visitors the chance to walk away with one of six exceptional items, totaling nearly $1,000 in retail value. In a clever twist on the Easter Egg Hunt theme, she is filling hundreds of plastic eggs with items worth at least $5 — customers can choose an egg for a $5 donation to the March of Dimes. For the most part, they'll be filled with coupons for free watch batteries (a $5.25 value) or a $5 discount off jewelry repairs of $10 or more — but six of the eggs will contain coupons redeemable for the following items: a sterling silver "Make Way for Ducklings" pin by Hand and Hammer Silversmiths ($38); a Bulova quartz carriage clock ($70); a sterling silver puffy bunny pendant on a matching chain ($100); choice of a man's or ladies' Citizen gold wrist watch ($100); a gold Claddagh ring with emerald inset ($185); and a unique 14k gold soft bangle bracelet valued at $500.

"Our goal is to raise $2,000," King said.

Papa Gino's manager Ed Meighan is cooking up some Pizzazzy Pizza Party offerings, and 15 percent of the day's revenues will be donated to the March of Dimes. Barbara Cox, manager of Appleseed's, and her staff are planning informal modeling of their terrific new spring fashions. A special sale section will feature great separates for under $10, and there will be a drawing for a merchandise gift certificate in exchange for donations to the day's charity. Some special entertainment is planned as well.

At Sweet Surprises, Sofia and Nikki Yeragotelis invite youngsters to bring their favorite teddy bear or other significant stuffed friend to visit with Muffy Vanderbear and her cuddly pals in this special chocolate and gift shop, get a little treat, and enter a drawing for a few sweet surprises of their own.

The crew at Dunkin Donuts is still working on fiesta plans, but manager Kevin Brown says that the shop's delectable donuts would play an integral role in the fund-raising campaign. Fleet Bank's Cohasset branch manager Connie Zanoni was also putting finishing touches on the bank's activities for the day. At Cohasset Cleaners, John Chang is leaning toward a "Guess How Many Jelly Beans" contest. WATD will be broadcasting live from Cohasset Plaza Saturday afternoon.

"We really appreciate the efforts of business people like Valerie and the other merchants at Cohasset Plaza who understand the value of partnering with organizations like ours," said Stephanie Cohen, March of Dimes Division Director for Southeastern Massachusetts.

Cohasset Schools Celebrate the Arts

The Cohasset school system is presenting "The 1997 Festival of the Arts" which will feature art, music and performances by students of Grades K through 12.

This celebration will take place Wednesday evening, March 19, between the hours of 6:30 to 9 p.m. at Cohasset High School.

Please mark your calendars and plan to welcome spring by attending this arts festival and supporting our students of the arts.

Preschool Screening is March 20

A special needs preschool screening for 3- and 4-year-old children will be held Thursday, March 20 between 9 a.m. and noon. The screening will take place at the Joseph Osgood School by appointment only. The goal is to identify at an early age, children who may be experiencing developmental delays or difficulties, and could benefit from special services. Call the student services office at 383-6104 to schedule an appointment.

The Cohasset Teen Center

The Teen Center will sponsor a dance Thursday, March 13, at the Deer Hill School cafeteria for seventh-graders only. The dance will begin at 7:30 p.m. and end at 10 p.m. Refreshments and sodas can be purchased. Dance contests will be held and prizes will be awarded. Come and join the fun!

Greek Comedy on Stage

The Cohasset Drama Workshop will present the play "The Twin Manaechmi," a Greek comedy, under the direction of Nigel Cracknell, an exchange teacher from England. The cast includes high school students John Crowley-Buck, Jerry Cogill, Kelly Tufts, Meredith O'Hayre, Mike Kearney, Holly Brennock, Justin Golden, Grace Gardner, Stephen Reynolds, Jenny Chastain, Alex D'urso and stage manager Jacque Hurley.

The show will be at 7:30 p.m. Friday, March 14, and at 2 p.m. Sunday, March 16, in the senior study at the high school. Tickets are available at the door for $4.

This show marks the acting debut of several of the cast members and will be Mr. Cracknell's only directorial venture while in the United States this year. Please come to have a good time and support arts at Cohasset High School.

Pam Speed, Joan Kovach and Jane Ellis react after misspelling their word during the annual spelling bee sponsored by the Cohasset Education Foundation last week. The event raised $4,500.

DRUG FACT

"Over the past few decades American teenagers were the only age group in the United States to have suffered deteriorating health and this time segment exactly coincides with the epidemic of marijuana use among young people," says Dr. Robert Dupont, founding director of the National Institute on Drug Abuse. In view of such statements from one of the most knowledgeable experts in the drug abuse field, it seems incredible that so many know so little about this drug, which has, in fact, graduated from epidemic proportions to being "endemic" among our youth.

Police Make Eight Arrests in February

Historically February has been a slow month for the police department and this year was no exception, Police Chief Brian Noonan said.

He reported there were a total of eight arrests last month: three for (domestic) assault & battery, two for outstanding warrants, one for violation of a protective order, one for operating a motor vehicle after license suspension and one for protective custody. There were no breaking & enterings reported during the month.

In February, the emergency dispatch center received 93, emergency 9-1-1 calls.

"Also in February, we were able to interface the 9-1-1 system with our in-house computer system. This project will enable us to immediately down-load critical information from the 9-1-1 screen to our in-house system," Noonan explained.

He praised the Cohasset, Scituate and Marshfield police for excellent detective work in making arrests in the recent "wrought-iron gate" thefts and recovering many of the stolen items.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
THE TRIAL COURT
THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT
NORFOLK DIVISION
DOCKET NO. 97P0538E1

Estate of CELIA H. TIFFIN late of COHASSET In the County of NORFOLK

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that JAMES B. TIFFIN of BOSTON in the County of SUFFOLK and JAY H. TIFFIN of BELLEAIR in the State of FLORIDA be appointed executors named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on April 9, 1997.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16A.

Witness, David H. Kopelman, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, this twenty-fifth day of February, one thousand nine hundred and ninety-seven.

Creating Your Own Memoirs

Remembrances: Creating Your Own Memoirs. The Cohasset Council on Aging will host an introductory workshop for older adults interested in preserving lasting memories and stories. No skill or experience is needed, just bring writing materials, Wednesday, April 9, 10 a.m. to noon. The fee is $10. Advance registration and payment is required at Council on Aging, 3 No. Main St. Call Kathy Bryanton at 383-9112.

Mad Hatter Tea Party

Celebrate spring at the second annual Mad Hatter Tea Party...an unbirthday party celebration March 23, 1 to 3:30 p.m. at the South Shore Community Center. Sponsored by the South Shore Community Nursery School, all proceeds benefit the programs and scholarship fund of the school.

Party activities and games include: pin the smile on the Cheshire cat, the giant teacup coin toss, family bowling, Mad Hatter party hats to make and wear, edible necklaces, wind streamers, and decorate your own cupcakes.

Party refreshments include an unbirthday cake for all, coffees courtesy of Quikava, hot dogs and chips, and homemade baked goods.

Admission is $5 at the door per child. Accompanying adults are invited to attend free.

For more information call 383-0036.

Annual Easter Egg Hunt

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct the 20th annual Easter Egg Hunt, for children three through 11 years of age, Saturday, March 22, at noon, Deer Hill School field.

The Easter Bunny and helpers will be on hand. There also will be live animals at this year's hunt, as well as the other attractions.

Children will be divided into three separate chronological groups:

Group 1, Ages 3 and 4 (with parent); Group 2, Ages 5 to 7; and Group 3, Ages 8 to 11.

Please bring a small paper bag or container for your candy.

Individually wrapped chocolate eggs will be scattered about the designated areas. In each group some of the eggs will be wrapped with masking tape that will have a number on the tape. Should you find one of the numbered eggs, hold on to it as you will receive a prize from the Easter Bunny.

This year's program sponsors are Cohasset Rotary Club, Veterans of Foreign Wars - Post 9146, American Leg Post #118, the Cohasset Pol Association and the Cohasse Chamber of Commerce.

Rain date will be on Saturday, March 29, at noon, Deer Hill School field.

Library Corner

Who's Reading What This Winter

Last summer we noted what some prominent Cohasset bookworms were reading on the beach. With the help of the Paul Pratt librarians, we've compiled a must-read list for cuddling up by the fire, waiting in the carpool line, the dentist's office, the commuter boat, etc. Here's the list:

Kathleen O'Neil, "Civil Action" by Jonathan Harr; Chartis Tebbits, "Angle of Repose" by Wallace Stegner; Anne Bowdoin, "Portrait of a Lady" by Henry James; John Sturman, any history book; Anne Chapman, "Karen's Kittens" by Ann M. Martin; Mark Chapman, "The Vengeance of the Witch Finder" by John Bellairs; Mary Staunton, "Private Altars" by Katherine Mosby; Cecelia Chapman, "Holiday Inn" by James Howe; Susan Ceci, "Morality Play" by Barry Unsworth; Jean Higgins, "Angela's Ashes" by Frank McCourt; Carol Riley, "Personal History" by Katharine Graham; Bob Riley "How the Irish Saved Civilization" by Thomas Cahill; Retta Dwyer, "Kindred' by Octavia Butler; John Dwyer, "Executive Orders" by Tom Clancy; Ann Mitchell, "Murder She Meowed" by Rita Mae Brown; Annette Sawchuck "Hornet's Nest" by Patricia Cornwell; Ellen Endris "King Solomon's Ring" by Conrad Lorenz; Steve Endris "The Takeover" by Stephen Frey.

Considering a Medicare HMO?

If you're a Medicare beneficiary, you've probably thought about joining a Medicare HMO like First Seniority or Secure Horizons.

Medicare HMOs offer many benefits, but they may limit your choices.

Before you join a Medicare HMO, you'll want to ask the health plan questions like, "Will I still be able to see my regular doctor?," or "Where will I be hospitalized?"

Give us a call if you'd like more information on how to select an HMO. We'd be happy to talk with you about your Medicare options and to send you free information.

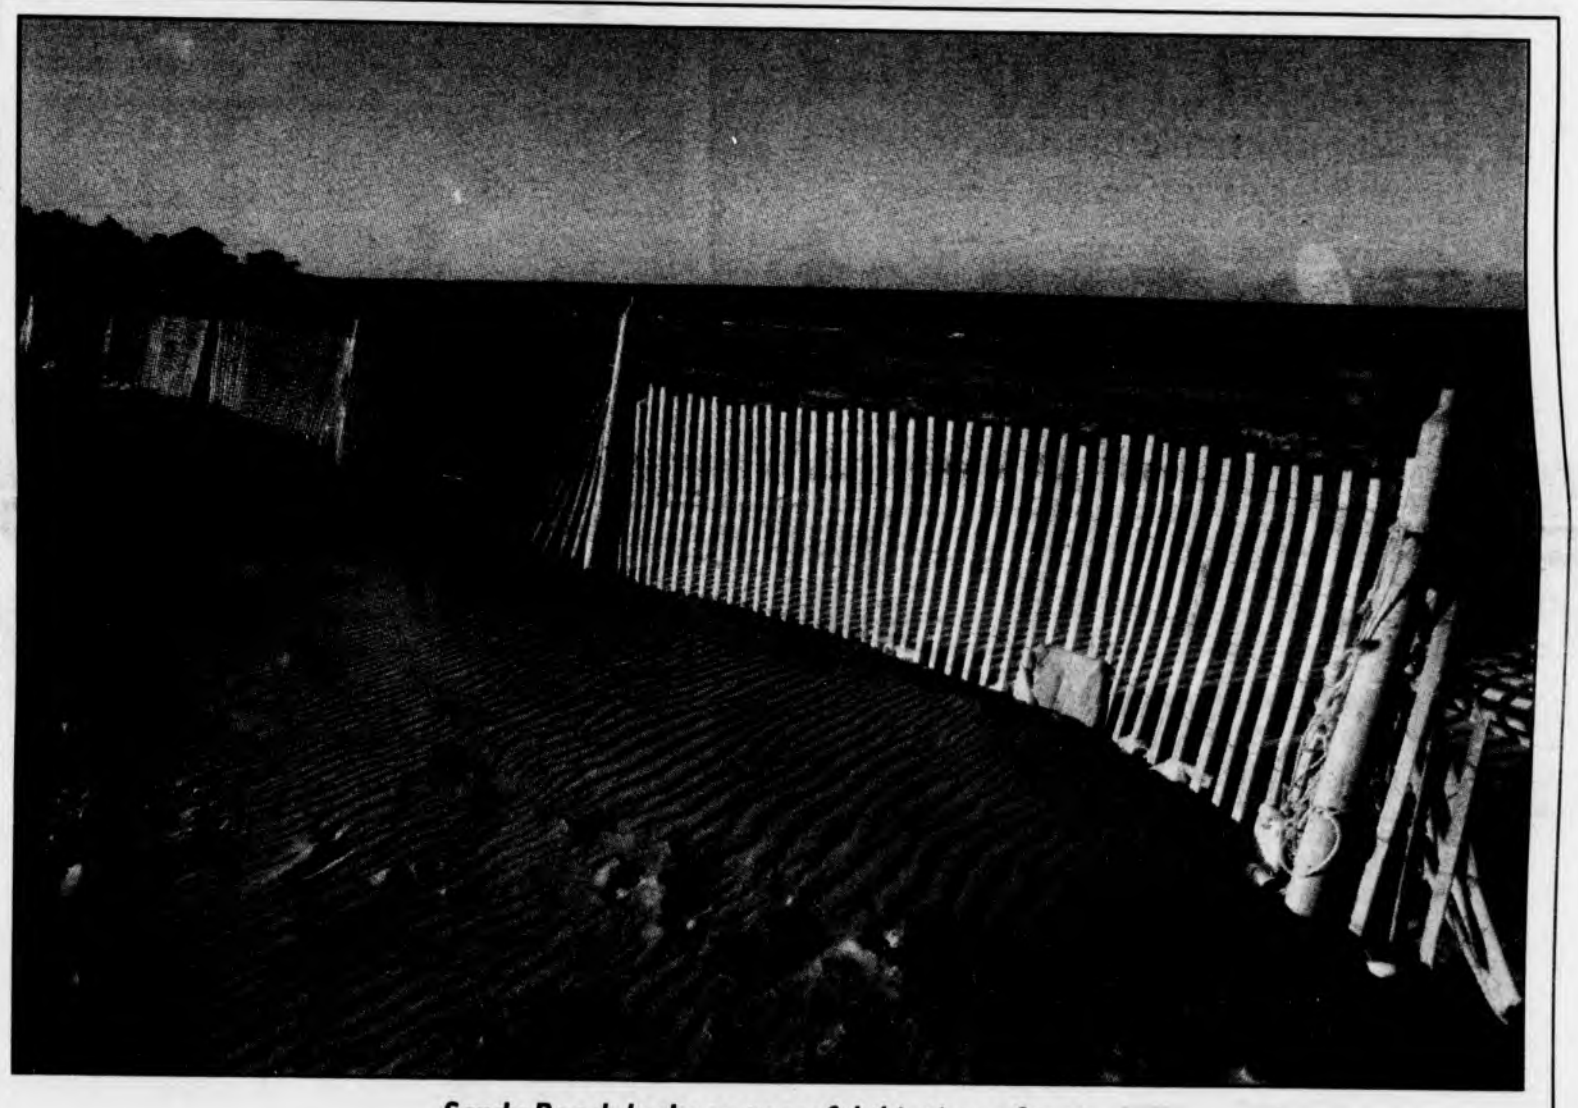
Land Bank Proposal Placed on Hold
May Resurface Next Year

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

Open space: most people agree the town should preserve it, but few people agree on how the town should pay for it. That distinction sparked a heated debate at a selectmen's meeting last month when the board discussed a proposed article for a land bank funded through a two percent surcharge on home sales.



Selectman Ronnie McMorris proposed the article. Selectmen agreed to delay the article to work on some of the details. McMorris said the article would probably resurface at next year's annual town meeting, possibly as a conservation commission proposal.

"The article was pulled because there was so much language that had to be worked out," McMorris said.

Selectman Michael Sullivan has labeled the proposal "another new tax."

Land banks are an attractive way for a town to preserve open space. Towns set aside a certain amount of money each year to purchase conservation land and preserve it as open space. There are a number of ways to fund a land bank, including a surcharge on new home sales or through Advisers Support Septic, Sewer Plans

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

Voters at town meeting are going to have a full menu of choices when the time comes to decide the fates of various plans to address sewer and septic issues in town.

The advisory committee threw its support behind both the board of health's $13 million on-site waste water management plan, and the sewer commission's $18.5 million North and Central sewer districts.

Health board member Kevin Ulmer presented the plan for parity requested by voters at last year's annual town meeting. The plan is intended to provide parity for the approximately 1,500 properties with septic systems not included in the proposed sewer districts.

Rare Species to the Rescue
T and Town at Mitigation Table

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

The spotted turtle may not know a lot about politics — but it and other rare species could be at the center of future political pressure on the MBTA.

As Cohasset moves along in the mitigation process with the T over restoration of the Greenbush line of the Old Colony Railroad through town — outbound issues such as preserving wetlands will come to the forefront.

According to Michael Dick of the town mitigation committee, there are performance standards the T must meet under state Wetlands Protection Act Regulations before it can alter environmentally sensitive areas.

There are five vernal pools along the rail-bed right-of-way certified by the Massachusetts Division of Fisheries & Wildlife.

Also good news for Cohasset is the presence of the

Photos of Beacon Rock Sought

The Cohasset Historic Commission is looking for any photos of Beacon Rock — aka Signal Rock — that will show what was there in the mid/late 1800s. Please call Ham Tewksbury at 383-1074 if you have any information and/or pictures of what existed at that historic installation.

Harbor Committee Backs Lobster Lab

John Bertolami, chairman of the Harbor Committee, wrote to selectmen last week to report that his board recommends town meeting approve the lobster lab proposal for the Hagerty house.

"The Cohasset Harbor Committee invited Mr. Murray Campbell and Dr. Kevin Ulmer, representatives of the project, to make a presentation at our regular March meeting," Bertolami said.

"It was the consensus of the committee that this project will benefit not only the children of Cohasset but the town as well."

Bertolami pointed out that if the building were demolished there would only be an increase of six parking spaces.

Some, who oppose the lab, say parking isn't adequate at the site.

Village Butcher at the Beach

This week, selectmen approved issuing a transient vendor's license to Mike Feroli of the Village Butcher Shop in the village. The license is good from Memorial Day through Labor Day.

Feroli said he would have a sausage cart at Sandy Beach and sell sausages, hot dogs and drinks.

Town regulations allow no more than two vendors at the beach at any one time. Vendors must provide a trash bin, are not allowed to use glass and must police the area and beach for all trash associated with their products.

Relay for Life at New Track

The American Cancer Society has received approval from the school department and selectmen to conduct a Relay for Life at the new high school track June 13-14.

The relay begins at 3 p.m. on Friday and continues until 3 p.m. the following day. A 9 p.m, Friday, a candlelight ceremony is held to honor survivors and remember those who lost the battle against cancer.

Teams of eight-to-12 people representing corporations, clubs, neighborhoods and families walk or run in designated shifts. The teams must keep one member on the track throughout the 24 hours. Teams are encouraged to camp out in tents and enjoy the festive atmosphere created by music, food, games and camaraderie shared by others, said organizer Candace Psaros.

Psaros explained that the American Cancer Society has conducted a similar event in Hanover for the past four years without problem.

"There's no damage of any kind," she said. "Our policy is to leave the area cleaner than when we got there.

Psaros said no animals or bikes are allowed but wheelchairs are allowed on the survivors lap during the opening ceremonies.

School athletic director Clark Chatterton said only single lights would be lit on two of the field light posts.

If it rains, walkers will be allowed to use the gym, Chatterton said.

Bid for Fence is Awarded

On the recommendation of Fire Chief Roger Lincoln, selectmen will hire Armstrong Fence, which bid $5,334, to build fencing around the town fuel tanks at the new DPW garage at the town landfill.

Armstrong submitted the higher of two bids but Lincoln said he preferred Armstrong which will use large fences posts as bumpers. Otherwise the town would have to install a guard rail around the cement spill pad making the pad too small.

"With the fence and guard rail, we'd lose another 1-1/2 feet on the spill pad and we have some large vehicles that must get on the pad," Lincoln explained.

The lower bid was $3,615.

Lincoln will talk to the DPW garage committee about installing a roof over the fencing to help prevent any vandalism of the fuel tanks.

Cogill to be Acting Chief

Per the existing collective bargaining agreement and recommendation of Police Chief Brian Noonan, selectmen appointed Sgt. David Cogill to serve as acting police chief from April 4-13 while Noonan is on vacation.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

MOMENT OF TRUTH

QUESTION: My husband has just been transferred. We are trying to sell our present home and buy another in the new area, but have not received an offer. Time is getting tight and we would like to go as a family. Should we move and try to sell the house empty or stay in the house until it is sold?

ANSWER: Experience shows that an empty house is tough to sell and often brings less money. A house devoid of furniture loses its charm and appearance of livability. Maybe the house has not sold because it is overpriced. If moving is vital, consider reducing the price of your house by 5 or 10 percent in order to sell it now.

Three Races Highlight Town Election

With the deadline to return nomination papers passed, the town election season begins in earnest.

There's a four-way race for two open seats on the school committee. Susan M. Turgiss, Joseph McElroy, Kathleen Ofsthun, and Hugh Morgan are all vying for the seats being vacated by Jim Kirk and JoAnne Chittick who are not seeking reelection.

Four people will compete for Peter Pratt's seat on the board of selectmen. Pratt decided last week not to seek a second term. Running are Wigmore Pierson, Tom Callahan, Diane C. Sullivan, and Alexander Koines.

John McNabb Jr. and John C. Pereira are seeking the seat on the water commission held by Fred Koed who is not running for reelection.

Also in the running are: Lillian Murray Curley and incumbent Mary Muncey for two seats on the recreation commission; Alix White for reelection to the health board; Ralph Perroncello, 10 Pleasant Lane, for reelection to the Cohasset Housing Authority;

Anne C. Bowdoin, 131 Nichols Rd., Patience C. Towle, 180 Lamberts Lane, and Agnes McCann, 104 Doane St., for re-election to the board of library trustees;

Raimund G. Vanderweil, Jr., 500 Jerusalem Rd. for reelection to the board of sewer commissioners; Alfred S. Moore,Jr. 101 Fair Oaks Lane, for reelection to the planning board; and Michael C. Patrolia, 15 Cushing Rd., for reelection to the board of assessors.

The election is May 3.

Town to Play Greenbush Politics

Looks to Hire Mitigation Lobbyist

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

Cohasset may follow Hingham's lead and hire a professional consultant to lobby for the town's interests as it deals with the MBTA over a range of issues surrounding restoration of the train.

In a meeting with three of the members of the town mitigation committee this week, selectmen learned that the town must get its issues into the "Section 61 Finding" which is part of the environmental review of the project.

"The whole proof in the pudding is to get what we want into the Section 61 Finding," said Michael Dick of the mitigation committee.

He explained what goes into that section of the environmental review, which must be approved by state Environmental Affairs Secretary Trudy Coxe, becomes the town's "contract" with the T on environmental mitigation issues.

What the town needs is someone to help with the political process to keep pressure on the T and get the attention of the office of environmental affairs, Dick said.

Selectmen directed the mitigation committee to come up with a proposal and priority list of issues — not the least of which is the $1.5 million town flood control project. Officials would like the T to pay for at least a third of the project's costs. The project involves work in the James Brook basin along the rail right-of-way.

The committee will also see if Cohasset could work with other towns on some of their shared concerns.

Selectmen will also contact MBTA general manager Patrick Moynihan and local legislators state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray and state Sen. Robert Hedlund to discuss Cohasset mitigation issues.

Mitigation committee member Martin Corry said everything is on the table.

"Everything is negotiable," he said. Corry explained that Andrew Brennan, environmental affairs manager with the T, who is working with the mitigation committee, can't agree to some of these requests. He said, however, the T won't oppose the town going to the legislature to try to get a package of relief.

Rare Species

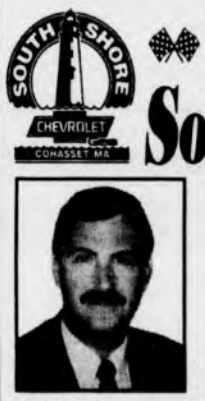
Spotted Turtle (Clemmys guttata), a rare species, in James Brook which runs near the tracks.

Selectmen decided Monday to ask for $1,500 to $2,000 to hire an environmental consultant to define that special habitats exist by catching the critters and photographing them. The money would come out of the town's reserve fund.

Identifying the creatures would force the T to file for a Notice of Intent, a formal procedure, which would subject the project to more environmental review at the local level.



"This would cause the T to slow down on construction in those areas," Dick explained.

ALTERNATOR REALITIES
▶ The alternator is the electrical component that provides electricity for an automobile as soon as the engine starts. Symptoms that nearly always signal the alternator's failure are illumination of the charge warning light or a discharge indication on the anmeter. Before a decision to replace the alternator is made on the basis of these signs, however, the alternator drive belt should be checked for looseness and the voltage regulator examined to see if it is working properly. Either of these conditions could cause either the charge warning light or the discharge indicator on the anmeter to appear. Another indication of a failed alternator is a shrill noise that increases in pitch as engine speed increases. This noise can be caused by a bad diode, the failure of which can reduce the alternator's maximum output.
▶ There's not much you can do about failed alternator except replace it. When you do, you want a shop where you feel comfortable knowing the job will be done right. At SOUTH SHORE CHEVROLET-GEO, we use the latest equipment to ensure a proper diagnosis of your car's problem. the general tax fund.

The article asked the town to approve a surcharge of between .5 percent and 2 percent of the total price of a home sale. The proposal also provided suggestions for an exemption on the first $100,000 to $150,000 of the purchase price.

The surcharge would assess property sellers a recording fee at the Registry of Deeds and go into a town-controlled fund.

The average home in Cohasset is valued at $308,000. There were 85 home sales in Cohasset in 1996.

If the plan had been in effect last year, the maximum amount the town would have collected with a 2 percent surcharge and no exemption on 85 homes with an average value of $308,000 would have been $523,600. The minimum amount, based on a .5 percent surcharge on 85 homes valued at $308,000 with a $150,000 exemption, would have been $67,150.

What this could mean for a new home-buyer in Cohasset is a potential increase in the purchase price of a home. For home sellers it would mean absorbing the surcharge into the agreed purchase price.

At a previous selectmen meeting, Town Counsel Paul DeRensis said the surcharge would not be tax deductible and would serve as a deduction on the amount a homeowner realized from the sale.

McMorris said she liked the proposal because it would allow the town to purchase open space without borrowing money. Selectman Nan Roth also supports the proposal.

Sullivan strongly opposed the article, labeling it "sleazy" at one hearing.

"Historically, the town has been pretty effective at buying land," Sullivan said. "Whenever anybody, like the conservation commission, has made a good case they've had pretty good luck."

Sullivan said the surcharge would place an unfair burden on a small percentage of the town to benefit everyone. He said the town should fund a land bank through the levy to keep it fair for everyone.

Sullivan said exempting the first $100,000 or $150,000 would just place the burden on an even smaller percentage of the population: high-end buyers.

Real estate companies oppose surcharges on home sales because of the potential negative impact to the sales market.

Gail Bell, president of the Plymouth County Board of Realtors, said funding land banks through a surcharge on home sales is a terrible idea.

"This would have an enormous negative impact on home sales [in Cohasset]," Bell said. "The town is trying to fund something that will benefit the community by charging a small segment of the population. Tying it to home sales is the worst part; it could devastate the local market."

Bell said there have been 14 single-family home sales in Cohasset so far in the first quarter of the year. She added that last weekend was one of the busiest days for Cohasset Realtors she has ever seen.

Bell said local Realtors plan to meet with state legislators at Realtor Day on the Hill Aug. 8 to discuss real estate legislation and voice their feelings on land banks.

Bell added that she does not oppose a land bank funded through the general tax base.

Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket have adopted successful land bank proposals that fund the program through a surcharge on home sales, DeRensis said. Barnstable County is considering a similar county-wide proposal.

Advisers Support Sewer Plans

The health board would borrow $13 million through a state loan program and a Proposition 2-1/2 override to establish a revolving money pool that would provide low-interest loans to property owners with failing septic systems.

The town would reimburse 50 percent of the cost of repairing or replacing a failed system. Residents would pay for the town's half of the program through an increase on the tax rate of about $104 per year per home valued at about $300,000 over the 34-year implementation phase.

Homeowners in the program would pay an average user fee of $177 per year for an initial Title V inspection, annual function tests and pumping. The fee would vary and would be based on actual water usage.

Under the current proposal, the town would accept bids for a company to perform inspections and pumping. Homeowners would also have the option of choosing an inspector/pumper from a list of health board approved companies. The plan would not authorize any additional town employees.

The program would have a cap of $40,000 on any repair in the program so the town would never pay more than $20,000 to any single homeowner. If a repair exceeded $40,000, the homeowner would have to obtain additional funding outside the program.

Advisory committee member Kenneth Ingber said the "second amended judgment for agreement" (a legal agreeement between the town and state) softened the impact of the state's mandate on the town and lessened the need for the health board's program.

"What your left with now is the public health issue and the town's request for parity," Ingber said.

Ulmer said the intent of the plan at this point was to address the 1,500 systems not included in the sewer districts.

"If you want to address those 1,500 homes, you should support this," Ulmer said.

Ingber also wanted to know whether the plan went too far.

"You have a $13 million plan and we don't know if fixing ten systems will cure 80 percent of the problem," Ingber said.

Ulmer said that the problem was that failed septic systems contaminated the ground water, and the town was facing an increasing risk of contamination from microorganisms.

Ingber also felt the average $177 user fee was too high, especially compared to what homeowners were currently paying for pumping.

Ulmer said the fee was essentially a septic system warranty.

Lee Jenkins objected to placing another expensive program on the tax rate. He said the town should distribute the cost evenly among all homeowners.

The committee voted 6-1 to support the plan, with Jenkins casting the dissenting vote.

Sewer Commissioner Edward "Ted" Guild presented four town meeting articles for the advisory committee's consideration.

Article four asks voters to approved the second amended judgment for agreement between the state and the town. The new agreement would allow the town to increase its water flow through the Elm Street sewage facility from 100,000 gallons per day to 120,000 gallons per day.

The increase in water flow would allow the new elementary school to connect to the sewer in 1998 instead of in 2000.

The new agreement also identifies four priority areas in town: Aaron River, Bound Brook, Lily Pond and Little Harbor.

Guild said the new agreement benefited the town by increasing the water flow, extending deadlines for the completion of sewer projects and saving the town some money. The advisory committee voted 7-0 to support the article.

Article five asks voters to approve the Central Cohasset sewer district project, and to pick up one half of the cost of the North Cohasset sewer district project. If town meeting approves the articles, voters would be asked to approve a 50 percent reimbursement for users in the program through a Proposition 2-1/2 override.

Guild said that voting yes on article five would approve the project regardless of whether the Proposition 2-1/2 override passed. If voters defeat the override, users would pay the entire cost of connecting to the system through betterments.

Selectmen have said they will immediately announce another special town meeting if article five fails.

The advisory committee supported article five 7-0.

The committee unanimously supported article 10, which modernizes language in the sewer department's rules and regulations.

The committee also unanimously supported article 13, which authorizes the town to borrow up to $5 million from the state to implement a low-interest loan program to address septic failures that pose the greatest risk to public health.

Homeowners could borrow money from the town at five percent interest to address septic failures in the four priority areas identified in the second amended judgment for agreement.

Guild said the article addressed the minimum legal requirement set forth in the second amended judgment for agreement.

People Behind the Title:
Maria Plante, Cohasset's Constable

By Mary S. Earon
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

In medieval monarchies, a Constable served as a military commander in the ruler's absence. In peaceful times, another duty was to govern the royal castle.

Today, in Cohasset, we have a Constable. But put aside the image of monarchies and royal castles because the definition of a Constable and the duties thereof are different today.

The Constable today is a peace officer who is empowered to serve writs and warrants, and to make arrests, if need be. In fact, the Constable today has less authority and a smaller jurisdiction than a sheriff. The position is an appointed one, with a term of three years.

Maria Plante is Cohasset's badge-toting Constable, and has been since the early 1980s. She is a Cohasset resident, mother of six, and grandmother of 11.

In an interview at her place of business, also in Cohasset, Maria shared information about herself and her job as Constable.

Q: How did you become Constable?

A: In the early 1980s, I went down to Town Hall to see Billy Signorelli, the town accountant. He was a friend of our family's, and I wanted him to help me do some cost accounting on the casinos that MGM Grand wanted to put in Hull. I had organized Citizens Against Casino Gambling because the casinos MGM was proposing on the 64 acres of land they bought would have been less than a mile from my home. While I was there, an assistant came in and told Billy the person who had applied for Constable didn't qualify. He turned to me and said, "Maria, why don't you apply?" It was as simple as that.

Q: You're a take-charge person. What was the application process like for Constable?

A: Billy gave me a copy of the General Laws, which said I was to apply to the Board of Selectmen as they would be the ones to appoint me. I had to get a reference from a lawyer in town, a judge, and a State Representative. I also had to be without any felony charges. You have to be an honest person because you are required to make return of service to the court. When the Judge asks if you did so, he needs to know you are telling the truth when you say yes.

Q: Sounds like you also need to be reliable and have good follow through. What are your duties?

A: Duties are to and for the Town of Cohasset. I'm called by different boards, and a lot by the Town Clerk because she is involved in getting notices posted for town meetings, special meetings, and elections. When the Attorney General reviews the Town's By-Laws and accepts them, I have to post them as well. I also post notices and warrants for the Boards of Selectmen, Health, and Assessors. Postings have to be done where they are accessible to people, like the library, post office, Town Hall lobby, and police station,. I also post at places like the dry cleaners and gas stations, where people go a lot.

Q.: Do you work with other government offices outside Cohasset:

A: I choose to serve only in Cohasset. It's concentrated and controlled here. I know people. I'm nonviolent, and I choose not to place myself in danger, which is a risk when working in bigger towns and cities outside of Cohasset.

Q: That makes sense. What are the problems in carrying out your duties as Constable?

A.: Most people I serve I know. In the situation where I have to serve someone I don't know or don't trust, I can call and get police backup. Several years back, I had an incident where I knew that the person I was serving had violent tendencies. I called for police backup, got it, and was glad afterward I did because the gentleman did get violent.

I also have access to other constables on the South Shore through the Constables Association. In a situation in which I am serving an eviction or it's someone I know to be difficult, I can call in another constable to work with me.

Q.: That's reassuring. What's enjoyable about being Constable?

A. I like meeting and talking to people. I like acting as a mediator as well. For instance, I know people sometimes have difficulty with money and can't pay their bills. If I can get the two parties to work out their difficulty without having to take the defendant to court, that's the part I like about it. It's not black and white.

Q: Compassion is important. How many types of writs and warrants are there?

A: Many. Most popular is the Notice to Show Cause that comes out of the courts. Small claims up to $2,500 or less. I have summonses and complaints, subpoenas and eviction notices. I am able to serve civil, federal or criminal warrants, but mostly, I serve civil papers in local courts.

Eviction notices can be difficult in some cases. One that wasn't was when the Red Lion Inn transferred its ownership recently and the new owners wanted all the tenants out. The tenants knew it was coming so I didn't have to physically go in. But sometimes there are situations when a Constable has to go into the house with papers and remove belongings. That involves hiring a bonded moving company that has a storage area. The first thing a Constable does in that situation is to pull the telephone plug out of the wall so they can't call the court to get an action against the Constable. Then it's a matter of cataloging the house contents before it all goes into storage, where it stays until things are worked out with the court.

Q: Have you ever had to make an arrest?

A: No. I do have the power to arrest but I don't carry a gun. I am not equipped to handle a situation like that.

Q: Have you ever had to serve papers in the middle of the night?

A: No. By law, papers aren't allowed to be served before sunrise or after sunset. To be Constable, however, you should be available around the clock all the time because you never know when you're going to be called. Since I took this position, I went away once. The police chief then assigned the service of papers to one of his officers, which is generally the case in all towns.

Q: Is the position of constable a paid one?

A: It's not salaried, but every service I get called to do is $20, which includes my mileage and postage. Cohasset is only seven square miles.

Q: How many services do you conduct a year?

A: Each year is different. But you have to consider that I pay for my bonding, badge, dues for membership in the Massachusetts Constable Association, postage, and miles. It's not a lucrative position. I used to bring my daughter, Jennifer, with me when she was a young girl. I would share the $20 with her, which she used to save toward college.

Q: Your term is coming up and you are re-applying in June. Do you have advice to others who may be interested in applying for Constable?

A: Sure. Draft a letter with your qualifications and references to the Board of Selectmen before June 30. Be an honest person with no felony record, and be willing to be available around the clock.

Maria Plante has been Cohasset's constable since the early 1980s.

Seahawks Hockey Players Shine at States

Attention, Mike O'Connell — here are three up-and-coming hockey stars that you might be interested in in the future! Three hockey players from Cohasset have won the State Championship at Stoneham this past weekend with the Seahawks team coached by Frank DiCristofaro. Michael Rasmussen scored a hat trick (three goals) in each of two play-off games, Michael Hajjar scored two goals in the final game and Michael Colorio played brilliant defense.

Congratulations, boys, and good luck in New Hampshire in the Regionals!

Colin Eastman Studds, son of Mr. and Mrs. Colin A. Studds of Cohasset, has been chosen to be a Writing Fellow at Brown University for the 1996-97 academic year. Studds is a second-semester senior at Brown studying English and American literature. The Writing Fellows program helps Brown students learn to communicate more effectively by providing specially trained undergraduate tutors with whom they may revise their written work. Fellows are chosen for their writing ability and for their willingness to help others learn to write, and they take an intensive course in the theory and practice of the teaching of writing.

Like Little League Baseball? Want to be involved even though you are too old, or don't have anyone playing? Do we have an idea for you! Umpires are needed for the upcoming Cohasset Little League season, scheduled to start April 13. Senior citizens, adults, college students and high school students are encouraged to participate.

For more information call Dennis at 383-6448.

Brother Daniel E. Skala C.F.X., Headmaster of Xaverian Brothers High School, announced the students who have achieved honor roll standing for the second marking period of the 1996-97 academic school year. Our congratulations go to two Cohasset scholars, Todd C. Harrington and Matthew K. Lewis.

Todd is a senior and he earned Ryken Honors (grades of 90 or above in all courses). He is the son of Mrs. Cherylann Harrington.

Matthew is a member of the 1998 Class and made first honors (grades of 85 or above). He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kevin F. Lewis.

There is a new addition to the Stuart and Elizabeth Hebb family of Cohasset — Claire Frances Hebb, born Jan. 22 at South Shore Hospital. Claire is the sister of Laura Hebb, age 2.

Her grandparents are Dr. and Mrs. James Dougherty of New Jersey and Judge Robert and Mrs. Hebb of Lunenburg, Nova Scotia, Canada.

Liz and Stuart would like to thank everybody for the overwhelming support they have been given over the last few months! We are so glad that it is spring (almost) so that we can catch a peek of Claire when she takes a stroll "around town!"

Don't miss 'Stolen Moments,' an exhibition featuring the work of our very own Ann Berman, art teacher at the Deer Hill School, March 24-April 4 at the Arnheim Gallery, Massachusetts College of Art in Boston. There's also an artist reception, from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m., March 25 at the gallery.

Attention all of you Easter Egg hunters, the annual Easter Egg hunt will be March 22 at Deer Hill School. It is for ages 3 to 11 (they will be split up into three groups for the hunt), it will begin at noon, and you are asked to bring containers for the candy that is to be "found." Be sure that you accompany your 3- or 4-year-olds. Our hats are off to the sponsors of this event — Cohasset Rotary Club, Veterans of Foreign Wars, American Legion, The Cohasset Police Association and the Chamber of Commerce. Oh yes, the Easter Bunny will be there to greet your little ones! Have fun!

The DAR is looking for some help from you — they are collecting Campbell's products labels and other proofs of purchase — there are more than 1,000 items (i.e., all soups, Marie's dressings, Mrs. Paul's frozen foods, Swanson foods, V8 juice, Franco-American, Vlasic, Pepperidge Farm, Prego, Pace, all Campbell's soup products. Please give any labels you have saved to either Ann Pompeo or Barbara Dillon and remember, this is an ongoing project for the DAR, they will welcome your labels and/or proofs of purchase anytime! And, they will be ever-so grateful!

Isn't it great to see those two beautiful red lawn mowers in the Cohasset Hardware Store window? Oh boy, spring really cannot be too far behind! YEAH!

Don't forget to call me with your news, and be sure to remember that I have to have the column in early Friday mornings from now on! Have a great weekend, then call me so that we can all share it!

Great Vigil of Easter

Saint Stephen's Episcopal Church, 16 Highland Ave., will celebrate the Great Vigil of Easter, a candlelight service Saturday, March 29, at 7:30 p.m. The worship is dramatic, beginning with the church in darkness. Candles are lit and at the moment when resurrection is proclaimed the lights are turned on signifying that the resurrected Jesus is the light that leads the world out of darkness.

Worship Easter morning, Sunday, March 30, will be at 8 and 10 a.m. with the full choir and choristers. Both services, Eucharist with sermon, will be in the church.

Prior to Easter, there will be worship in the church on Maundy Thursday, March 27, at 7:30 p.m. This Eucharist commemorates the last supper and the importance of community for the church's life together in Christ. Following the Eucharist will be a simple meal of foods typical of Jesus' place and time — breads, cheese, olives, nuts, fruits, and milk and honey!

A 24-hour Prayer Watch will begin Maundy Thursday at 3 p.m. Parishioners sign up for an hour throughout the day to be in church to read, pray, just to be quiet or meditate. It recalls the words of Psalm 130: "my soul waits for the LORD more than those who watch for the morning, more than those who watch for the morning." It is a powerful experience of prayer each minute throughout the day bringing the church into Good Friday.

Good Friday worship begins at noon March 28 with an hour of quiet. The Prayer Book liturgy begins at 1 p.m. A service for children takes place at 2 p.m. followed by a half hour of quiet reflection and prayer to end the traditional three hours of worship while Jesus was on the cross. A number of parishioners and the youth group will participate in the 20-mile Good Friday walk raising money to assist economically poor areas of the South, particularly in rural Mississippi.

Obituaries

Assunta M. Train

Assunta M. (DeGeorge) Train, 91, of Cohasset, a member of St. Philip Neri Parish in the Waban section of Newton where she arranged flowers for Sunday Mass for 50 years, died Sunday at Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home following a brief illness.

Mrs. Train enjoyed painting seascapes and flowers and was involved in several art programs in the Newton area.

She was a former telephone operator.

Mrs. Train was born in Dedham and lived in Waban for 65 years before moving to Cohasset several years ago.

Wife of the late Charles D. Train, she leaves a son, Charles Train of Waban; three daughters, Janette Antonellis of Newport, R.I., Beverly Lind of Princeton and Doris Golden of Cohasset; 10 grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at St. Anthony's Church, Summer Street. Burial was in Mount Pleasant Cemetery, Arlington.

Arrangements were by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home.

Donations may be made to Glastonbury Abbey, 16 Hull

E. Louise Gonsalves

E. Louise (Fiekers) Gonsalves of Cohasset died Sunday after a long illness.

Mrs. Gonsalves was born in Boston.

She enjoyed cooking, gardening and the seashore.

Wife of the late Alfred Gonsalves, she leaves two sons, Donald Hakkila of Waldeboro, Maine and Robert Hakkila of Woburn; four daughters, Virginia Brown of Plymouth, Carol Allen and Dorothy Fiori, both of Scituate, and Nancy Ferreira of Marshfield; 15 grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

A memorial service was held at the First Congregational Church of Marshfield.

Arrangements were made by the Cremation Society of Massachusetts.

EDITORIALS & OPINIONS

Question of the Week

This year there are three races on the ballot for the May 3 town election.

There's a four-way contest for selectman, a four-way race for two seats on the school committee and a race for an open seat on the water commission.

In keeping with our tradition, we will pose a Question of the Week to the candidates running for contested seats.

Thomas Callahan, Alexander Koines, Wigmore Pierson and Diane C. Sullivan are all vying to fill the vacancy on the board of selectmen created when Peter Pratt steps down after the election.

Joseph McElroy, Hugh J. Morgan, Kathleen Ofsthun and Susan Turgiss will compete for two open seats on the school committee. JoAnne Chittick and Jim Kirk are not seeking reelection.

And John K. McNabb Jr. and John C. Pereira will run for Fred Koed's seat on the water commission. Mr. Koed has decided not to run for reelection.

All candidates, opposed and unopposed, who have not already done so, are invited to submit photographs and formal statements announcing their candidacies.

Next week, we will feature candidates' answers to the following Question of the Week. Responses should be brief — no more than 250 words — and must be received by noon, Monday. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they are too long.

'What is the biggest challenge facing the board you would like to represent? How will you make a difference?'

Candidates may reply the FAX at 617-741-2931 or by mailing or dropping off their responses at the Cohasset Mariner office in Hingham on 73 South St. by noon Monday. Be sure to leave enough time for mail delivery.

We will also publish a candidates' corner but it is limited to a few lines from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers and the like.

The Mariner will not accept Letters to the Editor from candidates or letters endorsing candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues up until the April 24 issue before the election.

Candidates are encouraged to advertise their campaigns in the Mariner. For information about deadlines and costs of political advertisements, please contact Claudia Oliver at 1-800-649-6661.

If you have any questions, please call us at 383-8139.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Proud to Wear Townie Title

To the Editor:

The power of the Globe article on Cohasset is very far reaching. I first heard about it from a member of our veterinary ski club who is a consultant to Mr. Roy. At the time, we were in the Canadian Rockies, 2,300 miles from Cohasset.

There was an e-mail message about the Globe article waiting for me when I arrived back home. It was from my brother, Joel Pratt who lives in Machias, Maine. Machias is at least 400 miles from Cohasset.

The next day I received the whole article from a former "Townie" Hope Warren Morgan, who is wintering in Tucson, Arizona. Tucson is approximately 2,350 miles southwest of Cohasset.

Another Cohasset friend, who is wintering in Scottsdale, Arizona, Mary Campbell, told me she had received two copies of the same news article. She was wondering if she qualified to be a "Townie."

My Mariner arrived the following day with the Editorial about the indignation of stereotyping Cohasset residents. Next came the excellent letters by Kelly Stone and Bob Davenport. On that same day, I received the second copy of the Globe story from a friend living in Delaware, 1,000 miles from Cohasset.

I have lived in Santa Cruz, California for the last 26 years, so why do you think people have sent the clippings to me? Because I was a "Townie." My ancestors did not know it when they seceded from Hingham, but they were all "Townies." Today, there are still many of my first cousins, including a selectman who are "Townies." I hope they are as proud as I am to wear that title!

Help with Mailings Appreciated

To the Editor:

Last week the Treasurer-Collector's office was faced with the task of mailing out 5200 excise tax bills. We called Virginia Anderson at Elder Affairs and the following seniors reported for work. Mary Andracchio, Mary Davis, Dot Lincoln, Steve Leighton, Phyllis Leighton, Tilly Nardo, Maria Perroncello, Pat Hanlon, Libby Pompeo, Olga Sawchuk, Connie Tolman and Peter Tolman.

5200 bills is almost twice as many as there are real estate bills. It is a very big job and very time consuming. Some of the seniors planed on working a half day, but when they saw how much there was to do, the ones that could, came back for the afternoon session. Virginia was able to line up more people, however, they still had to come back the next morning to finish.

The week before some of the same seniors plus others mailed the water bills for the Water Department. They are back this week mailing the town warrants for the Town Meeting. This is for the Selectmen's Office. Next week they will be here to mail the real estate bills for my office.

The people I mentioned and all the others I have missed are really super concerned citizens. I hope the town appreciates what they do. I know my staff and I do.

Drug & Alcohol Committee to Lobby for DARE

By Melissa Boynton
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

If the Drug and Alcohol Committee had its druthers — Cohasset would be a DARE community.

Toward that effort, last week the group invited Hingham's DARE officer Michael Peraino to talk about the national program which forms a partnership between the police and schools.

Peraino, a Cohasset resident, detailed his experiences with the program, including how students sometimes call to alert him about unsupervised parties.

"There was an unsupervised BYOB party to take place following a Saturday night dance," he recalled, detailing one incident. "Several calls were placed to the station from anonymous students who were concerned about what might happen there and wanted me to let the parents know."

Peraino told the appreciative parents, averting a possibly dangerous situation.

"That kept us from having to confront and arrest kids ....that's not what we want to do, we'd much rather prevent problems," he said.

D&A Committee members said while they are satisfied with the quality of the work performed by Police Officer Lisa Matos, who is the town's PALS officer, they are not satisfied with the quantity.

PALS (Police Assisting Local Schools) started several years ago and is unique to Cohasset.

In a telephone interview, Matos — who conducts three, 40-minute periods in grades K-6 annually — said DARE is in the classroom 20-25 times a year.

"More time needs to be found for the health education period," she said. "I don't care if it's being delivered by me, Mike Gill (schools' director of health education), or another teacher," Matos said.

But she is quick to point out that having a full-time officer dedicated to education on drug and alcohol abuse is not necessarily the answer.

"In a vacuum, having a full-time officer can only do so much — the school, the parents and the community all need to work together on this."

Gill defends PALS and other school health programs and points out they are effective but have a low profile.

"DARE has become a public relations machine complete with slogans and bumper stickers," Gill told the Mariner. "The reason you don't hear about these other programs is because teachers aren't in the business of promoting."

Gill said he has repeatedly invited Drug & Alcohol committee members to attend the Health Education Advisory Council if they are concerned about the curriculum which includes PALS as part of the in-school health education program.

"This council has been in place for 17 years as a forum for discussion on what we teach our children in the schools. I have attended the Drug and Alcohol Committee meetings in the past and told them if they were really interested in this issue to do some research, bring some information or programs that have proven results."

D&A committee members said they would discuss the possibility of DARE with other people around town to gain support. Committee Chairman Craig Muir said he would approach the schools and selectmen about the issue.

Committee Seeks Direction

"Can't we just start looking at solutions?" interjected Tony Bramblett, recent student appointee to the Drug and Alcohol Committee at last week's meeting.

This frustrated plea came as a result of more and more parents commenting on the recently publicized Woburn case, where more than a dozen teens ingested handfuls of prescription pills, and other unfortunate incidences of drug and alcohol abuse.

"I feel like we really need to start discussing solutions to the problems instead of just hashing and rehashing stories of use and abuse," said Tony.

Ron Hammer, also a member of the committee, wants to know "why we (as a committee) haven't gotten involved in advising and influencing policy revolving around drug and alcohol abuse at the school. Other appointed government agencies have that function, why don't we?"

In a phone conversation following last week's meeting, long-term committee member Margo Aikens said, "I feel the committee is frustrated. We aren't really clear what our responsibilities are, but we're trying. I, for one, would like to see a more organized meeting with minutes taken and representation from the board (of selectmen)."

Craig Muir, chairman of the Drug and Alcohol Committee, expressed similar frustrations. When asked what the objective of the group was, he said, "I don't think there has been a clear cut objective because the community at large has not been able to accept that there is a problem.

"We are a committee that welcomes parents who are not satisfied with the level of drug and alcohol education in the schools. We are more of a sounding board for their concerns," he said.

When asked what their mission statement was, he responded, "Do we have agendas, a mission statement or goals? Yes, it's to save one kid from getting killed."

The focus of the meeting turned to DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education), a program for which the committee is currently attempting to gain community support (see related story). The next committee meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m., April 9.

Standpipe Location is Paramount

Board of Water Commissioners
Town of Cohasset

The construction of a second standpipe for the Cohasset water system is long overdue. Its location is paramount to the efficient operation of the distribution system.

I feel obligated to share with you my knowledge of conditions at the Bear Hill site, and reasons why Scituate Hill is the only viable location.

First, I would like to commend your board for the great strides you have made on improvements in the distribution system recently.

An area at the highest point on Bear Hill, large enough on which to construct a two-million gallon tank, would necessitate using some portion of the area where the old earthen reservoir was located.

When the old reservoir was demolished, all material including granite cap stones, the brick gate house, the reinforced concrete core walls (some pieces the size of a pick-up truck) riprap, crushed stone, clay and top soil were bulldozed in and covered, hence this entire area is honeycombed, full of voids, air pockets and cracks, rendering it unstable as a construction site.

Without first carrying out extensive and costly test borings, and possibly facing complete reclamation of the site, I do not believe this area could withstand the hundreds of tons of concrete, steel and water that would be placed there.

Having two, two-million gallon tanks at the same location (all storage capacity for the distribution system) would be of no value in the event of a long term breakdown of the distribution lines leading to and from them. Remember the original 12" cast iron main there is now more than 100 years old, and the other feeder lines are transit mains, more than 40 years old.

Scituate Hill provides many advantages, a few of which are as follows:

(1) Highest elevation in town.

(2) Direct feed to trunk main on Route 3A.

(3) Would provide an even flow and pressure to the distribution system.

(4) Increase flow and pressure to the new Forest Ave. line, Jerusalem Road area and future service to North Cohasset.

(5) Serve proposed new large diameter mains on Route 3A, north of King Street to the Hingham line and North Main St., North from King Street, Forest Ave. to Woodside Cemetery. (This section of town has no mains. A hodgepodge of small pipes run on private property, through swamps and the railroad right of way, serve most of the businesses in this section of Route 3A).

(6) Increase fire flow on Route 3A and the north end of the distribution system.

(7) Reduce the work load of the treatment plant.

A site on Scituate Hill on property owned by the state Dept. of Public Works was chosen as an ideal site in 1980. Inquiries into the acquisition, or use of two acres was initiated at that time. It is my understanding that little or no follow-up effort was made through the 1980s. However, I am certain an equitable agreement can be reached with the Department of Public Works. Perhaps a long term renewable lease, if not an outright purchase.

This project is already 15 years behind schedule. A little extra time and expense to develop the Scituate Hill site would prove advantageous for the entire distribution system and the future yearly operations cost of the water department.

Harbor is More Than a Place to Keep a Summer Toy

To the Editor:

Having kept a summer toy in Cohasset harbor for most of the last three decades, I've observed those in the harbor who don't. Sleeping aboard my ketch, I've felt the wake at four a.m. of the lobstermen who are starting their day. Coming down to the yacht club during a northeaster to "see how she's riding," I've been aware of the occasional work boat checking moorings or, perhaps saving a boat that broke loose.

This I know about men who work in our harbor: They see a lot more sunrises than I do, they get scared more often. They are prey to bitter disappointment more frequently than, perhaps, I am. And, they love their element more than those of us who take it more casually. Also, they land more than a half million pounds of lobster for the local economy. They, most of them, pay their bills if they can, and have loyal and loving families, but I've never seen a rich fisherman. And now, in the name of progress, the workers in our harbor are under increasing pressure.

In the last three years, the number of slips in Cohasset has doubled, and increasingly, federal and state laws require ever more concessions from fishermen and industries along our waterfront. Now, condominiums may soon erase a landmark used by fishermen and boatmen for nearly 10 generations with no one to protest. Everyone has a right to use our harbor, but in order to do so, there needs to be a balance in the facilities and support for every use that can be made for this precious asset. The harbor should not be developed solely for recreational boating ... nor for condominium owners ... nor for large yachts ... nor for marinas, but for every type of interest our town has in its waterfront.

One waterfront project, the Marine Biology Learning Lab should take its place among many other uses for this remarkable harbor. A learning center like the Marine Lab will not operate in a vacuum. It will mean jobs for some who might otherwise not be able to follow the sea as their parents did. The staff will only be about five people, but students will find jobs in the lab to supplement their incomes, and teachers will have a place right in town to work on grants and obtain other support such as teaching credits. New support businesses will grow, just as they have at a similar, somewhat larger (nine staff positions) genetics laboratory at cold Spring Harbor in New York. Everyone associated with our waterfront will have a vested interest of some form in the Learning Lab.

But, more important, I believe that no interest takes precedence over expanding the ability of our youth to equip themselves for an increasingly complex future. In this age when we can clone mammals, our educational system must adapt and develop improved methods for our kids to learn about biological science. But recipients of the biggest benefit will be the kids. Fishermen's kids may find a substitute means of working with the sea their fathers taught them to love, and future generations will have an ever clearer understanding of this wonderful, bountiful ocean before us.

Hockey Speedster Aims High

All-Star Greg Figueiredo Has Barely Scratched Surface of His Potential

By Joe Reardon
COHASSET MARINER

Greg Figueiredo has never drawn a lot of attention to himself during warm-up laps on the ice before a game.

But it's when the game actually gets under way that the Cohasset High hockey All-Star raises the eyebrows of the spectators in the stands.

Just an eighth grader, Figueiredo makes up in his hockey skills what he lacks in physical size. Fitting more to the mold of NHL All-Star Paul Kariya than Eric Lindros, the 5-foot-4, 138-pound Figueiredo is a lightning-quick skater who has scored many a goal by beating his opponent to the puck and breaking in on the goaltender unmolested.

In short, Figueiredo's talent pool runs deep. And at 15 years old, it's virtually untapped.

And though he isn't one of the biggest players on the ice, Figueiredo is constantly one of the most aggressive.

Figueiredo likes to drive hard to the net and that can mean some heavy hitting over the blue line.

But it's often Figueiredo dealing out the hardest hits.

"You don't have to be big to play hockey," he said simply. "You have to know how to hit."

Figueiredo put up some impressive numbers this past season for a Cohasset squad that struggled with a 4-11-2 record. He wound up with 17 goals and 14 assists, good enough to earn his second consecutive South Shore League All-Star berth.

Figueiredo has made it a habit the past two seasons of making an impact on the outcome of the All-Star game against the best hockey players from the Atlantic Coast League. As a seventh grader, Figueiredo scored the first goal of the game to give the SSL an early lead. This season he was even more of a factor in the SSL's 7-5 win.

Skating on a line with Hanover's Greg Carr and Tim Morrison, Figueiredo tied the game, 3-3, when he top shelved a quick wrist shot after Morrison worked the puck to the center of the ice.

Figueiredo, however, wasn't done contributing to the SSL's offensive outbreak. After the ACL came back to tie the game Figueiredo scored the what turned out to be the winning goal with 2:30 left. He ripped past the defense and Carr's pass from the blue line sent him in alone for an easy tally on a shot between the goalie's pads.

Figueiredo loved playing with the best players in the league, with no practice beforehand, because they were pretty much left on their own to improvise the offense.

"We were thrown together for a fun game," Figueiredo said. "It was great playing with the other All-Stars. We all got along well and talked about upcoming games."

The high school team improved on last year's record with its four wins, but the season was frustrating for Figueiredo just the same. He registered two hat tricks against Abington and Wareham.

He believes the team may have had a better overall season if the squad put together a string of wins closer to the start of the schedule. There were at least four games where the Skippers outplayed their competitors, but still came away with a loss. The overall record wasn't a true indication of just how good the team had improved.

"We did do better than last year," Figueiredo said, "but we got off to a slow start against Abington (a 9-2 loss)."

Figueiredo had a goal and assist in the game and could already feel the difference his offseason work had made. His skills were sharper for so early in the season he had bulked up 20 pounds through lifting and grew three inches.

His best game came against Division 3 state champion Hanover. Figueiredo figured in all three of the Skippers' goals in the 8-3 loss, scoring two and assisting on the other.

Without a doubt, it is the additional skating and games Figueiredo puts in that makes the big difference during the high school season.

In the summer he skates for Hockey Unlimited under Dave McCauley which strengthens his legs and further improves his already excellent speed. In fact, Figueiredo was recently timed and was rated by USA Hockey to be the fastest skater in Massachusetts, who was born in 1982.

Greg's father, Paul Figueiredo, who is one Dennis Walsh's high school assistants, realizes his son has to play year-round in order to improve and move up to the next level. But on the same token, Paul doesn't push his son to play. He actually has a tougher time keeping him off the ice.

"If you're going to be playing Division 1 or Division 2," Paul said, "you have to be playing year-round. You do have to take a break, though.

"If he goes three days without skating he's like, 'Dad, can you find some ice time'."

Even when he takes his month-long break in the spring, Greg continues to skate to maintain his leg strength. He finds that watching games when he's on hiatus proves to be too difficult.

"I get kind of bored watching the games," Greg said, "because I'd rather be out there on the ice playing."

Greg Figueiredo has been selected to two South Shore League All-Star teams and scored a pair of goals in this winter's win over the Atlantic Coast League.

He does much of his skating on Cohasset's Lilly Pond where he is free to improvise moves he can later use in games.

"It's a chance to try to do new stuff," Greg said. "It's great. You try new things and have fun with your friends at the same time."

Greg plays progressive hockey out of the Bridgewater Ice Arena in the Eastern Mass. Fall/Winter League. He plays two to three games every weekend during the high school season and well over 100 during the year.

The progressive team has a regular practice and a skills practice during the week. As a member of the All-Star squad Greg is able to play perennially strong freshmen programs such as Catholic Memorial, B.C. High and Xaverian.

Greg sees a huge difference between the progressive league and high school play.

"It's a much faster game and you know the other teams are going to be good every time out," he said.

Progressive hockey has also helped reduce Greg's bad habits on the ice. Because he is such a fast skater, Greg's stickhandling has yet to catch up with his speed on the ice. He also has a tendency to turn his back to the puck. After watching his son play so many games, Paul has come to the conclusion Greg relies a little too much on his superior skating speed to get him back into transition plays.

However, the bad habits are becoming rarer and Greg is gaining even more confidence.

And to think, there was a time as a little boy when Spring Is In The Air?

It's the time of the year where the sports season is probably most affected by the weather.

It's not cold enough to legitimize staying in to practice, but it's just chilly enough to make things uncomfortable on the playing fields in the late afternoon as the sun begins to hug the horizon.

Budding baseball players, trying to land a spot on a limited-number roster, have only a few real chances to prove themselves worthy of earning a team uniform and playing ball through the spring.

Players have to bat and field with coaches watching them very closely. Those players on the bubble of making the cut are under added pressure to perform in weather that is less than ideal. This isn't Fort Myers folks, it's the South Shore and it can get nippy.

First basemen probably have it the worst. During infield drills they have to take the bullet throws from third, short and second. Every player who has ever fielded the position knows what I mean when I say there's a pain like no other when they catch a throw directly in the palm of their glove on a raw day in late March. Even with a batting glove on as added padding, the sting is still very much there.

And how about getting a pitch in on the fists during batting practice? Even the more forgiving aluminum bats leave the batter with a pair of throbbing, purple hands. But if you want your at-bats come late April and May when the warm weather makes being on the baseball diamond almost dreamlike, you have to pay the price now.

Track and field is a different story, sort of. Distance runners have no problem handling the 40-degree days. They generate more than enough body heat and the majority of runners race best in cool weather.

But unlike cross country, track and field also involves a slew of events where it's absolutely critical to warm up thoroughly to avoid pulling a muscle. On cold days, it's that much more important. Tight hamstrings on sprinters can turn into nasty muscle pulls just steps out of the starting blocks. High jumpers can be soaring over the bar and feel a wrench in their backs where they didn't even know they had muscles.

But, to a point, what doesn't kill us only makes us stronger. New Englanders are supposed to be a hearty bunch. We're the ones who shake aside the stinging hands and the cold to give all-out efforts, no matter what the sport.

This is the first week of tryouts and practices for the spring sports season and it's not always fun. Many kids won't hear their last names called when the final cuts are made. That's part of sports. Hey, Michael Jordan was cut from his high school basketball team. But, oh how sweet it is when you hear your name called and you're a member of a team with the same goals.

The stinging in the hands? It'll all have been worth it 100 times over.

American Legion baseball signups will be held Thursday, March 20, at 7:30 p.m., at the George H. Mealy Post on Summer Street in Cohasset.

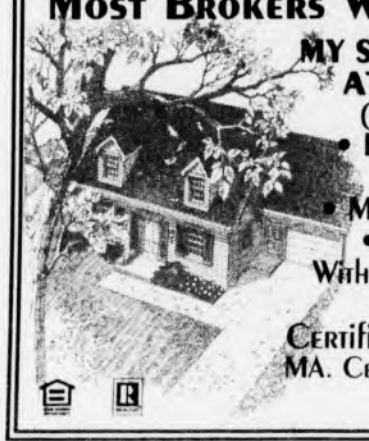
Athletes between the ages of 16 and 18, who reside in Cohasset or Scituate, are welcome. This meeting is mandatory, if you cannot come, please call Scott Arnold at (617) 545-1896. Hope to see you there.

21st Road Race By-the-Sea and Road Walk

The Cohasset Rotary Club would like to announce that the 21st Annual 10K Road Race By-the-Sea and Walk will be held Sunday, April 6.

This year's race is under the direction of Tom Gruber and Roy Fitzsimmons. The proceeds go to the many intown projects that Rotary supports. More than 800 runners are expected from all over New England. The start of the road race will be at 1 p.m. from the Cohasset Common. There will be free T-shirts and refreshments for all registered runners.

The road walk starts at 10 a.m. from Sandy Beach. The race is sanctioned by USATF-NE. Applications are available at Curtis Liquors, Good Sport, Noble's Camera Shops or from the Cohasset Rotary, P.O. Box 36, Cohasset, MA 02025.



The deadline for pre-registration is April 1. Pre-registration fee is $12. Post-registration fee is $15. For race questions, call Austin Lyne at (617) 383-6550. Residents are urged to restrain dogs and to discourage children from skateboarding or riding bikes along the route since they present hazards to the runners.

If you would like to join or address the membership of Rotary, please send a note to President, Cohasset Rotary Club, P.O. Box 36, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Cohasset High gymnastics captains Jodi Colwill and Erica Hettstrom give each other congratulatory hugs for their respective performances at the South Sectional meet.

Hockey Speedster Aims High Continued from page 13

Greg wasn't at all interested in playing hockey. He changed his tune as a 7 year old when he saw a couple of cousins play and decided to give the game a try.

Greg played for the South Shore Seahawks and developed rapidly. By the time he was 12 years old, Greg scored 63 goals for the Pee Wee A squad. The total was most since NHL star Jeremy Roenick.

Unfortunately, the Cohasset High hockey team will more than likely have to do without Greg on the roster next winter. He intends to try out for the Bridgewater Bandits Junior Hockey Club of the Eastern Junior Hockey League in April. The league, which is made up of players aged 16 to 20, involves a lot of traveling and would conflict with the high school squad.

Greg said the high school squad is headed in the right direction, but establishing a strong goaltender between the posts has to be the team's No. 1 priority with the graduation of fellow All-Star Jeremy Williams.

One possibility is junior-high goalie Chris Caron, who played his first season and improved steadily with each game. He liked what he saw from the younger squad, which beat some decent teams through the winter.

More than anything, Greg will miss his teammates and Walsh.

"I'll miss playing with the kids I know," Greg said. "I'll definitely miss playing for Mr. Walsh.

Walsh, who also coached Greg's dad, has the complete admiration of both father and son. Paul said Walsh is as much a teacher as a coach and has been an influence on both of them.

"He commands respect," Paul said. "He's very calm when he comes into the locker room. There's no taking when Mr. Walsh is talking."

Greg has expressed an interest in playing junior hockey in Canada a few years down the road and Walsh intends to help him any way he can if Greg decides to skate north of the border. He'll get a taste of Canada when he plays a progressive league tourney there during the Easter break.

With his solid work ethic and genuine love for the game, the fast-skating youngster has nothing but possibilities open to him in the future.

Cohasset High All-Star Greg Figueiredo gains speed as he whips down the left side during a South Shore League game.

Cohasset High All-Stars Greg Figueiredo and Jeremy Williams were vital cogs in the Skippers' lineup this winter. Figueiredo said Williams will be a tough goaltender to replace next season.

RECREATION NOTES

Summer Employment

The Cohasset Recreation Department is currently accepting applications for playground program counselors for their seven-week day camp program.

Candidates should have demonstrated experience working with children in a structured setting. Employment is for seven weeks, from June 30 through Aug. 15 plus a one-day orientation during late June. CPR certification is mandatory and the recreation commission will conduct a course during late June for those who need CPR certification.

Openings exist for both the pre-school half-day program and the 5- to 12-year-old, full-day programs.

The recreation commission conducts a seven-week day camp structured program for children 3-1/2 through 12 years of age.

Should you be interested in applying, call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at (617) 383-6791 for an application or further information.

Pre-School Program Coordinator

The Cohasset Recreation Commission is accepting applications for a pre-school program coordinator for their summer playground program for children ages 3-1/2 through 5.

Candidates should have experience working with pre-school age children and a degree in Early Childhood Education or related fields would be an asset. The pre-school program coordinator reports directly to the playground director and is responsible for program development and staff direction.

The position is for an eight-week period working 3-1/2 hours daily Mondays through Fridays. The rate of compensation is $8 per hour. Call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at (617) 383-6791 if interested.

Youth Lacrosse Players Needed

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse begins its second season this spring, and has just a few roster spots open for fifth- and sixth-graders. Registration for the program is limited to 30 participants, and 25 youngsters signed up during an enrollment period in the fall.

The Cohasset Youth Lacrosse program plays in the Massachusetts Bay Youth Lacrosse League, playing against other youth programs from around the area. In general, the team has a practice or a game twice each week, beginning in late March and running through Father's Day.

To be eligible to participate, a child must be in the fifth- or sixth-grade and must be able to supply their own equipment. The remaining spots on the team will be filled on a first-come, first-served basis. To sign up, call Coach Chuck Jaffe at 383-9858.

Lady Skipper gymnast Kristin Sheerin accepts her award as Cohasset High's "Beam Queen."

Little League Umps Needed

Umpires are needed for the upcoming Cohasset Little League season scheduled to start April 13. Senior citizens, adults, college students and high school students are encouraged to participate.

For more information, call Dennis at 383-6448.

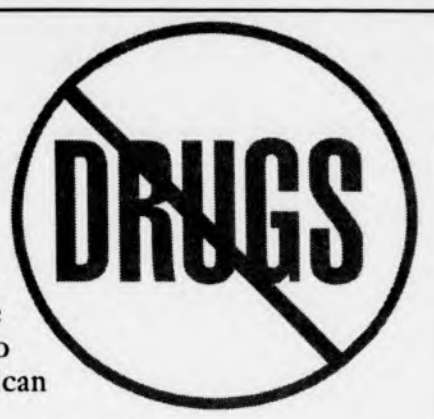
DRUG FACT



"Addiction and long-term side effects are irrelevant in the use of marijuana as medicine for dying patients... what really counts... is whether a seriously ill patient feels relief as a result of the intervention, not whether a controlled trial 'proves' its efficacy."

Dr. Kassirer

"Kassirer's position...will further erode societal disapproval of marijuana, a factor that some studies have tied to the likelihood that adolescents will try the substance."

Dr. Herbert Kleber of Columbia University's Center on Addiction and Substance Abuse

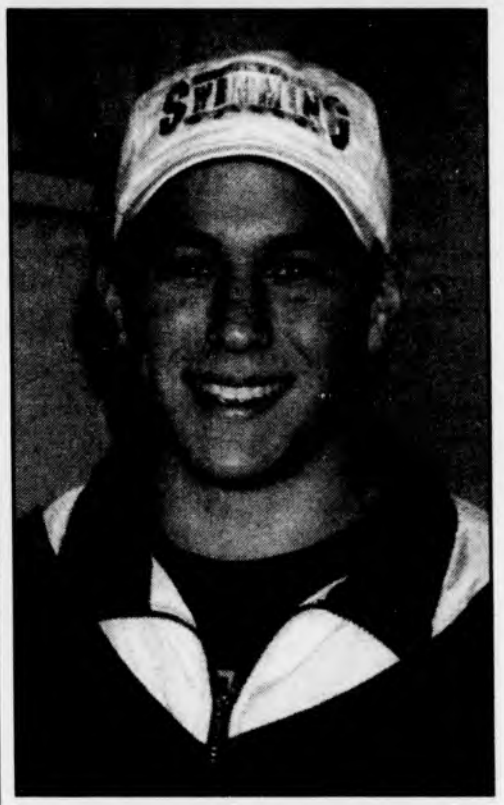
"We must remember that in our country... medicines need to pass scientific scrutiny and be subject to peer group review before they are made available to the American people."



Barry R. McCaffrey
National Drug Policy
Director in the Clinton Administration

"We are moving aggressively to resolve questions about the alleged therapeutic value of marijuana."

Dr. Philip R. Lee
Assistant Sec. of Health

STUDENT OF THE MONTH/Justin Golden

Justin Golden is an unusually conscientious and hard working student. He is highly competitive in class and willing to learn. He played football this fall and always does his share of the hard work.

I nominate Justin Golden for student of the month based on his consistent dedication to hard work.

— Mr. O'Neil
Latin teacher.

Deer Hill School

The Deer Hill School Council will present an evening discussion for parents on "Homework and Time Management: Balancing the Fulcrum Between Work and Play."

Hear results of surveys of parents and students; participate in an interactive discussion led by a panel of teachers, parents and students; and learn valuable survival skills, Wednesday, April 2, 7 p.m., at Deer Hill School cafeteria. Osgood third-grade parents are welcome. Door prize for one lucky family! Refreshments for all.

Middle School Meetings Slated

Wednesday, March 26, at 7:30 p.m. the PSO will sponsor the last in a series of three informational meetings about the imminent changeover to a middle school system in Cohasset. Available to answer questions will be middle school faculty, athletic director, Clark Chatterton; and principal, Curtis Collins. This will be the last chance to discuss how the changeover will effect the children attending the middle school. Everyone is encouraged to attend this meeting and you do not need to have gone to the previous meeting.

This transition should be of special interest to all sixth and seventh grade parents. All Deer Hill and current junior high parents are encouraged to attend. The meeting will be held in the AV room at the Cohasset High School.

Bake Sale Saturday

The teen center will be having a bake sale at the Easter Egg Hunt at Deer Hill School Saturday, March 22, at noon. It's a great opportunity to buy last minute goodies that you need for your Easter celebrations. If anyone is interested in contributing a baked good, please call Rose Collins at 383-0760.

PAC Sponsors Workshop

The Cohasset Parents Advisory Council will sponsor a workshop on "Effective Communication" (between home and school) presented by JoAnn Wadkins from the Federation for Children with Special Needs. To be held March 25, 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the Cohasset High School, cafeteria. All parents, guardians, and teachers of special needs students are encouraged to attend. For more information call the P.A.C. chairperson Kim Maynard at 383-2707.

School Council Elections

Each of the three public schools in Cohasset have a School Council made up of the principal, teachers, parents and a community representative. The councils are charged with formulating a school improvement plan, and meets monthly. Parent representatives are elected for two-year terms by the parent body for each of the schools.

Anyone interested in serving as a parent representative should submit their name and a paragraph about themselves and their interest in serving on the Council to the PSO Nominating Committee, C/O Sarah Markert, 11 Linden Circle, no later than Tuesday, April 1. The election is April 10 through 17.

All parents who will have children at the specific school for the two-year school period, 1997-1998 are eligible to serve on the School Council. If you have questions about the process or would like to learn more about the positions, call a member of the Nominating Committee: Sarah Markert (6124), Grace Evans (1163), Kathleen Horigan (6690), Tomi Bukowski (6771), Sarah Pease (1406) or Rosemary O'Connell (6562).

Honor Society Welcomes New Members

The Cohasset High School National Honor Society recently held an induction ceremony and dinner at the Cohasset Lightkeeper's Residence attended by the NHS members, inductees and their parents.

Guest speaker for the evening was High School Principal, Curtis Collins, who congratulated the students and commended them for their general excellence in academics, character and leadership. Mr. Collins and Mr. Paul Nakiewicz, the NHS advisor, then proceeded with the ceremony of installation of the 1997 officers and induction of the new members.

The newly-elected officers are: Kathleen Fitzsimmons, President; Kelley O'Donnell, Vice-President; Rebecca Jenkins, Secretary; Alison Kinchla, Treasurer.

Second year seniors Kathleen Fitzsimmons and Rebecca Jenkins helped to welcome the newly elected seniors and juniors:

Seniors: Rachel Begley, Burke Davis, Erica Hettstrom, Karen Niessink, Kelley O'Donnell, Justin Buckley, Monique DeVoe, and Jacqueline Hurley;

Juniors: Christopher Lesniewski-Laas, Kathleen Buckley, John Flanagan, Patrick Hurley, Sarah MacDonald, Andrew Ross, Jane Flaherty, Amanda Gontarz, Alison Kinchla, Lauren Dooley and Aaron Sawchuk.

Pilgrim Arena Offers Scholarships

Applications for fifteen, $1,500 scholarships are available (starting Friday, Feb. 14) at the Pilgrim Skating Arena, 75 Recreation Park Drive in Hingham.

This is the 24th consecutive year that the Pilgrim Skating Arena is awarding college scholarships to area high school seniors planning to further their education.

Common causes of red flags for the IRS

By Amy K. Barrett
WORTH MAGAZINE

Are you one of those taxpayers that can't relax after they've filed their tax forms? You worry that you've put your business expenses in the wrong column or that you've used the wrong form.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

And so you spend the weeks following the deadline in agony, waiting for the IRS to fine you for a mistake, or even worse, to audit your records.

Checking your tax returns for a few common mistakes can reduce your chances of getting audited — and could help you to sleep better. Here are some caveats from accountants who are familiar with what sends up red flags for the IRS.

If you are self-employed, you should be on your best behavior. Accountants say the people most likely to be audited are those who work for themselves because the line between business deductions and personal expenses can get murky.

If you work at home, for example, the IRS wants to make sure you don't get overzealous about the amount of rent you deduct as a business expense.

"A write-off of 20 percent or more (of your rent) could raise some ire at the IRS," said Eric Lawrence, an accountant at Gelman, Rosenberg, and Freedman in the Washington, D.C., area. Don't be unreasonable; don't count the kitchen — where you procrastinate and eat chips — as part of your home office space.

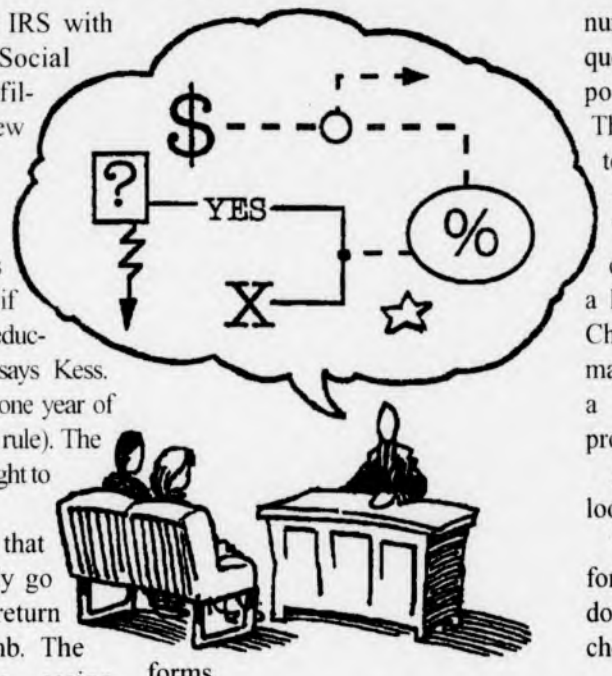
Another common error of the self-employed is neglecting to pay the self-employment tax on Schedule SE, says Sidney Kess, an attorney of law in New York.

Let's say, though, that you've done all of the above correctly, but haven't made a profit for at least three of the five years you've been working for yourself. If you haven't thrown in the towel by then, the IRS labels your endeavors as a hobby, not a business.

This means that you can no longer write off your related expenses on Schedule C or F. At best, you may be able to deduct the business costs under miscellaneous expenses on a Schedule A — a more difficult deduction to qualify for, because the costs must total 2 percent of your adjusted gross income. (If your business has anything to do with horses, you only need to turn a profit in two out of seven years). If you are employed by someone other than yourself, the miscellaneous expense column would be the place to file business-related expenses for which your employer didn't reimburse you.

Sometimes taxpayers erroneously file those costs as independent business expenses on Schedule C or F (perhaps in order to avoid the 2 percent requirement).

While the IRS pays special attention to whether deductions are legitimate, it also stays alert for special taxes often overlooked by taxpayers; those other than income and capital gains.



For example, people who dip into their retirement accounts before the age of 59-1/2 (the earliest one can withdraw from 401(k) and IRA accounts without incurring a penalty) must pay a 10 percent tax on the withdrawal when they file.

Some taxpayers assume they are only liable for income tax on the funds withdrawn prematurely. Form 5329 should be used to note the penalty.

And here's a good thing to know when filing 1997 taxes: Starting this year, those who make early withdrawals to cover medical expenses that are not reimbursed by a health care company won't have to pay the penalty tax.

If you use that money for a house, however, you would still owe the government.

Another potential tax quagmire involves your children. Some taxpayers fail to supply the IRS with their dependents' Social Security numbers when filing for deductions. A new tax provision has made this a stringent requirement.

"If you don't list a child's Social Security number or if you list a wrong one, (the deduction) may be disallowed," says Kess. (Children who are less than one year of age are the exception to this rule). The oversight could forfeit your right to get a tax break.

This is not to suggest that the IRS will automatically go over your individual tax return with a fine-toothed comb. The department's computers assign points to the answers given on tax forms.

The computer assigns higher numbers to those entries it finds questionable, and then adds up the points to achieve a total sc[illegible] Those individuals with the highest totals are given a closer look and are often audited.

The caveats we've mentioned are often the hot buttons that give you a higher score and greater notice. Chances are, though, that a simple mathematical error will trip you up; a mistake that probably won't prompt the IRS to initiate an audit.

And beware that you don't overlook the simplest requirements.

"People don't sign the return; they forget to," says Kess. "And they don't include the money order or check."

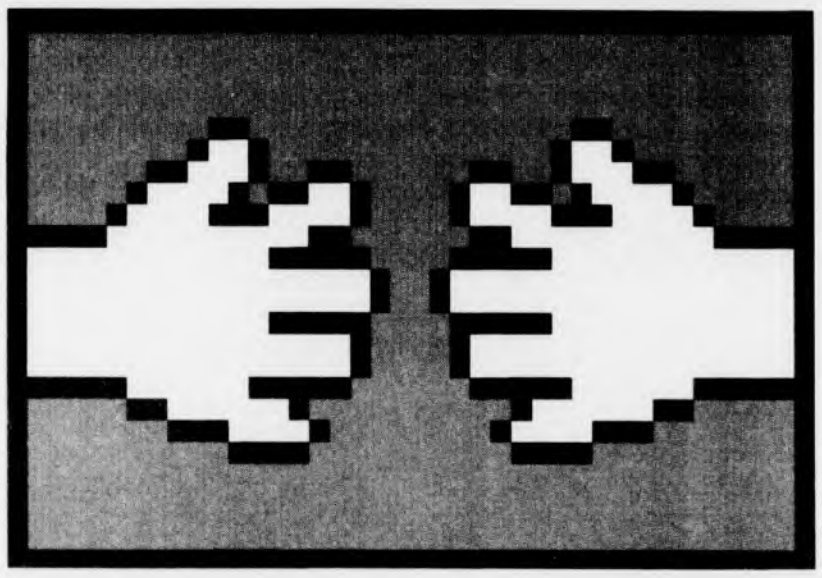
Financial planning for senior citizens should begin early

By Samuel J. Liang

The American population is aging at an ever-increasing rate. Every day, more than 5,000 people turn 65 years old; in 10 years, there will be more Americans over 65 than teenagers.

Happily, health and medical advances in recent years help make it possible for people to enjoy productive, vigorous lives well past 65 years of age. But inevitably, time takes its toll.

The wise people among us are those who recognize that they must plan for what will happen, not simply for what they wish would happen.



Most of all, they know that sound financial planning for the future can lessen any burden on their family and loved ones.

In financial matters, just as with your health, there's no time like the present to start taking positive steps of action. It surprises many people — too often, the shock comes too late for them to do anything — that Medicare is a health insurance program, not nursing home insurance. In fact, Medicare pays only for the first 100 days of nursing home care. Otherwise, according to federal government regulations, Medicare pays medical care — and only 80 percent of costs.

(Samuel J. Liang is a registered financial consultant with New England Advisory Group, Newton)

Hernan Salon Staff Attend Beauty Show

The staff of Hernan Salon recently returned from the International Beauty Show in New York, where they spent the weekend mastering the latest in hair styles, coloring and techniques. This show is the largest of its kind, offering seminars taught by professionals from such companies as Vidal Sassoon, Paul Mitchell and Matrix.

Hernan and his staff participate in this international event every year in order to be at the cutting edge of all the newest hair trends. The knowledge gained will benefit clients with the most up-to-date looks of 1997. Hernan Salon is located at 25 S. Main St., Cohasset.

For a free consultation, call (617) 383-1490.

Cohasset Harbor Travel at Shaw's

Cohasset Harbor Travel will be moving into the new Shaw's Plaza in April. The travel agency was inadvertently left off a list of shops (named in a recent article that ran in the Cohasset Mariner) that will occupy the retail spaces created in the new plaza which is under construction.

Palm Sunday Organ Recital

As part of its Music at St. Stephen's Recital Series, Max Miller, chairman of the organ department at Boston University, will present an organ recital Sunday, March 23, at 3 p.m. Featured composers will include Bach, Widor, Mendelssohn and Samuel Barber.

Dr. Miller is past dean of the Boston Chapter of the American Guild of Organists and has recorded for both Boston Records and the Musical Heritage Society. Currently he is organist at St. John's United Methodist Church in Watertown.

The church, located at 16 Highland Ave. in Cohasset, has handicap access and plenty of parking in the village lot. For information call (617) 383-1083.

Cohasset Rotary Club Phone Books

Deadlines for the Cohasset Rotary Club 1997 phone book is April 1. The Cohasset phone book is a service provided to the community by the Rotary Club. All proceeds from the phone book are used for scholarships for Cohasset High School seniors. The Rotary Club also supplements the fund and accepts donations from the Cohasset Community.

If any residents or businesses would like add or change any information currently in the book or if they would like to make a donation, please call Ed Fox at 383-6411.

Cohasset Rotary meets Mondays at 6:30 p.m. at the Light Keepers Cottage and Hall. If you are interested in finding out more about Rotary or would like to address the membership of rotary, please sent a note to President. Cohasset Rotary Club, P.O Box 36, Cohasset 02025.

Cohassetopoly is Coming

Atlantic City is not the only ocean town to be put on a game board. You will be playing this famous game with familiar names from Cohasset just months from now. All merchants and businesses, take a CHANCE, and watch for a great advertising opportunity in your near future. More information will follow in this paper and the mail.

"The Junior Gardeners" of "The Community Garden Club of Cohasset" are busy planning this project as a fundraiser to create more scholarships for the students of this town. These children are excited and hope the people of Cohasset will be as excited as they are. The games completion date will be in August and will be ready for sale in September.

Mad Hatter Tea Party

The white rabbit may be late, late, late for a very important date, but kids of all ages will want to be on time for this year's South Shore Community Center Nursery School Mad Hatter Tea Party...an unbirthday party celebration, March 23, 1 to 3:30 p.m., at the South Shore Community Center.

Party activities and games galore, including pin the smile on the Cheshire cat, family bowling, a giant teacup coin toss, Matt Hatter party hats to make and wear, edible necklaces, windstreamers and decorate your own cupcakes.

And since no party would be complete without refreshments, there will be a giant "unbirthday" cake for all to share, coffees, courtesy of Quikava, hot dogs and chips, and homemade baked goods.

Admission is $5 at the door per child. Accompanying adults are invited to attend for free. All proceeds benefit the programs and scholarship fund of the South Shore Community Center Nursery School.

For more information, call 383-0036.

Advisers: Town Should Not Subsidize Sewer Projects

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

The advisory committee voted 6-1 Tuesday night to change its position on the Central and North Cohasset sewer projects.

The committee's new recommendation is that the town should support both projects without a 50 percent reimbursement for users in the program. However, the committee will still support a Proposition 2-1/2 override if the article is approved at town meeting so that the voters can make the final decision.

It is expected that the sewer articles will be addressed at opening session of town meeting on Saturday at Cohasset High School.

Last week the committee supported article five on the special town meeting warrant, which asks voters to approve the Central Cohasset sewer project with the town paying half the cost of the project. A second motion in the article asks voters to pay half the

Town Meeting Starts Saturday

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

Sewers and the possibility of switching to a town manager are the hot topics before Saturday's annual town meeting.

Also there's the Lobster Lab proposal for the Hagerty House and no doubt a few surprises.

The town meeting is scheduled for 10 a.m. Saturday at the Cohasset High School gymnasium. A quorum of 100 registered voters is required before the meeting gets underway.

But Town Moderator George Marlette doesn't expect a problem with reaching a quorum and will start the meeting promptly.

In the interests of time, speakers will be limited to 10 minutes the first time they speak to an issue and five minutes the next time.

There are about 30 articles before the annual town meeting and about 20 in the special town meeting which takes place within the annual and focuses on items of business that must be paid for with this fiscal year's funds. The new fiscal year starts July 1.

Boy Scouts will provide hot dogs and

Train Delayed but Not Dead, MBTA Officials say

By Alice C. Coyle
COHASSET MARINER

It may not be rolling into town in this millennium, but MBTA officials promise the Greenbush train is coming to the South Shore.

Residents and town officials up and down the 17.7-mile Greenbush rail line had mixed reactions this week to the news that the train project could be off-track by as much as two years.

Delays in environmental review and slow moving negotiations with the communities along the line are to blame for the hold up, T officials said last week.

While the the two other Old Colony lines — Plymouth and Middleboro — are still on schedule to roll in September, the Greenbush line will not meet its 1999 completion deadline.

"This is why we separated Greenbush out of the project. We

Cohasset's Week

Snow Removal Budget in Black

DPW Superintendent Harold Litchfield reported this week that there is $3,195.24 left in the snow removal budget out of a total of $45,170. Litchfield said he is still waiting for the bill from one outside contractor.

Although there was little snow this winter, there were a lot of icy conditions and the trucks went out many times to salt and sand, the DPW office said.

Soccer Storage Shed Approved

Selectmen approved a request from the Cohasset Soccer Club this week to construct a 10x26 foot shed on Milliken field to store flags, cones, balls, and field-lining equipment.

In a letter to selectmen, Paul Cotter, David Buick and Larry Shultz of the Cohasset Soccer Club, said the building would be aesthetically pleasing and be situated on the Bancroft Road side of the field.

The structure will be inside the fence and separated from the road by both the fence and line of trees to the left of the entrance to the field. The soccer club will be responsible for all security, maintenance and upkeep of the building, which will have a shingled roof and clapboard or shingles on the exterior walls.

Milliken Field is the site of the vast majority of soccer games and practices, the men wrote.

Parking at Hagerty House

Building Inspector Robert Egan reported this week that the proposed Lobster Lab use of the Hagerty house would require between eight and 12 parking on-site parking spaces.

"Before any permits are issued, the exact number would have to be ascertained and the owner would have to demonstrate that the required spaces are available," Egan wrote in memo to Murray Campbell, president of the Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation.

The Lightkeepers is a non-profit group which renovated and manages the Lightkeepers Residence on Government Island. The organization would like to lease the Hagerty House from the town, and fix it up so it can be used as a "Lobster Lab," a marine research and educational center.

The town owns the house and the 2.2 harborfront acres that it sits on.

Campbell pointed out that the parking spaces can be "shared amicably" with other users.

"As we have stated before, Lab activities will be curtailed on summer weekends or at any other time when heavy use for boat trailer parking is anticipated. Because parking spaces that are designated on paper as 'Learning Lab lots' will be unused by the Lab on such occasions, then boaters certainly will be able to use them," Campbell wrote.

"We have no intention of fencing off the assigned spaces or otherwise denying them to other users, and the lease could so state."

Town meeting voters will decide this week on the lobster lab proposal for the Hagerty house.

Citizens Needed for Town Boards

There are three vacancies on the Greenbush mitigation committee; two on the mosquito control committee; four on the sidewalk study committee and seven on the town history committee which compiling information for the third volume of the town's history. Any citizens interested in serving on these boards should call the selectmen's office at 383-9900.

Boston School Committee Meeting

The school committee will hold a meeting at Roxbury Community College next month for the benefit of the school system's Boston parents.

Details about the meeting and transportation from Cohasset will be announced at the school board's April 3 meeting, School Committee Chairman Ralph Kidder said last week.

There are about 50 METCO students in the Cohasset school system. METCO (Metropolitan Council for Educational Opportunities, Inc.) is a state-funded, non-profit organization that places minority children in suburban schools.The program is in its 28th year in Cohasset.

RTF Closed on Easter Sunday

Sailing Trip Backed By School Board

Three Teachers to Take Part

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

An educational program in which teachers sail around the world and communicate back to their schools via satellite got a big boost last week.

The school committee pledged $7,500 of the $30,000 cost for three Cohasset teachers to participate in the project which will reenact the circumnavigation in "Voyage of the Spray," by Joshua Slocum in the 1800s. An additional $2,500 will be needed to pay for substitute teachers during the three weeks the teachers are away for their segment of the voyage.

Organizers explained that $15,000 is coming through a corporate grant and $2,500 can be saved by buying two, not three special computers, because one can be shared between two teachers in the same building. And the Cohasset Education Foundation, a private non-profit group, has pledged $5,000.

Teachers Robert Berquist, Ken Cisnaros and David Magnussen will make up the Cohasset team on the voyage.

Communications from the Spray can be down-loaded and recorded so they can be used during class time. The teachers pointed out that lessons in science, math, history, social studies and language arts can be tied into the project.

Deer Hill teacher Berquist said the $7,500 commitment is needed to reserve their slots. He said other sources of funding would be pursued to help offset the cost to the schools.

School Committee Chairman Ralph Kidder, who cast the sole dissenting vote, said while he thinks the program, which is teacher-centered, has merit he is concerned about the cost, that the proposal is not complete, and that it sets a precedent for "providing a professional development experience for $10,200."

But school committee member Rick Shea said teacher initiative and innovation should be rewarded.

The money was approved up front and is not contingent on fund-raising but with the understanding that organizers would look for other ways to raise the money.

Berquist, one of the first teachers to get involved, pointed out that because Cohasset is close to Salem where the Spray is being constructed, that local pupils could take part in refitting the vessel and participate in the "shake down" cruises.

The voyage will start from Salem this summer and finish in Rhode Island three years later. The project is being coordinated through the University of Alabama's Center for Communication and Educational Technology.

Rename the New School?

The school committee will ask the PSO and the school council whether or not there should be a process for naming the new school and if so, what should the process entail. This question is extended to the community for their suggestions. If anyone is interested in making a suggestion, they should drop a note in a suggestion box or call a school committee member.

Please keep in mind that they are looking for process suggestions not name suggestions.

Focus for Drug & Alcohol Committee

School Committee Chairman Ralph Kidder suggested last week that the Drug & Alcohol Committee focus on getting the community involved in education and awareness programs.

His remarks followed reports in the Cohasset Mariner that Drug & Alcohol Committee is pushing for the schools to adopt a DARE program and that the committee, itself, seeks direction. Cohasset schools have adopted PALS for Wellness, which also involves having a police officer lead some health education classes.

Kidder, a former member of the Drug & Alcohol Committee, said the group should work on programs such as Tag a Keg, SAFE HOMES, and Winterfest, a drug- and alcohol-free weekend, which are community based.

"The committee seems somewhat adrift," Kidder said, suggesting the drug and alcohol committee return to its mission of looking at ways to bring the whole community into substance abuse education.

School Committee member Maureen Jerz said she would represent the school committee at the next Drug & Alcohol Committee meeting on April 9.

Study to Examine North Cohasset Water Options

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

The possibility of the town initiating an eminent domain action against the Massachusetts Water Company to take North Cohasset water pipes is being delayed in favor of a study to explore all options.

The advisory committee is supporting an article that would provide $2,500 to study the problems in North Cohasset.

There are 340 North Cohasset residents using the North Cohasset pipes, which are owned by Mass.-Water. The town does not supply water to that small portion of town.

The plant, which is in Hingham, also supplies water to Hingham and Hull.

North Cohasset residents have complained for months that their water quality has dropped while their bills have more than tripled since the new Hingham plant was built.

More than 100 residents from Cohasset, Hingham and Hull marched on the statehouse last year to protest the Department of Public Utilities' support for Mass.-Water's rate increase.

Maria Plante receives water from Mass.-American and has been a vocal opponent of the company's practices.

"That plant was supposed to cost $13 million and demands by the town of Hingham pushed the price to $42 million," Plante said. "We had no input into that process, but we're subsidizing it."

Plante said Mass.-American has not acted in good faith with its Cohasset customers. She said the company was supposed to give customers 45 days to pay their bills, but only grants users a 15-day payment period.

Eileen Commane form Mass.-Water referred questions to company vice-president Keith Bossung to comment on the situation.

Bossung did not return phone calls.

Plante also criticized selectmen for failing to intervene when the DPU set Mass.-Americans rates.

Plante said the town is planning to build a new sewer stand-pipe and should use that opportunity to connect North Cohasset residents to the town's water.

"There is an article to build a new stand-pipe and they will have trenches dug," Plante said "They can place water and sewer pipes in the same trench as long as the sewer pipes are 16 inches below the water pipes."

She said that the water Commissioner Fred Koed has opposed the plan because he believes the town doesn't have adequate water pressure to include North Cohasset.

But Koed said the best way to deal with North Cohasset's water problems is to perform a comprehensive study.

"The town line runs down the middle of Hull Street," Koed said. "How can you take those pipes when Hull residents also use them. To really look at this further you need to look at things like Hull Street with the present Tutela Engineering study."

Koed said one solution is to construct a $1.5 million loop from Cedar Street, around Hull Street, down to west corner and on the Black Rock Beach. Then there would be an additional $1.5 million cost "to put everything else in," Koed said.

"Putting the loop in solves a lot of problems," Koed said.

Koed said this is one of the options the study must explore. Koed said Cohasset residents are also paying an assessment for the new plant, and they may have to continue to pay the capital assessment even if they get off Mass.-American water.

"There are a lot of legal questions and Hingham may not just let Cohasset people off the hook and absorb the capital costs," Koed said.

Selectman Peter Pratt said it all comes down to an issue of fairness.

"We have a moral responsibility to North Cohasset paid taxes into the town since the 1940s and 1950s to take the Hingham Water plant," Pratt said.

Pratt said the town has many water mains that extend toward North Cohasset and is in a good position to build a new distribution main to North Cohasset.

"Tutela has said in their study that if we ever want to extend municipal water service to North Cohasset we'll have to spend money on a new distribution main," Pratt said. "But the costs of taking North Cohasset pipes would be on top of the estimated $1.3 million to $1.7 million distribution main. Then you have to analyze whether it makes sense to take Mass.-Americans pipes or build your own."

Pratt said Mass.-American is well aware of what is going on in Cohasset. He said the study will examine all options, including an eminent domain taking of the plant by Cohasset, Hingham and Hull.

"No one is advocating taking Mass.-American or their pipes tomorrow," Pratt said. "But it's no secret to them what is going on."

WALKers Join the Fight Against MS

The National Multiple Sclerosis Society will kick off its biggest fund-raising event of the year — the MS WALKS — April 12 and 13, with people from all parts of the state joining in the fight against multiple sclerosis. Channel 5 meteorologist Dick Albert, the 1997 WALK Chair in the Commonwealth, expressed his appreciation to the people of Massachusetts walking to help those with MS.

MS, a chronic disease of the nervous system, wears away the control you have over your body. Symptoms may range from numbness to paralysis and blindness. MS is most common in young adults, usually diagnosed between the ages of 20-40. More than a third of a million Americans are affected by this disease.

The 1997 WALKS, sponsored by WCVB Channel 5, the Tab Newspapers, Mix 98.5 radio, Couples and Sunburst Holidays, will take place in 15 communities throughout the state April 12 and 13, including Cohasset.

This year, more than 6,000 individuals and 450 teams are expected to join the WALKS, helping to raise more than $600,000 to support the mission of the society: ending the devastating effects of multiple sclerosis. Teams come from corporations, small businesses, churches and civic groups, giving co-workers and friends a chance to have fun while helping those affected by multiple sclerosis.

For information on joining the fight against multiple sclerosis by walking, forming a team or volunteering at a WALK site, call the Massachusetts Chapter at (800) 493-WALK.

Benefit for Hull Lifesaving Museum

As America's oldest commissioned Naval ship prepares to sail for the first time in 100 years, her captain, Commander Michael Beck, will be speaking about the ship's illustrious past and her even greater future. Speaking to benefit the Hull Lifesaving Museum Inc., which has worked with Constitution crew members for two years teaching them open-water rowing and sailing skills, Commander Beck will address the audience in full 1812 dress uniform. A gracious and exciting speaker, he also will welcome and answer all questions regarding the ship and her upcoming historic sail in July, 1997.

Museum members are requested to make a minimum donation of $30 per person, non-members $35. Delicious hors d'oeuvres, wine, and soft drinks will be served. A final pleasure will be the view of the sun setting over Cohasset Harbor at 7:30 p.m.

Sewer

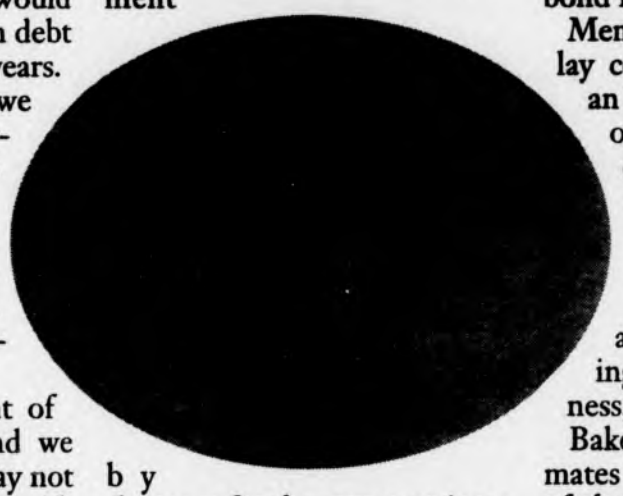
cost of the North Cohasset sewer project, approved by voters last year.

The entire cost of the project is estimated at $18.5 million. Voters would have to approve a Proposition 2-1/2 override to pay for the town's half of the project if town meeting approves article five.

The advisory committee changed its recommendation after receiving a grim financial forecast from the capital outlay committee.

"If the town pays for half of the sewer projects, by FY2001, we will be devoting 14 percent of our operating budget to capital needs," said capital outlay committee Chairman Mark Baker.



Baker said most towns devote five to seven percent of the total operating budget to capital items. He added that the new school project was already pushing capital spending to nine percent of the total budget.

"With the inclusion of the sewer bonds we would be at 85 percent of our statutory debt limit," Baker said. "That would leave us with $6 million in debt capacity for the next five years. What it means is that we wouldn't be doing anything for the next five years."

Baker said devoting too much money to capital projects could place a heavy strain on the operating budget.

"If we're at 14 percent of the operating budget and we want to clear snow, we may not have the money," Baker said. "You'll start impacting the day to day budget."

Baker said the capital outlay committee supported the second amended agreement for judgment, article four on the special town meeting warrant, and also supported the two sewer projects. But he said the capital committee could not support the 50 percent payment by the town for the sewer projects.

"We're not here to sell or not sell the sewer project," said capital outlay committee member Sam Pease. "We're here to protect the capital budget."

Pease said that if the town borrows too much money it could receive a lower bond rating which translates into higher interest rates on loans. Cohasset currently has an AA bond rating, Pease said.

Members of the capital outlay committee also predicted an intense fight on the floor of town meeting by residents who have paid taxes for sewers even though they are not in the system.

"Ultimately, people are going to react by saying it is an issue of fairness," Pease said.

Baker said the current estimates do not include the cost of the health board's $13 million On-site Wastewater Management Plan.

He added that the state could also delay its reimbursement for the school project and prolong the time a high percentage of the budget would be devoted to capital costs.

The advisory committee recommended that the capital committee support article five without the reimbursement at town meeting.

Selectmen have indicated that they may amend article five if it fails at town meeting to also cancel the North Cohasset project.

Advisory committee member Roger Whitley said it was the sense of both the capital committee and the advisory committee that the sewer projects should be approved even if the town doesn't pick up half the cost.

"The selectmen have got to know what is happening here," Whitley said.

Town Meeting

drinks during the lunch break at about 1 p.m.

Marlette expects Saturday's session to wrap up at about 5 p.m. and adjourn until 7:30 p.m., Monday.

Approval for the central Cohasset sewer project and a limited on-site waste management plan will be before the voters. Town meeting will also decide whether to switch to a town manager form of government (see editorial, page 10).

And the Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation, a non-profit group, hopes to persuade voters to lease the Hagerty house so it can be turned into a marine research and educational facility.

Lobster Lab and Planning Article Supported

The advisory committee voted Tuesday night to support the lobster lab for the Hagerty property, and a planning board article to permit special zoning in certain residential areas.

The planning board article would allow owners of nonconforming properties in residential areas to rezone the property to a form of limited residential zoning.

Moore said the new zoning would permit residential development with more stringent density restrictions.

Moore said the article was proposed to address a specific site: Quonset huts on South Main Street. He said the owner of the property wants to build 11 two-bedroom condominiums with a shared septic system.

"It's a tradeoff that lets the owner do more than is normally allowed and the town gets the mess cleaned up in the process," Moore said.

Moore added that there were about six other sites in town that could benefit from the bylaw in the future including the Edison property on North Main Street, Wayne Robbins' repair business and the Osgood School.

The advisory committee voted 7-0 to support the article as long as the conservation commission retained its regulatory powers.

The advisory committee voted 5-3 to oppose the demolition of the building on the Hagerty property and 5-3 to support the lobster lab.

Health board member Kevin Ulmer is the project's proponent, and he told the committee the town would receive a first-class marine biology educational facility at no cost. Ulmer said building improvements and operating costs would be financed through grants.

"At the very least, if it fails, the town will get the building back with a couple of hundred thousand dollars in capital improvements," Ulmer said.

Hagerty committee Vice-chairman Vee Roebuck said her committee's opposed the lobster lab after a recent vote, but did not take a formal vote on demolishing the building.

Hagerty committee Chairman Al Moore said the committee was severely divided on the building, the lobster lab and the appropriate use for the property. He said the selectmen have not taken a leadership role on the property.

Moore said that if town meeting rejects the lab and doesn't demolish the building, the committee will be right back where it started.

"If the articles don't pass we may recommend that the board of selectmen disband the committee and start over," Moore said.

Computer Curriculum for Elementary

Ruth Fennessey, curriculum coordinator, presented to the school committee recently an explicit breakdown of the computer curriculum for grades one through six. Emphasis was placed on the intent to teach students to use the computer as a tool. Linda Anderson, computer teacher at Deer Hill, offered specific examples of in class instruction.

Maureen Jerz, school committee vice-chairman, described the presentations as refreshing especially after being bogged down with budget discussions. All members expressed the desire to be back in elementary school to be able to experience the program.

Train

knew it was going to be the hardest of the three lines to pull off," said MBTA spokesman Brian Pedro. "We knew that 1999 was an aggressive date and it was going to be hard to make."

While rail opponents hope the delay will be permanent, most town officials working to mitigate local rail impacts, say they'll continue to work as if the train were still on schedule.

According to Pedro, the state has spent $14 million on Greenbush since 1984.

Dean Rizzo, a member of Cohasset's Greenbush Mitigation Committee said his board plans to continue working on the railroad with the MBTA.

"As far as our committee goes we're going to continue on as we have been on the assumption the train is coming,"said Rizzo, who noted that the delay will give Cohasset and the other communities some "breathing room" to look at impacts more carefully, and make better decisions.

It will also give the MBTA more time to do a thorough job planning the line, said Hingham Selectman Iris Daigle, an opponent of the rail.

"I want them to do all the testing they're supposed to do. I want it done well. If it takes two, five or even 10 more years, so be it," Daigle said.

Despite the delay, Pedro said state transportation planners remain committed to building the $215 commuter rail line that will connect the coastal South Shore to Boston.

"The towns should not think we're abandoning the project. We're committed to doing this project. I can't stress that enough," Pedro said.

In the planning since the mid-1980s, Greenbush and the entire Old Colony Railroad project is being designed not only to improve public transportation for South Shore residents but also to decrease air pollution. The MBTA missed the Dec. 31, 1996 deadline set by the federal Environmental Protection Agency to finish the Old Colony restoration, but was given an extension until 1999 to complete the three-pronged rail line.

A 1991 lawsuit filed under the federal Clean Air Act by the Conservation Law Foundation (CLF, a non-profit environmental law organization, gave state transportation planners an even greater incentive to restore commuter rail to the region. The CLF suit threatened to halt work on the Central Artery Project unless the increased pollution anticipated when that project is completed is offset. The Old Colony project is in fact, mitigation for the "Big Dig."

Now that it appears unlikely Greenbush will be completed by 1999, the MBTA will have to consider other ways to get cars off the road and automobile emissions out of the air, Pedro said.

"We'll have to reduce pollution in some comparable way," he said.

Increasing bus or commuter boat service to Greenbush corridor towns may be considered, he said.

"We'll find a way to do it," Pedro said. "We'll comply."

Pedro was hesitant to set a new deadline for Greenbush service to begin, but said if the final Environmental Impact Report is filed in the fall, ground could break on the line by the end of 1998. Construction is expected to take from 18 to 24 months.

Environmental concerns raised by the Army Corps of Engineers, the lead federal agency reviewing the project, has slowed the train's momentum. The lawsuit launched by Hingham last year and studies done to switch the train station location in Cohasset have also impeded the project's progress, Pedro said.

The MBTA continues to negotiate with Scituate on the purchase and use of part of Scituate's landfill, which is slated to close in 1998, for a layover facility and train station.

On-Site Plan Funding Dries Up

The health board's proposal to create an on-site wastewater management district for the town may not come to fruition because of funding problems.

Apparently the town learned it cannot borrow money at below market rate from the state and in tern lend it to taxpayers at the same low rate.

The $13 million health board program would have offered low-interest loans from the town to users to help upgrade their septic systems.

The health board proposal was to face town meeting voters on Saturday.

In a related matter, selectmen, the health board and sewer commissioners plan to meet Friday to iron out details on the waste water management plan that is included in a court order from the state.

The health board and sewer commissioners will try to reach agreement on which homes should make up the priority areas in the septic plan.

Those homes would be subject to stricter septic management rules than under Title V, the state's environmental code.

Ritts Honored at Kimballs Reception

State and local officials, family, friends and invited guests joined the Cohasset Mariner in honoring the Rev. Gary Ritts as 1996 Citizen of the Year at Kimballs by the Sea on Sunday.

For photos of the event, see page 13.

Ritts, who is the minister at the Second Congregational Church and brought the Appalachia Service Project to Cohasset, was chosen out of 14 nominations submitted by more than 30 local citizens for the annual award. ASP is a volunteer home repair ministry serving central Appalachia. Ritts started the program in Cohasset with a handful of volunteers nine years ago and helped it grow to the 84 who now go each year.

The Cohasset Mariner kicks the Citizen of the Year nominations off in November and once nominations close at the end of December a five-member panel meets to make the selection.

Cohasset Mariner editor Mary Ford presented Ritts with the Citizen of the Year award on behalf of Mariner Community Newspapers.

"Nearly every day until nominations closed at the end of December, I opened letters of nominations of local citizens by local citizens.

"Some nominees were present or past town officials and others were just ordinary folk who all had one thing in common — a love for Cohasset and a penchant for giving on themselves," Ford said.

Selectmen Chairman Merle Brown presented Ritts with a proclamation from his board; and state Rep. Mary Jeanette and Jeff Granatino, state Sen. Robert Hedlund's chief of staff presented Ritts with citations from the legislature.

Ritts' son, Steve, and wife, Judy, delivered moving tributes to Ritts.

This is the fourth year of the award. Prior year Citizens are Gerard Keating, Joseph Buckley and Dr. Robert Sceery, all of whom attended Sunday's festivities.

Village Train Petition Dismissed

Selectmen will ignore the petition recently presented to them by village station proponents because of numbers.

Selectmen Chairman Merle S. Brown said the 137 registered voters who signed supporting a village station was not significant enough. Another 290 signed supporting the hiring of a consultant to evaluate the station locations in terms of traffic, noise and other impacts.

"Essentially (the proponents of the village site) did not do much better than in the straw vote," Brown said.

Last fall, selectmen called for a non-binding "straw vote" on the station location in the lobby of the special town meeting which showed the Route 3A site was preferable to the village by a vote of 3-1.

Brown said he would have no problem with an evaluation of the station sites if the MBTA pays for it.

The consensus of the board is that it will not reconsider its decision to back the Route 3A site.

Families of Local Veterans Sought

We start out by asking you, dear reader, if you can help The Veteran's Memorial Committee Ñ they are looking for the families of two Cohasset men who died in the service in Korea and World War II. The committee has been unable to locate any family members and they are attempting to find them so that they can obtain a photograph of the men for their mural project. They are looking for: the family of Allen Buffum: his family lived at 291 South Main St. from 1910 to approximately 1958. Allen served in the military in World War I and died in 1942 during World War II as a merchant marine sailor.

And, the family of C. David Strout: His family lived on South Main Street, approximately number 353, from 1949 to 1958. David was killed in February 1952 in the Korean War. Their last known address was Sun City, Ariz., but they cannot locate Mrs. Strout today.

If you have any information about these families, please call Glenn Pratt at (617) 356-4400 during the day and in the evenings at (617) 383-0048, or drop him a note.

The Veterans Memorial Committee really wants to thank you in advance for any help that you might be able to give them.

The cast and crew of "The Twin Menaechmi" by Plautus, are to be congratulated for their fine performance recently! The performance was directed by Mr. Nigel Cracknell, who is an exchange teacher from Southend High School For Girls in England Ñ Mr. Tom O'Neil translated ideas from the Latin text Ñ the set design, artwork, costumes and props were done by members of the cast, who were as follows: John Crowley-Buck, Jerry Cogill, Jenny Chastain, Meredith O'Hayre, Holly Brennock, Michael Kearney, Kelly Tufts, Justin Golden, Grace Gardner, Stephen Reynolds and Alex D'Urso. Jacque Hurley was the assistant director. A most enjoyable time was had by all who attended.

James O'Sullivan and Stephen Reynolds have both had a lot to do with baseball already, and the season hasn't even started yet! To celebrate Jackie Robinson's 50th anniversary of being the first black man to play the game of baseball, they wrote an essay (in 1,000 words or less) describing how Jackie Robinson has impacted baseball. Hope we hear all about it!

Neal Finnegan, president and chief executive officer of UST Corporation in Boston, was awarded the 1997 Institute of Human Relations Award for his support of the principles that ensure the freedom and well-being of all people. An honor indeed!

Wendy Morgenstern, a student at URI (University of Rhode Island) is really leaving a legacy behind! She is the member of a group that are helping Belize (developing country located south of Mexico). The group, composed of eight graduate students and five undergraduates from marine affairs, civil engineering and biology, spent two weeks in Belize in January, collecting information and interviewing federal and local government officials, members of organizations such as the Audubon Society, local businessmen, builders and fishery personnel. They are now back at URI hard at work writing a costal primer that will serve as a reference book; another project involves the impact of a proposed large hotel located close to the northern end of a barrier reef, and a third project that will create a profile of the quality and quantity of fresh water on Kaye Caulker, one of the islands of Belize.

Wendy's name will be among the names that will appear on the completed reports, and we should all be very proud of her and her efforts!

The CHS class of 1987 is planning its 10th reunion for Saturday, July 26, at Kimball's. Please call Kim (Pattison) Ryan at (617) 545-1714 or Kerry (Rhodes) Tower at (617) 837-6363 if you have any suggestions or if you can help with addresses.

Sr. Barbara Barry, SND, principal of Notre Dame Academy, Hingham, announces the honor roll for the second quarter, and here are the Cohasset students who "made the grade:" Principal's List: Stephanie Canton, Julie Catalano, Jennifer Cellucci and Sally Hamill. Second honors were earned by Allison Berg. Congrats to all of you!

We are happy to report that Margaret Bates is home from her re-hab and doing very nicely! We are glad, she is a fine lady!

Kevin O'Donnell Jr., CHS Class of 1995, in his second year at Emerson College, has been named to the dean's list for the fall semester. Kevin is majoring in writing at Emerson. Good work!

Emily Kertzman is a first-grader at the South Shore Christian Academy and she made the honor roll for the second term. We all think you are wonderful, Emily!

That's the news; hopefully you will have some to tell us next week! Just give me a call!

Considering a Medicare HMO?

If you're a Medicare beneficiary, you've probably thought about joining a Medicare HMO.

Medicare HMOs offer many benefits, but they may limit your choices.

Before you join a Medicare HMO, you'll want to ask the health plan questions like, "Will I still be able to see my regular doctor?," or "Where will I be hospitalized?"

Give us a call if you'd like more information on how to select an HMO. We'd be happy to talk with you about your Medicare options and to send you free information.

A Yea for Town Manager

The school department has got one.

The superintendent of schools is essentially the "town manager" of the school department. In Cohasset, he handles a $7 million budget, three buildings, principals, department heads, teachers and so on.

So why doesn't the town have one, too?

A superintendent can hire and fire staff and reports to the school committee, an elected board, which has the time to set policy for the schools.

And we can't imagine Cohasset — or any school department anywhere — operating without the level of professional expertise provided by the superintendent of schools.

All the citizens' petition before town meeting this week is asking for, is a professional manager for the town side of local government. Someone to run the day-to-day operations of upwards of a $17 million business with nearly $40 million in capital projects.

A town manager will centralize and coordinate the executive authority of the town as a whole. The position will not usurp the power of the board of selectmen but will free selectmen up to set policy, look at long-range planning and focus on the bigger issues.

If you have a problem with traffic in your neighborhood or a telephone pole on your property — a town manager might be able to provide you with the proper direction to get the problem solved. He or she will also be accountable. As a result, you would probably not have to get on the agenda at a selectmen's meeting to address your problem.

How many times have the Lamberts Lane neighbors come before the board of selectmen to question what's been done to alleviate the traffic condition on their street ?

Why do north Cohasset water and sewer activists feel they have to attend every selectmen's meeting and ask the same questions week after week?

Why do more and more groups decide to take matters into their own hands through petitions to town meeting?

Frankly, many citizens have lost confidence in the selectmen who are so bogged down in the minutiae that it's becoming increasingly difficult for them to keep it all straight.

Don't misunderstand us. The selectmen are all bright, articulate and dedicated people. But it's clear they cannot do their job effectively without help.

Cohasset is a small town with big problems.

With the former, long-time town administrator resigning — the town has the opportunity to look at change.

We don't have to fire anyone or wait for a retirement. Both the job and job description is open.

Yet surprisingly, a majority of selectmen said this week the town ought to hold off switching to a town manager.

They want more time to study the proposal and think the town administrator position can be beefed up to take on more duties.

Frankly, we've sat through too many meetings in which a critical issue comes up at 11 p.m. when everyone is too tired to make any coherent points.

We say vote YEA on a town manager.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Hedlund: Don't Micro Manage Curriculum

Dear Senator Hedlund:

Your job is to legislate. Our job is to educate.

Instead of introducing a bill in the legislature of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to specify what should be taught in public school classrooms, I would appreciate you spending your time, energy, resources and talents on any or all of the following legislative priorities:

l) a bill to alter the funding formula of the Education Reform Act of 1993 so that the suburban communities you represent are treated more fairly and equitably in terms of the amount of state funding we receive;

2) a bill to address the long-term problem of funding for special needs education, which is (and always has been) a state mandate without sufficient state financial backing;

3) a bill to increase state funding for school construction, a problem which represents billions of dollars in unfunded liability nationwide and which poses severe financial hardships on the local communities you serve.

I happen to agree with you that the Emancipation Proclamation is an impressive historical document, although we might disagree about the reasons it was promulgated or its actual historical importance. But it isn't your job to micro manage the content of our curriculum. The taxpayers pay professional educators (and state bureaucrats) to make those decisions and elect School Committee members to oversee their implementation. If you have enough time on your hands to worry about the Gettysburg Address (and why not Roosevelt's radio address on the evening of Pearl Harbor or Chief Joseph's address to his people in the wintery mountains of the West?), then surely you have enough time to concentrate on the real educational issues for which the people of your district elected you.

Ralph D. Kidder, Chairman
Cohasset School Committee

Ed.'s note: Mr. Kidder provided a copy of his letter to Sen. Robert Hedlund to The Mariner for publication.

Question of the Week

The following candidates responded to last week's question:

'What is the biggest challenge facing the board you would like to represent? How will you make a difference?'

SELECTMAN/Alex Koines

Town government with a $17 million budget can no longer be run efficiently or economically by our elected, appointed boards and volunteer boards. I support the town manager form of government that 72 other towns in the commonwealth have already adopted.

A Town Manager form of government would transfer the financial powers of the selectmen to a more qualified professional with in-depth knowledge of Massachusetts laws, experience in town government, capital programs, contracting, municipal infrastructure, and water and sewer projects. As well-intentioned as our boards are, they lack the public administrative experience and knowledge of a professional town manager.

The property tax and debt service in our town has risen dramatically in the last few years and will continue to grow under our present system of no accountability. We cannot afford this. Every tax dollar collected must be used to its greatest benefit with no mistakes. I do not want a single retired citizen, young family or anyone else to be forced out of town because they cannot afford taxes driven out of control by those without the necessary expertise.

I support the town manager article at the upcoming town meeting. If it is not accepted, I will call for a charter commission which would continue to work toward obtaining a professional manager for our town. With a potential $45 million in capital expenditures and cost overruns, it is a necessity. Professional management is our most important challenge and I will work to that goal.

SELECTMAN/Wigmore Pierson

The most significant challenge facing the board of selectmen is that of regaining the confidence of Cohasset citizens as a deliberative and yet decisive body, which both listens and hears all citizens' concerns and then acts decisively to address the pressing issues before the town in a fiscally responsible way. In short, the challenge of leadership.

In addition, a perception exists that the board has not always asked tough enough questions of petitioners in order to elicit specific information to reach the most informed decisions in a timely manner.

Also, too often in recent years, too many major projects are presented at town meeting at the last minute requiring major commitments of financial and other resources, causing a significant impact on the tax rate, while at the same time citizens have been told they must vote "yes" or be condemned to eternal purgatory.

As a long time business owner, president of a financial holding company and career counselor, I believe I would bring to the board, a unique blend of listening skills, a sense of fairness and a sense of the importance of fiscal responsibility in representing all the taxpayers of Cohasset.

And finally, consensus building and accessibility to all citizens are extremely important to me. It is too easy to develop a sense of one's own importance on any board but especially one which is the highest office within the collective gift of our fellow citizens. I would work very hard to avoid this malady of arrogance, which too frequently overcomes elected officials.

SELECTMAN/Diane C. Sullivan

Our biggest challenge, as selectmen and as residents concerned with the future of our town, is to move immediately toward greater efficiency and professionalism in our government. Twenty years ago as a new resident from Hingham, I would have thought it inconceivable that Cohasset would employ a town manager.

Times change and so must we. Cohasset is today a municipal corporation with a $17.89 million annual operating budget. Additionally, we have before us significant authorized and proposed capital spending projects for our new elementary school, municipal sewers for two districts and septic management for non-sewered areas. These projects alone reach a total of $43 million.

Today it is inconceivable to me that Cohasset can proceed without a town manager. I endorse and fully support the town manager article at the annual town meeting. I thank the citizen proponents of the article and the town government structure committee for bringing their detailed proposal forward at this critical time.

Dedicated as our officials may be, governing is complex. While in the past I would join many in seeing a town manager as a threat to our cherished small town values, I now think our town government assisted by a town manager is the best way to preserve the quality of life and open democracy we all find in our town.

How will I make a difference? I will be an advocate for more efficient and professional government for Cohasset. We can no longer say, "Let's just think about it." We must be decisive and move forward.

SELECTMAN/Tom Callahan

The board's greatest challenge is in leading us through a difficult period resulting from the major capital projects undertaken and still ahead, the resulting impact on taxes, and the divisions in our community they have caused.

Our current situation demonstrates the need for sound planning and management. We need professional town management and specific project managers/ombudsmen. Most important, the town needs a master plan — a means for looking ahead, setting our priorities and knowing what we want to do and how to get there. The selectmen, as the executive authority of the town, must take the initiative and exercise their managerial authority to bring about proactive planning and coordination between all departments.

The Selectmen also must lead in ending growing frictions apparent in this and last year's major project debates. We must ensure open lines of communication with the town. In my eight years on the conservation commission, I have been most proud of the fact that with numerous views represented on a given project, often strongly-held, we routinely achieve unanimous votes with no appeals. We find a way to achieve consensus, and it is that model of governing I wish to bring to the board of selectmen.

I also believe I bring to the table from my years of town service and my professional life a firm understanding of the issues now facing the town, experience in dealing with complex legal and regulatory issues, and an aptitude for dealing with the managerial tasks that lie ahead.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/Joe McElroy

I believe our biggest challenge is to update and make a five year strategic plan that is a blueprint for progress and totally integrated with a five-year financial plan. An integrated strategic/financial plan will greatly expand opportunities for the school district to get a greater share of local aid (of local communities, only Bridgewater, Norwood and Raynham, receive less).

A five year strategic/financial plan will avoid situations such as currently exist wherein resources were largely wasted on a 1993 technology plan that has been mostly ignored. Now, a "crash" plan is being assembled to meet a June 30 state mandated deadline. In the meantime, many communities have approved technology plans making them eligible for state assistance, for example, Rockland, Norwell and Scituate.

My professional career has focused on the planning and budgeting process. I hold a master of education degree, and have been an adjunct professor at Bridgewater State College as well as a course director and instructor of the year. I am certified in software analysis and design, purchasing and inventory management; skill sets that are needed on the school committee. My leadership in the volunteer restoration of the Lightkeeper's residence evidences my ability to "make a difference." Gerard Keating has commended me as a "worker, knowledgeable." Eric Orsini, former Assistant Secretary of the Army, complimented my implementation of the Department of Defense bar code technology program by citing my "...strong leadership and consistent direction..." I will act, rather than react.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/Kathy Ofsthun

My name is Kathy Ofsthun, and as a candidate for school committee, I think that the biggest challenge facing Cohasset's School Committee is the inclusion of all citizens at our schools and improved communications to non-parents.

In Cohasset, as in any town, the most significant portion of the town's budget is for the schools. Certainly reason and a group of realtors will convince you of the correlation between the quality of the schools and the value of your home. But beyond that, the schools need to find ways of demonstrating to Cohasset's citizens the other values that they bring to the community.

I think there are a myriad of ways to strengthen the connection between the schools and the town. I advocate expanded community use of the facilities, for example the fitness center being developed at the high school, co-sponsored events with other groups in towns, and curricular tie-ins such as the lobster lab. The school committee has begun a campaign of improving communications with many groups in town, and I would energetically contribute to the expansion of their plan and its implementation.

My business background is in both finance and marketing. I am a C.P.A. and more recently had a business partnership in strategic marketing consulting and market research. I think this unique combination of skills has provided me with the means to understand the fiscal needs of the town and the schools and the ability to effectively communicate with the various constituencies.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/Susan Turgiss

The challenge of today's school committee is to provide an excellent education for all students within the increasing demands of accountability by education reform, parents and taxpayers.

Phases of the Education Reform Act related to increased instruction time, teaching of core subjects, professional development, proficiency testing and site based management have been effectively implemented by the school committee and administrators. We must remember that education reform is still in progress and the committee will remain accountable for proposed changes in curriculum and measurements of academic achievement. The school's technology plan will soon be submitted to the state. The committee will oversee implementation of this important plan which integrates technology and learning. I believe that Cohasset's educational vision should well exceed these state mandates.

Fiscal accountability must go hand in hand with educational excellence. Cohasset is facing a major responsibility for the construction of a new school. The school committee should continue to work closely with building committees and communicate progress effectively. Facilities maintenance plans should be monitored carefully. Limited funding for programs, including special needs, presents a challenge for smaller communities like Cohasset. The committee should support efforts to increase the state's financial responsibility and explore resources.

I believe that my educational background and experience in public schools and business will help achieve our educational vision. My working knowledge of education reform will bring insight and balance to the committee. I offer skills in communication, planning, and problem solving. I will be committed and accountable.

ASK THE SCHOOL COMMITTEE

Technology Committee Seeks Members

The Internet, the World Wide Web, hardware, software, local area networks, wide area networks: Who could have imagined just a few short years ago that our everyday vocabulary would include such technical language or that our schools would be faced with the daunting task of preparing children to live in such a high-tech world? When it comes to "technology" in the schools however, the future is now.

As you may know, the Cohasset Public Schools developed our first multi-phase technology plan in 1993. This plan anticipated the integration of computers and other modern technologies with the K through 12 curriculum where such integration is useful in the delivery of education. In other words, we view the computer as one of the tools in a good teacher's tool kit, to be used when it helps achieve a particular educational outcome. This 1993 plan has not been fully funded, given budgetary constraints. However, we have made excellent strides in identifying appropriate "interfaces" between technology and our curriculum and, with the help of the Cohasset Education Foundation, we've increased significantly the number of computers available to children in labs and classrooms.

The Education Reform Act of 1993 requires all Massachusetts communities to prepare a five-year technology plan. This document is in the form of a grant proposal, with the Commonwealth offering $35,000 as an incentive for completion of the plan by July 1, 1997. A technology committee has been established to complete the Commonwealth's grant proposal and, more importantly, to formulate a new multi-year technology strategy for the Cohasset schools.

The technology committee, which includes administrators, teachers, students, a school committee member and community representatives, is seeking two to three more Cohasset residents with expertise in networking, work station applications or hardware/software decision-making in the private or public sector to help us devise our technology strategy. If you are willing to serve as an advisor to this committee, please call the superintendent's office, 383-6111.

Question of the Week

WATER COMMISSION/John McNabb

The greatest challenge facing water commissioners is to continue rebuilding the water distribution system as started by Fred Koed and the other commissioners. We must never again face the situation of the summers of 1994 and 1995, when many Cohasset homes were deprived of running water or effective fire protection. While the commissioners have solved the immediate problem that led to those losses of service, there is still much work to be done.

A second water storage tank is essential to provide the required system fire fighting capacity as required by fire safety and insurance rating organizations. There are still many miles of old water pipes in Cohasset which have not been adequately maintained, and which must be relined or replaced to enable the system to produce the minimally required 20 pounds per square inch (psi) of pressure everywhere in town.

The water commission also must continue the use of contractual services to run its operations, which has improved department finances and professional management. The town avoided an override vote this year in large part thanks to the water department, which continues to pay back its debt to the town.

I have more than 10 years experience in water supply issues, as a member of the town water resources protection committee, as one of Cohasset's representatives on the South Shore Water Supply Advisory Committee and as a legislative liaison for the state Dept. of Environmental Protection, where I helped pass many significant environmental laws, including the Water Management Act in 1985.

Next Week's Question:

• For selectmen candidates:
Do you agree with the current board of selectmen that the train station should be on Route 3A? Do you think the decision process was handled fairly?

• For school committee candidates:
There's a perception out there held by some that the schools aren't doing enough to combat drug and alcohol abuse among students. What do you think?

• For water commission candidates:
Underground sprinklers have put a drain on the system. Has anything been done about this? What do you suggest?

All responses must be received by noon Monday and may be sent by FAX to the Cohasset Mariner 741-2931 or dropped off at Cohasset News on Brook Street. Answers must be no more than 250 words.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

'What, Me Worry?'

To the Editor:

I am writing in support of the septic system maintenance plan advocated by the Cohasset Board of Health. As I understand it, the town will reimburse any homeowner one-half of the cost of system repairs up to a maximum of $20,000; this cost will be recovered through an increase in taxes to be paid by all homeowners living in Cohasset. In addition, homeowners will be required to have their systems checked annually and pumped periodically; this cost will be recovered through user fees based on water usage.

First, there is the issue of equity. I think that it's only fair that homeowners who have had the foresight to maintain and upgrade their septic systems should be made to subsidize those who have neglected to maintain their systems. Why should only a few – those who have failed to invest in maintenance and improvements — have to suffer the burden of reduced property values?

Also, the timing is superb. This will be the perfect solution to the impending "pay-per-bag" program at the recycling center. With the burden of care for septic systems removed from Cohasset homeowners, all of us can install disposal units to flush trash down our sinks, confident in the knowledge that the town will either pump it out or pay for the resulting repairs. We can adopt a "What, Me Worry?" attitude toward our carefully maintained septic systems.

I am eagerly anticipating the adoption of other tax-based programs in Cohasset. There are several additional opportunities to mandate homeowner warranties, paid for through an increase in taxes, on various systems that we previously had to worry about (and maintain) ourselves. Furnaces and roofs seem the next logical extension, but plumbing systems would also be a good bet. After all, isn't this the kind of thinking that made America great?

New Water Tank Location Explained

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Cohasset Board of Water Commissioners, our office is hereby responding to Mr. Edwin Pratt's March 14 letter, published in The Mariner March 20, regarding the siting of a proposed second water tank in the town. We sincerely appreciate Mr. Pratt's sharing his knowledge relative to the matter and fully agree that the construction of the second water tank is essential for the water system operation and is long overdue. As consultants to the town of Cohasset, Tutela Engineering Associates, Inc. did extensive hydrant fire flow and water main "C" testing. The results of this testing were used to develop a computer hydraulic model of the town's water system. Based upon this model, we are able to predict pressures in the water system under various water flow scenarios. Utilizing the results of the computer hydraulic model, our office determined that the best location for the new water tank is Bear Hill.

We have provided the following in answer to some of your comments:

1) As part of our water system study, four different water main routes for connecting a water tank on Scituate Hill to the distribution system were examined. Locating the new water tank at Scituate Hill instead of Bear Hill will increase the cost by 15 to 25 percent or $210,000 to $350,000 exclusive of legal and land acquisition costs.

2) The new tank on Bear Hill will be constructed outside the footprint of the old reservoir, as was the existing tank.

3) Borings must be performed at any tank site prior to design. We do not expect the foundation material at the proposed Bear Hill site to be different than what was encountered at the existing tank site.

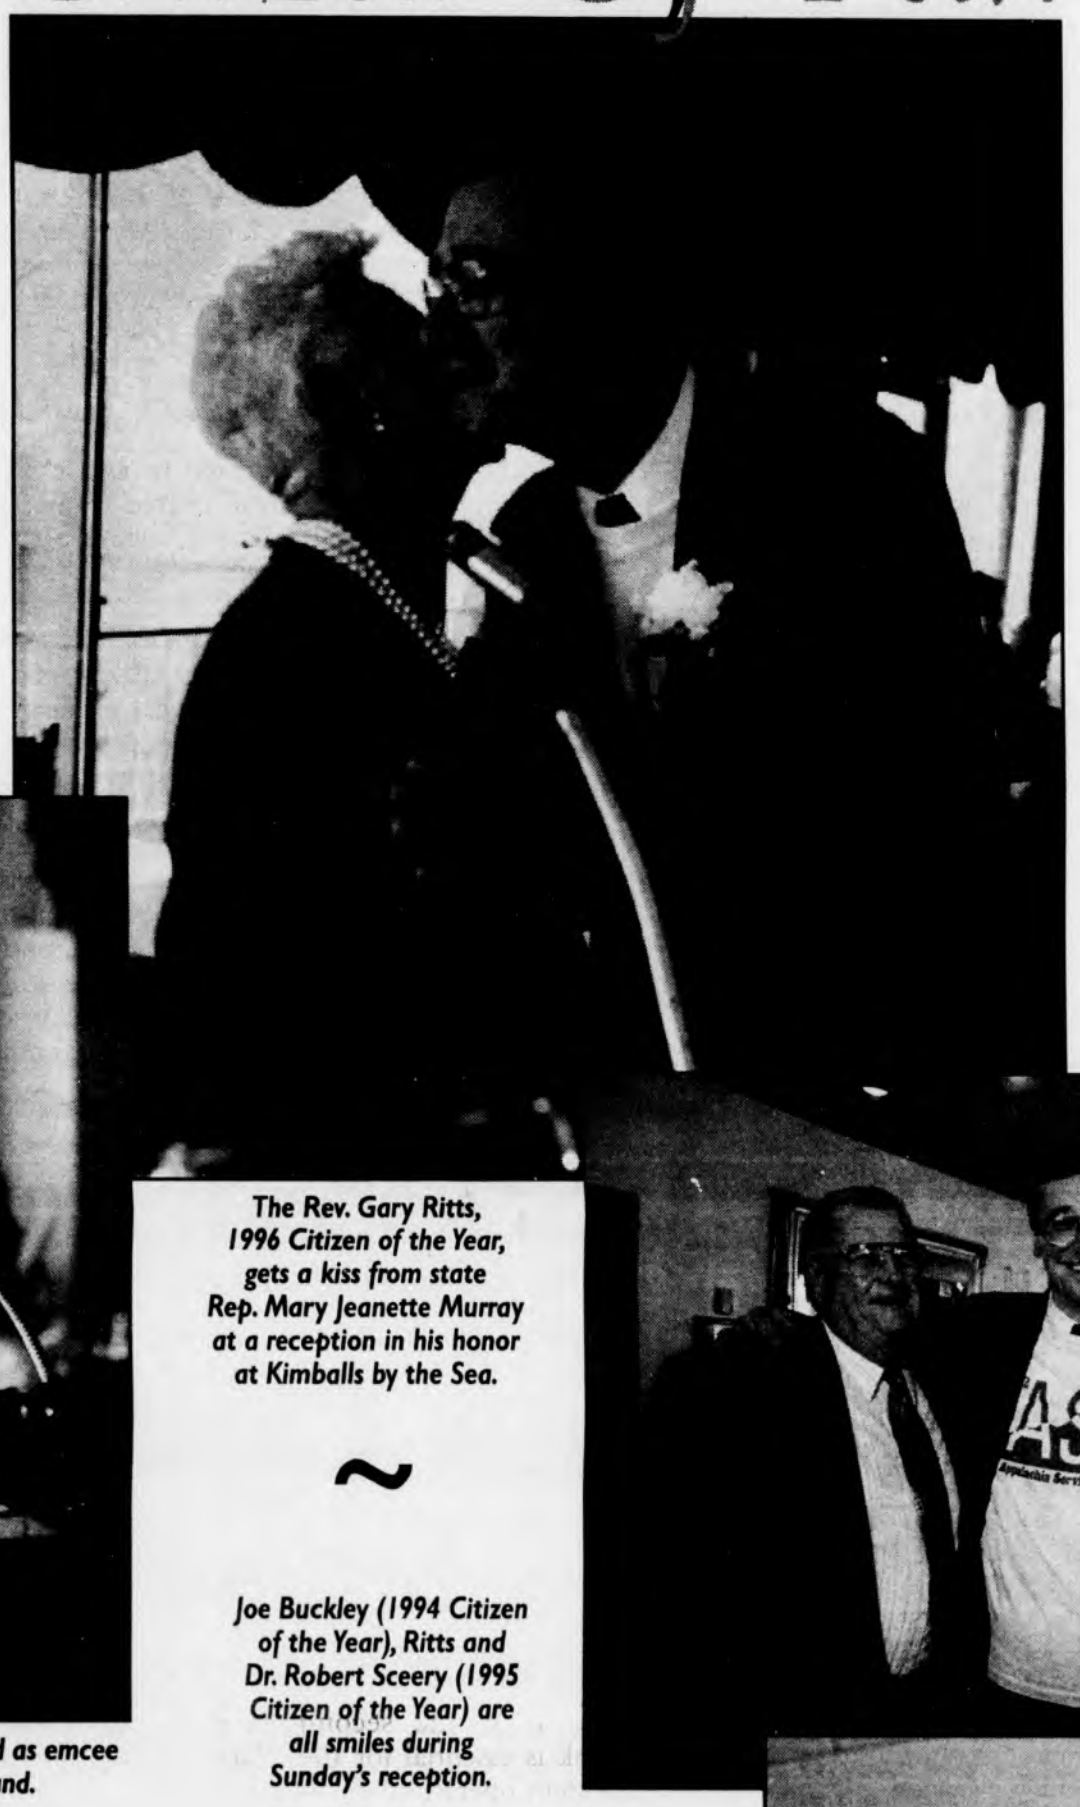
4) The Bear Hill location is in Central Cohasset adjacent to the greatest fire demands of the town. A Scituate Hill tank would be remote to the Central Cohasset area.

5) The Bear Hill location is directly served by two independent 12" water mains. One of the 12" mains is 100+ years old. This cast iron water main was found to be in excellent condition needing only cleaning and lining and valve and hydrant replacement. This work is scheduled for this summer.

6) The Bear Hill location is at the hub of the water system with distribution mains emanating to all extremes of the water system.

7) The higher elevation at Scituate Hill provides little to no advantage. The differential is about 10 feet between the two hills.

8) Both the Bear Hill and Scituate Hill sites would provide more than adequate fire flow capabilities to the Jerusalem Road area. The Scituate Hill site would maintain a slightly higher residual water pressure (about 5 percent higher) under fire flow conditions.



9) No new main is currently proposed for Route 3A north of King Street to the Hingham line. If there was a water main in this location, both the Bear Hill and Scituate Hill sites would provide more than adequate fire flow capabilities. The Scituate Hill site would maintain a slightly higher residual water pressure (about 5-1/2 percent higher) under fire flow conditions.

10) Both the Bear Hill and Scituate Hill sites would provide more than adequate fire flow capabilities to a possible future north Cohasset service area. The Scituate Hill site would maintain a slightly higher residual water pressure (about 4 percent) under fire flow conditions.

Kathy Ofsthun to Run for School Board

Kathy Ofsthun

It is an exciting time for Cohasset's schools, and it is my strong desire to play an active role in implementing the positive changes already envisioned and to lead a process of expanding our vision and setting new goals. Therefore, I am presenting myself as a candidate for the School Committee.

Many positive changes are already underway including block scheduling at the high school, the establishment of a middle school, and construction of a modern elementary school facility. These will require vigilant yet supportive oversight to ensure their success, and it is my goal to provide such attention.

Furthermore, I would energetically work to expand the communication efforts begun by the current committee members. For some problem-solving, I would employ the expertise of the school councils as well as Cohasset's talented parent resources. Related to specific curriculum, I would work to add world languages at the elementary level, ensure adequate keyboard training, and initiate programs for gifted students.

I have been active in the schools for several years, currently serving on the Parent School Organization as its President. My three sons attend the Osgood and Deer Hill Schools. I have a Bachelor of Science in Accountancy from the University of Illinois and graduate work towards an MBA a the University of Chicago. My years as a C.P.A. will lend a financial expertise to the school budget process. I also have many years of experience as a marketing consultant which will assist the committee in understanding the town's needs and in targeting their communications.

I would look forward to the opportunities and challenges a position on the School Committee provides. If you care to help, I welcome your support. Kathy Ofsthun, 45 Fair Oaks Ln., Cohasset, ph/FAX 383-9396. Thank you.

Turgiss is a Candidate for School Committee

Susan Turgiss announces her candidacy for the Cohasset School Committee. Susan's educational background includes a Master of Education degree from Northeastern University and a Bachelor of Arts degree from Bridgewater State College. She continues training at the post-graduate level.

Susan Turgiss

Susan has 15 years' experience as speech and language pathologist working in grades pre-kindergarten to 12th, with her most recent position being in the Rockland Public Schools. She has working knowledge of the Education Reform Act and its implementation. Susan serves as a community resource person in her field not only in the town of Rockland but also for the town of Cohasset. From 1992 to present, Susan has been a field supervisor for Emerson College training graduate students. Her business experience includes working in marketing for the Xerox Corporation and as configuration control analyst for the Northrop Corporation.
